Top Ten Car Care Do's That Don't Get Done

Why Skimping On Car Care Today Will Be Costly Tomorrow

By JOHN PAUL
AAA's Car Doctor

Your car needs an oil change or a tire rotation. It's one more chore on your never-ending "to do" list, and sometimes it just falls through the cracks.

Apparently, you're not alone.

Last year, vehicle inspection events uncovered a variety of maintenance issues that were well on their way to becoming real problems for vehicle owners. Described below are 10 examples of why following your car's recommended maintenance schedule is not simply a hassle, but rather a way to ensure your vehicle operates more safely, uses fuel more efficiently, lasts longer and retains its value for resale.

1. Tire Pressure

WHY: Over-inflated tires ride roughly and suffer premature wear at the center of their tread. Under-inflated tires decrease fuel economy, cause imprecise handling, suffer premature wear at the edges of their tread, and can overheat and fail at highway speeds. Tires typically lose about one pound of pressure per month through normal seepage, and as seasons change, tires lose or gain another pound of inflation pressure with every 10 degree change in outside temperature.

WHEN: Check the tire pressures (including the spare) at least once a month when the tires are cold. Always follow the inflation pressure recommendations in your owner's manual, or those on the tire information label that is located in the glove box, on a door jamb, or on the underside of the trunk lid. Do not use the inflation pressure molded into the tire sidewall; this is the pressure needed to achieve the tire's rated load capacity, and it may or may not be the correct pressure for your particular car.

2. Engine Air Filter

WHY: Your vehicle's air filter prevents dust and dirt from entering the engine. A dirty or clogged air filter restricts airflow and will reduce engine performance and fuel economy while increasing exhaust emission levels.

WHEN: Check the air filter every six months or 7,500 miles. Typically, your repair shop will inspect the filter at each oil change. You can check it by holding it up to a 60-watt light bulb. If you can see light through much of the filter, it is still clean enough to work effectively. However, if the light is blocked by most of the filter, replace it.

3. Battery Cables/ Clamps/Terminals

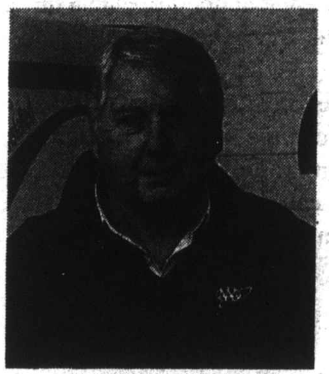
WHY: Power from the battery flows to the rest of your vehicle's electrical system through the cables, clamps, and terminals. If these components and connections become corroded or loose, your car won't have the power needed to start the engine and operate other systems.

WHEN: The battery cables, clamps, and connections should be inspected at every oil change. If there are signs of corrosion, or you notice other indications of electrical problems such as slow engine cranking or dimming headlights at idle, have your repair shop test the charging and starting system, and clean and tighten the battery connections as necessary.

4. Windshield Washer Fluid

WHY: Rain, insects, grime, and other debris on your windshield will compromise your vision if they cannot be removed by your windshield wipers. A supply of the proper washer fluid will help your wipers remove these contaminants effectively.

WHEN: Check your washer fluid reservoir monthly and more often when you use the washers frequently. Top it up with a washer solution formulated to aid in the removal of insects and other debris, and during winter, be sure to use a solution with antifreeze protection. Finally, test the washer spray nozzles for proper operation and aim.



JOHN PAUL

5. Engine Oil

WHY: Oil is the lifeblood of your engine. Without an adequate supply of clean oil, your engine will wear more rapidly, and could even seize and be destroyed. Oil doesn't freeze like water, but its viscosity (thickness) does increase as the mercury drops. Lighter grade oils reduce the load on your car's battery and starter, allowing more rapid cranking and starting. Lighter oils also reach critical engine lubrication areas much quicker than heavier oils, greatly reducing wear.

WHEN: Change your engine's oil and oil filter at the specified intervals, and follow the more frequent "severe service" recommendations if your driving habits meet any of the conditions described in your owner's manual. Always use the weight of oil recommended by your vehicle's manufacturer for the existing temperature conditions.

6. Windshield Wiper Blades

WHY: Windshield wipers are easy to overlook until you find yourself in a pounding rainstorm. If your wiper

Tickling Noise, Rug Remnants, Battery Chargers

Ask John Paul: AAA New England's Car Doctor

I purchased a new Infiniti G50 several months ago and the car has just about 1,600 miles on it. All of a sudden, car has a "beep" sound instead of a loud "honk." I took it to the dealer and the work order stated: found low horn inoperative due to break in ground circuit, re-soldered to correct concern. My question is, will this repair be permanent or should the harness have been replaced? I like my Q50 what do you think of the car?

I'm perfectly comfortable with soldering as a repair. A properly repaired circuit should be serviceable for the life of the car. Regarding the Infiniti Q50 there is a lot to like about the car. The performance from the 3.7 liter 328 horsepower V-6 engine is very good, the overall handling is sharp and the ride although firm and still comfortable. The Infiniti that I drove was loaded with electronic technology, which I found both delightful and a bit distracting. Overall I found the Infiniti Q50 to be a worthy competitor to the BMW 328 and the Lexus IS350.

My hardly used five-year-old Lexus RX 350 is extremely noisy for the first 10 minutes after a cold start. It sounds like an old car tappet or valve noise making this "luxury" vehicle sound like an old worn out car. Lexus says, "That's the way they all sound." I find this very hard to believe, as the noise was not there when the car was new but developed after about 8,000 miles. Not having a fix for this problem is like going to the doctor and being told you are just getting old and need to live with aches and pains.

Lexus has issued a technical service bulletin that describes a ticking noise. Have the dealer reference TSB number L-SB-0028-09. This bulletin describes a ticking noise from the variable valve timing area of the engine. As a warning-the repairs can be quite extensive and I guessing your Lexus is well out of warranty.

I recently came home to visit my parents and my dad was looking over my car and flipped out because I had cute rug remnants over the floor mats so they wouldn't get dirty. He told me that this was against the law and he threw them away Do you know of any such law?

There is no such law. Your father is relating to the issue with Toyota a few years back when there was concern that the accelerator could get hung up on the floor mats. Your father was just looking out for you give him a break.

Like many of your readers I have a car that sits for sometimes weeks at a time and then the battery goes dead. I don't have the ability to check a battery charger connected. Is there anything that I can do short of disconnecting the battery?

Some readers have had very good luck with solar battery chargers. Their battery chargers can be connected or plugged into the cigarette lighter plug (if it works with the key off) or hooked up to the battery. If the car is parked in the sun these little battery chargers generally produce enough current to maintain a fully charged battery.

I purchased a 1999 Mercedes SL in December 2003 and it now has only 57,000 miles on it. At my last service visit to the dealership it was recommended that replacing the tires would be advisable due to age not mileage. The tires may have been replaced when I purchased the car but I have never replaced them. I haven't driven the car much but now that I am retired I plan to use it more at least in the nice weather. What do you think of this recommendation and what would the Car Doctor do?

If this was my car and I planned to keep it and drive it, I would replace the tires. Although age of tires isn't always the best indicator of when to replace them at 12 years-old I believe four new tires would be money well spent.

I'm car shopping for a pre-owned all-wheel-drive or 4WD vehicle to replace my recently totaled Pontiac Vibe. I work in the city but have a ski house on the side of a mountain with gravel roads and have used studded snow tires on my cars for better traction. Now I am looking at pre-owned-two year old Subaru Outback or Honda CRV. I recently saw the commercials for the new Hyundai Tucson and road tested one and was quite impressed (but then again it was new). I do a lot of long distance driving on weekends so gas mileage is an important factor in my decision. I wasn't planning on a car purchase at this time and I'm looking for any advice you can offer.

Both the Subaru Outback and the Honda CRV are good cars and should be able to handle the type of driving that your lifestyle demands. Prior to buying any used car, have a thorough used car inspection performed, as good as these cars are, they can have problems. Regarding the new Hyundai Tucson, this in my opinion may be the best choice. The Tucson handles well, has a great warranty and gets is rated by the EPA at up to 33 MPG on the highway. Previous models of the Tucson handled well in winter and I would expect the newest model to perform at least as well.

I took my 2007 Toyota Corolla to a quick lube to get an oil change and they informed me that I need to replace my radiator and transmission fluids. Is this something I can do myself, should I take it to the dealer and is it actually necessary?

It is certainly important to change some of the vital fluids in the car as they age and breakdown. The coolant is certainly one of the most important and should be checked in your car every year and changed when it shows signs of age and can no longer protect the engine. The transmission fluid in your Toyota generally has a very long life but still should be inspected for both condition and level.

I have a question regarding the center bearing on my 2001 Subaru Forester. This is my winter "beater" so I don't drive it much. Recently when I took it out for a ride there is a "clunking" noise that's right under my shifter when I start out and shift from first to second gear. My mechanic said it was the center-bearing between the front and rear drive shafts. He also said the whole drive shaft needed to be replaced not just the center bearing. Is this correct? He also said it must be done buy a Subaru dealer and said that the part cannot be purchased anywhere else. Is this true as well?

The center bearing is not a serviceable item and it appears that it is only available from a Subaru dealer. Now certainly your repair shop could purchase the part from the dealer and install it.

blades are worn, cracked, or rigid with age, the wipers will not adequately remove rain, grime, and other debris that can obscure your vision.

WHEN: Check your car's wiper blades at each oil change or whenever they fail to wipe the glass clean in a single swipe. The life of a rubber insert is typically six to twelve months depending on its exposure to heat, dirt, sunlight, acid rain, and ozone. Streaking and chattering are common clues that the rubber is breaking down and replacement is needed.

7. Antifreeze/Coolant Protection

WHY: The primary task of an engine coolant is to transfer heat from the engine to the radiator where it is removed by the passing airflow. Modern engine coolants also prevent the cooling system from freezing or boiling, protect the engine and cooling system from rust and corrosion, and lubricate the water pump seals and other cooling system components.

WHEN: Check the coolant level at every oil change. With a cold engine, the radiator should be completely full and the coolant level in the remote reservoir should be at or above the "cold" level marking. Have the system flushed and refilled with fresh coolant at the interval specified in your vehicle owner's manual. This can vary widely, from every two years to more than 100,000 miles, depending on the coolant type used. Simple and inexpensive testers are available to check the coolant's level of antifreeze protection. Always top up the system with a 50/50 mixture of coolant and water to avoid altering the antifreeze level.

8. Tire Tread

WHY: The four points where the rubber meets the road are the only things that stand between you and an accident. In wet and snowy road conditions, having good tires with sufficient tread depth is crucial. Worn tires with inadequate tread are much more likely to hydroplane on wet pavement or lose traction in the snow, resulting in a loss of braking power and steering control.

WHEN: Check the tread depth of your car's tires whenever it appears low. Insert a penny upside down into a tire groove. If you can see above Lincoln's head at any point, replace the tire. Uneven or excessive wear of the tire tread may indicate the need for suspension repair or wheel alignment, both of which will extend the life of your tires.

9. Drive Belt Tensioner

WHY: One or more rubber drive belts transfer the rotation of the engine's crankshaft to various accessories that help your vehicle function properly. Belts that are too loose will allow slippage and reduce efficiency. Belts that are too tight can damage bearings and cause premature component failure.

WHEN: Drive belt condition and tension should be checked at every oil change. Many cars today have automatic belt tensioners that require no maintenance. On others, technicians must use a belt tension gauge to check and adjust the tension manually. To prevent being stranded by a broken accessory drive belt, have your car's belts replaced every four years or 60,000 miles.

10. Brake Fluid

WHY: The fluid in your car's brake hydraulic system transfers your foot pressure at the brake pedal into stopping power at the wheels. An adequate supply of clean brake fluid is absolutely essential for safe vehicle operation. Old, moisture-contaminated brake fluid, or a low fluid level that allows air to enter the system, can lead to brake fade or a complete loss of braking power.

WHEN: Inspect the brake fluid level at every oil change. If the level has fallen below the "low" mark on the fluid reservoir, it usually indicates major brake wear or a leak somewhere in the system; have the brakes inspected as soon as possible. Most vehicle manufacturers recommend that the brake fluid be replaced periodically to flush moisture and contaminants from the system. Every two years is a common interval; check your vehicle owner's manual for specific recommendations.

There is no question that preventative car care is the best way to protect both your safety and your investment in your vehicle.

Not only will better vehicle maintenance improve fuel economy, in most cases it also will protect you from budget-busting repair bills. And, your savings account isn't the only thing you'll protect by paying attention to your vehicle. A car that is in top working condition is much safer for you and your passengers.

Taking care of your car is important, but taking care of yourself should an emergency arise is even more vital.

To be a prepared driver, always equip your vehicle with an emergency kit that contains some or all the following items, depending on where you live and how far you travel off the beaten path:

- Jumper cables or jump pack
- Windshield washer fluid
- Coolant (50/50 mix)
- Wiper blades
- Light bulbs
- Hoses
- Belts
- Basic tools
- Tire pressure gauge
- De-icer for door locks
- Flares or reflectors
- Flashlight (with good batteries)
- Spare tire jack and tools, blankets, warm clothing, boots
- Folding shovel
- Traction sand
- Ice scraper
- Food that won't freeze
- First-aid kit
- Medication you need regularly.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Friday, October 2, 2015, at approximately 10:00 a.m., Officers Daniel Clark and Bill Lanergan were dispatched to Dunkin Donuts at 95 Franklin Street after a female caller stated that she was in a gray Ford Explorer and her boyfriend was threatening to kill her and her three children.

Upon arrival, the Officers spoke with the male, who was outside of the car. He confirmed that he was the driver and denied that there was a problem. He said that they were on the way to their cousin's house. Officer Lanergan interviewed the distraught female passenger who said that her boyfriend was very angry and threatened, "I'll kill everyone in the car," screaming that he would drive into a telephone pole.

Officer Lanergan interviewed her 6 year old daughter who was sitting in the back seat directly behind the driver. Officer Lanergan asked her, "Was there almost an accident?" She became very upset, with tears in her eyes and said, "No, he said he would kill us and drove towards a pole." There was also a newborn and a 5 year old in the car. The female added that her boyfriend was very angry as they were driving down the street and yelled out, "I'll kill everyone in the car" as he drove over a curb and headed for a telephone pole.

Based on this information, Officer Clark advised the boyfriend of his Miranda rights. The boyfriend said he understood the rights and would talk to the Officer. When asked if he said that he would kill everyone in the car, the boyfriend denied making any such statement. Officer Clark requested the patrol supervisor, Sergeant Dan Flaherty to respond to the scene. As he waited, Officer Clark re-interviewed the female who said that she was emotional because she was worried that DCF would be notified and she did not want her kids to be taken away.

LT. DAN MINTON

Sergeant Flaherty arrived on scene and immediately notified DCF. The female recounted in full detail how her boyfriend of three years, their child in common and her two other daughters went to get gas at an unknown location in Quincy. After getting gas, an argument ensued for about 15 minutes and it was about car seats. This led to the driver/boyfriend making his threatening remarks as the vehicle "jumped the curb." They proceeded to a relative's house and after a brief stay, got back into the car. She said they began to argue about who would be using the car later.

At this point, the boyfriend became enraged and jerked the car towards a telephone pole as he threatened to kill everyone in the car. The driver/boyfriend then jammed on the brakes in front of the pole, causing the female to jerk forward. She then told him, "I'm going to call the police on you." He responded by pulling over and taking the keys out of the ignition.

Since the female did not have a driver's license, Sergeant Flaherty decided to drive their vehicle and the occupants to the Quincy Police station and await DCF response.

The boyfriend, a 35 year old Framingham resident, was placed under arrest and charged with, "Assault with a Dangerous Weapon to wit: Motor Vehicle, Threatening to Commit a Crime: To kill and Operating to Endanger." Nice Work!

NEW CREDIT AND DEBIT CHIP CARDS: are being mailed out to replace your existing card(s). This is part of a nationwide shift by major card issuers to offer added security against fraud. The new cards look like your old cards with one exception: they have a small square metallic chip on the front. The chip holds your payment data — some of which is currently held on the magnetic stripe on your old cards — and provides a unique code for each purchase. The metallic chip is designed to reduce fraud, including counterfeiting.

Here's how it works: To buy something in a store, instead of swiping your card, you'll put it into a reader for a few seconds. Then you might have to sign or enter a PIN. With each transaction, the chip generates a unique code needed for approval. The code is good only for that transaction. Because the security code is always changing, it's much more difficult for someone to steal and use.

There will be no change in the way you use your card online or by phone. This means chip cards won't prevent criminals from using stolen card numbers to buy online or by phone. So it's a good idea to still guard your card information closely, and check statements for suspicious activity.

Banks and card issuers have been sending out new credit and debit chip cards, usually as existing cards expire or need replacement. If you haven't received your new cards, don't worry. The rollout will continue at least through 2016. If you want to know when your new chip cards will arrive, contact your card issuers at the phone numbers on your cards.

Positive Trends For Norfolk County Real Estate Activity

tory. However, the small sales price increase is good news for buyers' purchasing powers, especially first-time ones," said O'Donnell.

The mortgage market saw conflicting news, the register reports. There was a solid 11 percent growth in the number of mortgages recorded for the quarter. However, total mortgage indebtedness (financing) for the same period fell by 15 percent to $3.4 billion. This decrease can be explained by a large mortgage that was recorded against commercial retail property in Dedham, Canton and Medfield during the third quarter of last year.

O'Donnell also noted another area of concern: the number of foreclosure deeds recorded during the quarter which increased to 62 compared to 50 during the same quarter last year.

"Lending institutions continue to work through a backlog of foreclosures that resulted from the economic downturn that occurred in 2008. More disconcerting was the Notice to Foreclose Mortgage recording figure, the first stage in the foreclosure process, which rose to 238 compared to 139 during the third quarter 2014. This figure is a clear indication that while our economy is strong, many of our neighbors still face significant economic hardships," O'Donnell said.

The Registry continues to partner with Quincy Community Action Programs at (617) 479-8181 ext-376 and Neighbor Works Southern Mass at (508) 598-0950 to help anyone who has received a Notice to Foreclose Mortgage from a lender. Another option for homeowners is to call the Massachusetts Attorney General's HomeCorps program at (617) 573-5333.

Homestead recordings increased 11 percent for the third quarter compared to one year ago. Homestead recordings provide limited protection against the forced sale of an individual's primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000.

"The Norfolk County real estate story for the third quarter 2015 was pretty much a positive one, but there are warning signs out there," O'Donnell said. "The strong eastern Massachusetts economy continues to serve as an economic engine for real estate activity, especially in Norfolk County.

"However, while the Massachusetts Association of Realtors reported gains in real estate inventory during the summer months, the levels remain below average. Additionally, a possible move by the Federal Reserve to increase interest rates before the end of the 2015 could have a major impact on borrowers.

"Finally, new consumer federal disclosure rules, scheduled to go into effect in early October, could lengthen the time for real estate closings, pushing some closings from the 4th quarter of 2015 into the first quarter of 2016."

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might be growing impatient with a situation that seems to resist efforts to resolve it. But staying with it raises the odds that you'll find a way to a successful resolution.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Travel and kinship are strong in the Bovine's aspect this week. This would be a good time to combine the two and take a trip to see family members for a pre-holiday get-together.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A colleague could make a request you're not comfortable with. If so, say so. Better to disappoint someone by sticking with your principles than disappoint yourself if you don't.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The Moon Child's ability to adapt to life's ebbs and flows helps you deal with the changes that you might confront at work or at home, or both. Things settle down by the week's end.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) It's a good week for Leos and Leonas to get some long-outstanding business matters resolved. Then go ahead and plan a fun-filled family get-away weekend with the mate and the cubs.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A possible workplace change seems promising. If you decide to look into it, try not to form an opinion on just a small part of the picture: Wait for the full image to develop.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A newcomer helps keep things moving. There might be some bumpy moments along the way, but at least you're heading in the right direction. You win praise for your choices.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You could be pleasantly surprised by how a decision about one thing opens up an unexpected new option. Also, assistance on a project could come from a surprising source.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) With more information to work with, you might now be able to start the process that could lead to a major change. Reserve the weekend for family and friends.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) This could be a good time to begin gathering information that will help you turn that long-held idea into something substantive. A personal matter might need extra attention.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) That new challenge might carry some surprises. But you should be able to handle them using what you already know. That new supporter should be there to lend assistance.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Someone might be trying to disguise his or her true motives. But the perceptive and perspicacious Pisces should have little or no problem finding the truth in all that foggy rhetoric.

BORN THIS WEEK: You can always rely on your people skills to help you find solutions to problems others often give up on.

Prayer to The Blessed Virgin

(Never Known to Fail)

O, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendour of Heaven. Blessed mother of the son of God, Immaculate Virgin assist me in this necessity, O Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my Mother. O Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. O, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3 times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (3 times). Thank you for your mercy to me and mine. Amen. This prayer must be said for three days and after that the request will be granted. The prayer must be published. P.O.'D.

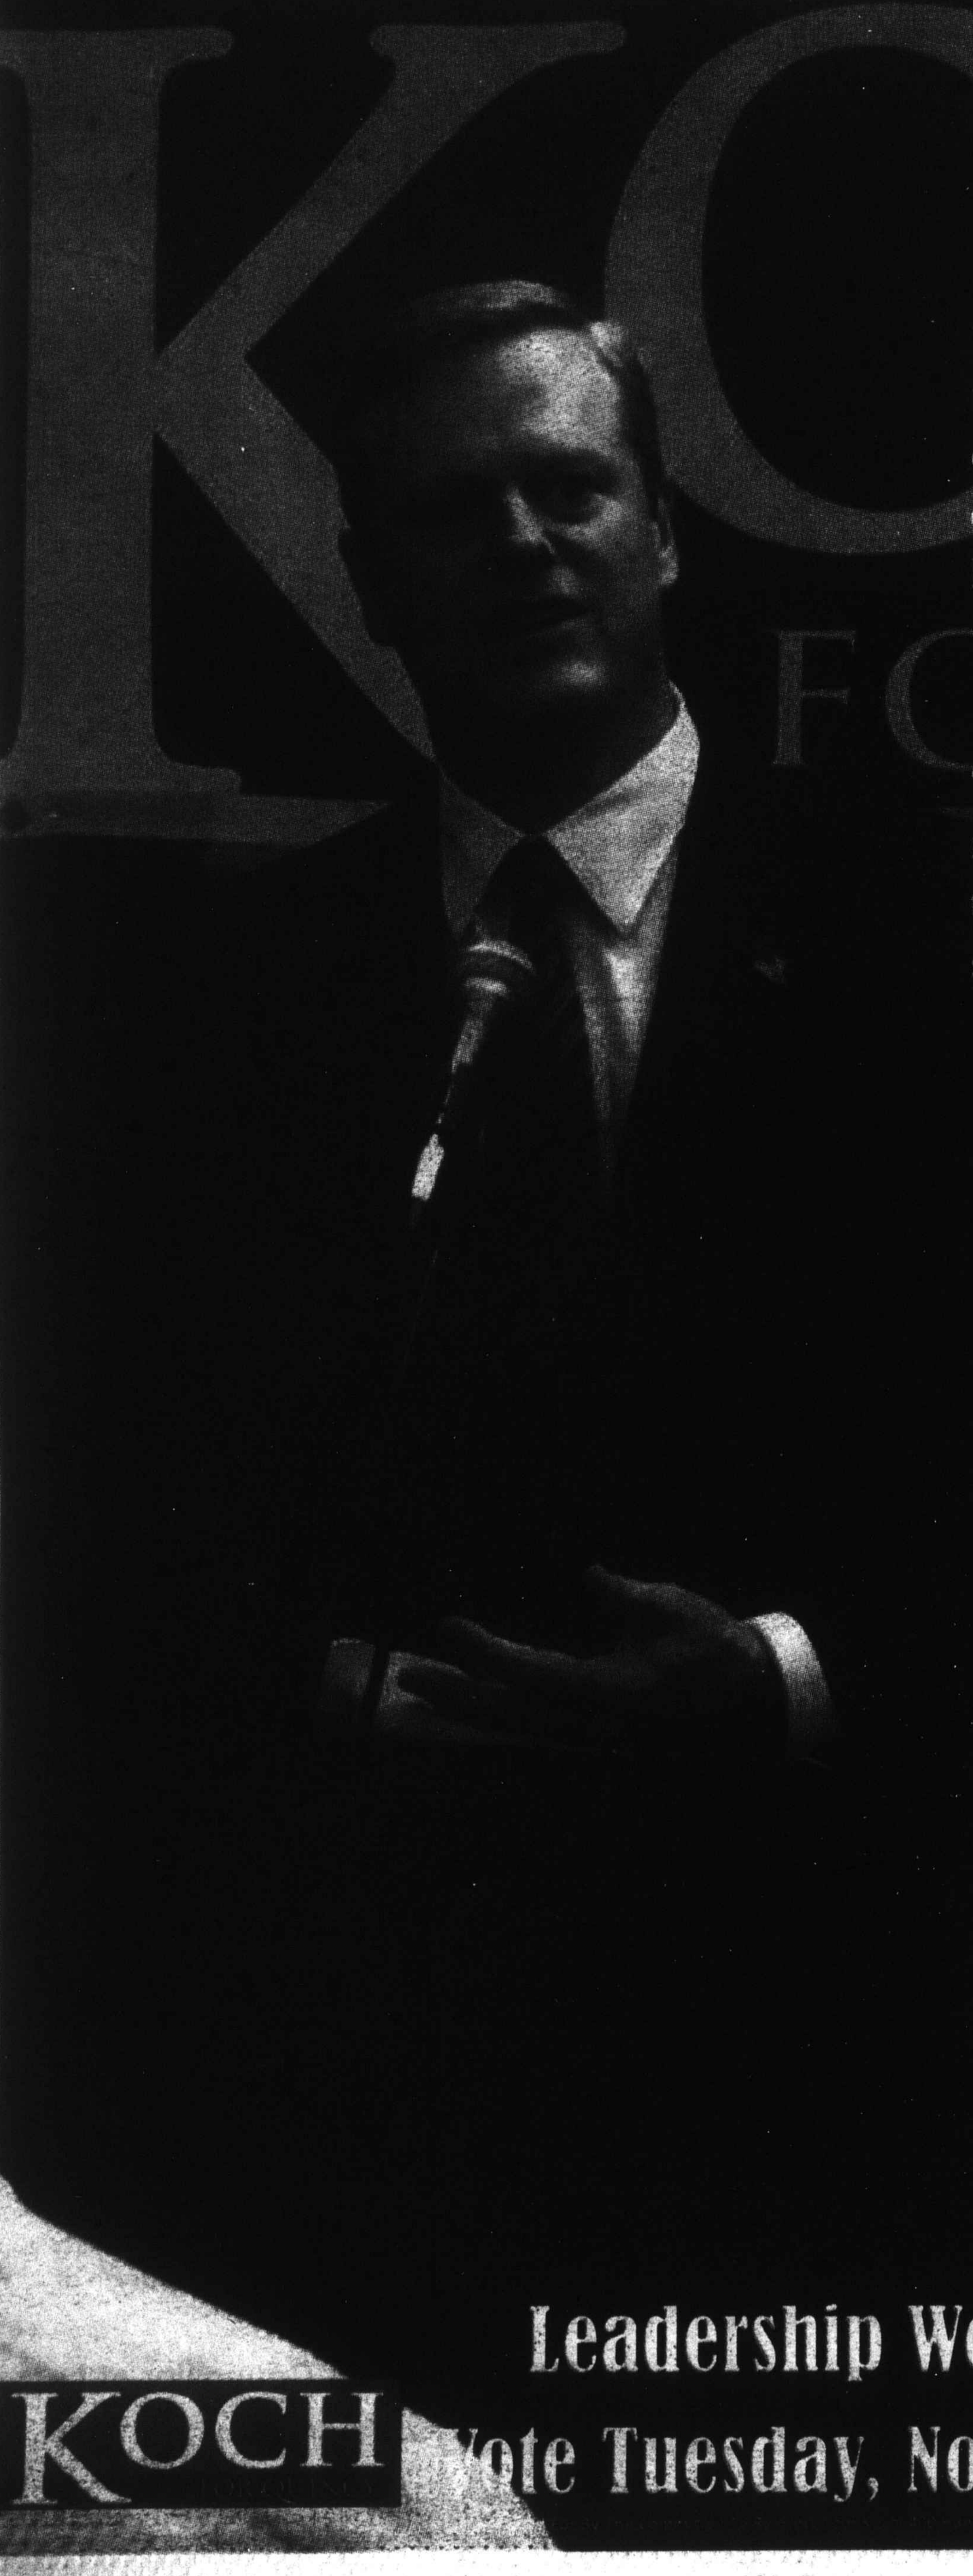
In his own words.
Governor Baker endorses Mayor Tom Koch:



"He builds coalitions, he focuses on the work and gets stuff done. That's exactly the kind of person this community needs to continue leading it forward."

"He doesn't get hysterical. He doesn't raise his voice. He brings people together, he engages, and he seeks solutions."

"I've watched this City grow under his leadership; I've watched this city tackle the tough issues under his leadership, and I've watched him create a vision and path for the future of Quincy that's going to be great."

"He doesn't care what party you're from and he doesn't care what part of town you're from. He wants everyone that's part of Quincy to be part of the conversation and part of the solution. In this polarized age we live in, that's the kind of political leadership we can all emulate."

Plans For New Sterling Unveiled

By SCOTT JACKSON

Preliminary designs for the new Reay E. Sterling Middle School call for a shorter building to better blend in with the surrounding neighborhood as well as separate "academic neighborhoods" for each of the school's four grades.

Members of the city's committee tasked with planning the proposed new school – including L. Scott Dunlap, managing principal of Ai3 Architects, and project manager Tom Kerwin of Joslin Lesser – presented a conceptual design of the new school at Monday's City Council meeting. The design, they emphasized, is only preliminary and subject to change as the Massachusetts School Building Authority reviews the project. The committee will present the conceptual plan to the MSBA's full board on Nov. 18.

Dunlap, whose firm also designed the new Central Middle School, said the new Sterling can provide more than just a new school for

U.S. SEN EDWARD MARKEY (right) called the nation's opioid epidemic "the issue of our time" during an Oct. 13 forum on the topic in Quincy, as Mayor Thomas Koch looks on. "We need an army of ordinary citizens in order to match off against the army of lobbyists for the pharmaceutical industry or the [American Medical Association]," Markey added. Joining Markey at the forum were U.S. Reps. Stephen F. Lynch, Joseph P. Kennedy III and Katherine Clark as well as state Sen. John Keenan. Several advocates also testified that night, calling for more education on the topic for students. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth

Public Schools Enrollment Down Again

By SCOTT JACKSON

Enrollment at Quincy Public Schools has dipped for a second straight year after increasing for the previous eight.

Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro presented detailed enrollment information for the new school year to the School Committee on Oct. 14, including each school's enrollment over the past decade, open enrollment requests, and class size.

The school system had 9,339 students enrolled this year as of Oct. 1, down from 9,359 last year and 9,470 at the start of the 2013-14 school year. Before declining the previous two years,

Tax Scam Warning

The Quincy Police Department has received numerous inquiries from residents who are getting calls from people claiming to be from the Internal Revenue Service (IRS).

The caller informs the resident that they owe money for late taxes. They make threats that the local Police will come to your door to arrest you or you will be taken to court and then put in jail if you do not pay immediately.

This is a scam. The IRS does not call you to discuss issues. Their initial contact is by letter instructing you to contact a specific person within the IRS. If you have caller ID, "Google" the telephone number with the word, "scam" after the number to see who else has reported this fraudulent activity.

"This is a scam," said Quincy Police Lt. Dan Minton. "The IRS does not call you to discuss issues. Their initial contact is by letter instructing you to contact a specific person within the IRS.

"If you have caller ID, 'Google' the telephone number with the word, "scam" after the number to see who else has reported this fraudulent activity.

Do not make any payments electronically (wiring the money) or by any other means," Minton said. "When in doubt, first call the Quincy Police Department at 617-479-1212 for assistance."

Joy Hanlon, Malcolm MacNeil Soccer Fields Dedicated

Mayor Thomas Koch, the City of Quincy Park Department and Quincy Youth Soccer held a ceremony Sunday to commemorate the opening of the newly renovated and newly named soccer fields at Cleverly Court.

The Community Preservation Committee awarded $60,000 to the Park Department to perform the renovation. An irrigation system was added below the playing surface of the field, which was then sodded. The work was managed and performed by members of the Park Department.

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall stressed the importance of the Quincy Youth Soccer .program, in which he grew up playing in. The fields will serve some of the youngest members of the program and were renamed to honor two people who personify what the program means to the community.

Joy Hanlon Field was named to honor Joy Hanlon who passed away in 1992 at the age of 9. Joy was an avid soccer player and loved the game, especially as a member of Quincy Youth Soccer. Joy's spirit and love for soccer lives on through her family, who have been dedicated members and advocates for the game of soccer in Quincy. Rich Hanlon, Joy's father, has been involved with Quincy Youth Soccer for over 25 years and is currently the head soccer coach of the North Quincy High boy's varsity soccer team.

Malcolm MacNeil Field was named to honor Malcolm MacNeil, who was the founder of Quincy Youth Soccer. Malcolm was the longest serving president of Quincy Youth Soccer and spent many years coaching and teaching the game to hundreds of eager players. Malcolm's dedication and hard work is shown every weekend as thousands of players participate in the organization he brought to Quincy.

MAYOR THOMAS KOCH (center) cuts the ribbon Sunday dedicating the newly renovated soccer fields at Cleverly Court. The fields have also been dedicated in memory of Joy Hanlon and Malcolm MacNeil. Joy, a young soccer enthusiast, passed away in 1992 at the age of 9. MacNeil was the longest serving president of Quincy Youth Soccer.

German Shepherd Served Seven Years With Dept.

Police Dog 'Rex' Dies After Battling Brain Tumor

A Quincy police dog that served with the department for seven years died Monday from complications of a brain tumor.

Rex, an 8-year-old German shepherd, Boston Police Department's Canine Academy and was certified as both an explosives odor detection (EOD) and police patrol canine, according to Lt. Robert Gillan. The United States Police Canine Association and the North American Police Work Dog Association also certified him.

Rex and his handler, Quincy Police Officer Paul Foley, responded to the 2013 Boston Marathon bombing within one hour and served with Boston police for six days following the attack. Initially, they helped secure the scene of the bombing and later responded to numerous reports of suspicious packages and possible explosive devices reported by Boston and Quincy residents.

Gillan also credited Rex for assisting Quincy detectives with an investigation into a shooting. Rex was able to detect gun residue in a suspect's vehicle, giving probable cause for a search of the vehicle, which in turn led to an arrest warrant.

"Canine Rex's service to our citizens was commendable in all aspects and Canine Rex will be missed and always remembered by the officers of the Quincy Police Department," Gillan said in a statement.

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest noted Rex's death at Monday's council meeting. She thanked Foley for providing the German shepherd with a good home and expressed sympathy for the Foley family's and the department's loss.

Cashman Seeks To Dredge At Shipyard

By SCOTT JACKSON

Construction magnate Jay Cashman is seeking federal approval to dredge a portion of the Fore River adjacent to a pier in the shipyard he owns.

Cashman has applied for a permit from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to dredge a 150-foot by 50-area adjacent to the shipyard's pier one to a depth of 38 feet below. This would enable the pier to accommodate larger vessels and match the depth of the river bottom nearby, which has been recently dredged to 38 feet.

An estimated 23,000 cubic yards of silt will be removed in the process. It would be dumped at a site in Massachusetts Bay 14 miles away from the nearest land that is used for disposal of material dredged from the waters off Greater Boston.

The dredging will impact roughly 7,500 square feet of Essential Fish Habitat for various species, but the Army Corps of Engineers has made a preliminary determination there will be no substantial impact from the dredging project. Further review of impact is being conducted in consultation with the National Marine Fisheries Service.

The Army Corps of Engineers is accepting public comment on the proposal through Nov. 12. Written comments can be submitted to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, New England District, Regulatory Division (ATTN: Joshua Helms), 696 Virginia Rd., Concord, MA 01742.

Residents Seek Highway Noise Barriers

public safety committee, Mayor Thomas Koch, the city's state legislators, Gov. Charlie Baker, and the Massachusetts Department of Transportation.

The petition says traffic on the interstate has grown worse in recent years, leading to increased noise and air pollution that negatively impacts the quality of life for residents living nearby. To remedy this, the petitioners are seeking the installation of noise barriers along both sides of the highway as early as next year.

"Increased traffic and the HOV lane created from the Big Dig construction created a concentrated traffic congestion nightmare that reeks of car fumes, air pollution and traffic noise from cars and trucks that make it virtually impossible for families to enjoy their home/yards and neighborhood," the petition states.

"We respectfully ask [MassDOT] to address these environmental issues by installing highway noise barriers. We [would] like to see this project start in 2016 or early 2017. Highway noise barriers will not only insulate the houses in West Quincy from noise, but shield the homes from car fumes and air pollution, making it possible for families and children to enjoy their home/yards and improving the quality of life."

RUNNING INTO COMPLICATIONS

Any function on a watch other than the display of time is known as a "complication." These can range from a simple display of date to very rare works of horology that require numerous functions. One of the most interesting examples of the latter type of complication is a "moon-phase" complication, once used by sailors to gauge tides, which indicates a full, half, quarter, or new moon. Perhaps the most popular of the complications found on today's watch is the "chronograph" function, which is essentially a stopwatch. This complication is best appreciated by those involved in various forms of racing. The "dual time zone" complication is a favorite among regular travelers. Complications make watches more useful and interesting.

Decoding Dsylexia

The sun had almost set last Thursday evening – the darkening sky receding from a light blue hue to a warm orange glow.

But if you passed through Squantum near the seawall around 6:15 p.m. that evening, the color red also made a strong showing.

And for a very good reason.

About 40 children and their parents gathered at the seawall holding red balloons and red carnations to create awareness for dyslexia – a specific learning disability that affects one in five people. Across the bay that evening, the Zakim Bridge was also illuminated in red at the request of Decoding Dyslexia Massachusetts Chapter, an advocacy group.

Just as the sun set, the group posed for a photo. As the shutter snapped, they yelled "Decoding Dyslexia." A short time later, some of the youngsters stood on the seawall and smiled broadly as they tossed the carnations into the air.

October has been proclaimed Dyslexia Awareness Month by Gov. Charlie Baker in Massachusetts. He's urged citizens across the state "to take cognizance of this event and participate fittingly in its observance."

The Squantum showing was organized by Kathy O'Brien of Squantum, a pediatric nurse and mother of several children who have been diagnosed with dyslexia. O'Brien is an avid advocate of early screening for dyslexia for children. She's also a strong believer that dyslexia is a community issue and everyone needs to be involved to help make progress.

"There isn't enough early detection. Scientists at MIT are trying to work on that more and more. The state legislature just voted unanimously to approve kindergarten screening for dyslexia and now we need to get it to pass in Washington. We want people to advocate for that and to call our U.S. senators and congressmen," O'Brien says.

Dyslexia is defined as difficulty in reading and reading comprehension despite normal intelligence. It affects 20 percent of the population regardless of race, gender, age or socioeconomic status.

"As a pediatric nurse, I see many children and families affected by issues in literacy," O'Brien says. "I now ask parents before signing forms are they able to read and understand. This has made me realize the critical need for early intervention."

The governor's proclamation states literacy is an important goal for the Commonwealth and dyslexia creates unique challenges for those struggling to keep up with an age appropriate curriculum. Proven methods exist that with the support of parents, teachers and community members assist readers in improving their fluency and comprehension.

The governor also noted a proper diagnosis of dyslexia can identify those who need extra help, enabling appropriate instruction and support and facilitating success for these students and in the workplace.

O'Brien said state Sen. John Keenan has met with her several times and is dedicated to this cause. She is also appreciative of the support of Judith Todd, director of the Quincy Public Schools Special Education Program.

"By pulling together, parents, educators, trained specialists, health care professionals and politicians will improve our system in order to help each individual child become what he or she is truly capable of," O'Brien said.

Dsylexia: A Few Points

- Dyslexia is a unique mind set that is often gifted and productive but learns differently than other minds.
- Dyslexia commonly runs in families and can not be out grown.
- Some of our most brilliant minds of our time have been known to have dyslexia. Walt Disney, Albert Einstein, Thomas Edison, and Steve Jobs.

Unfortunately, on the flip side, children who do not receive the help they require may develop school anxiety, low self esteem, depression, frustration, defiance, panic, leading to the possibility of unsafe behaviors, drugs, suicide, poverty and trouble with the law.

- About 40 percent of people with Dyslexia also have ADHD. Those with Dyslexia use about 5 times more energy to complete mental tasks. Classrooms need to provide FM systems to help many dyslexics with Auditory Processing in order to achieve.
- Dyslexia is not the result of neurological damage but the product of neurological development.
- Each dyslexic has a different combination of literacy issues that need individual expert attention. That means that even if a curriculum is delivered exactly as prescribed, this one size fits all approach can not meet the needs of all children.
- Several reading programs are Wilson, Orton Gillingham, LIPS and RAVE-O.

How You Can Help

Kathy O'Brien, local mother and dyslexia awareness advocate, is urging residents to call Bay State congressmen to support a Bill for Research Excellence and Advancements for the READ Act or Dyslexia Act.

The bill requires the National Science Foundation (NSF) to devote specified funding to support dyslexia research with the goal of practical application. It is to advance the goal of broadening the participation and achievement of learner with disabilities in science, technology, engineering and mathematics.

O'Brien urges local residents to call Cong. Stephen Lynch to be a co-sponsor of the bill (H.R> 3033 -114th Congress (2015-2016) READ Act. His phone number is 617-428-2000 for his Boston office and 202-225-8273 for his D.C. office.

She says there's been some progress but much more needs to be done.

"We are making progress but it's complicated. There are many different diagnoses for dyslexia. Some people with dyslexia may need just some assistance like a tutor to do better but other kids really need intensive treatment and that's something we need to get the word out," O'Brien says.

"The (nationwide) advocacy group is called Decoding Dyslexia because people have to be able to break down the words, they have to be able to pronounce them, they have to be able to start reading fluently, they need to learn comprehension and they have to be able to put in writing. It's really tough for a lot of kids to process," O'Brien says.

Some local students who are diagnosed with dyslexia attend school out-of-district at two renown schools – the Landmark School in Beverly and the Carroll School in Lincoln. But that can take an emotional toll on students and families.

"We need schools closer to home," O'Brien says. "Kids shouldn't have to miss out on sports, proms, socialization . . . My daughter had to move out of the house when she was 13 to attend the Landmark School. It's a beautiful school and I think the world of it. It can be tough emotionally and socially to leave home.

"The Landmark School and Carroll School and other private schools do a fantastic job and I believe the public school systems are trying to make some efforts but we need to do a better job," she adds.

O'Brien says Quincy is making strides with training and other resources. She's also hopeful that another school closer to Quincy – for instance in Boston – could be established to help students with dyslexia.

"We could have a model school for the United States right here because I feel that we are so close to Boston. People come here to go to med school and we could use students to help educate ourselves with what's working with kids."

Sara Regan Levine, another Quincy mother, has a son with dyslexia. He embodies the progress that can be made with individualized attention, education and hard work.

Her son attended the Landmark School for six years because he wasn't getting enough services in Quincy. It was a long day for her son – leaving the city around 6 a.m. in the morning to take a bus to Landmark and then return about 12 hours later.

"He had no time to do anything extracurricular. He would come home and do his homework and then just go to bed. He'd get up the next morning and do the same thing over and over again for six years. He lost some friends and a lot of activities."

In Sara's words, Landmark did "wonders" for her son. And with his hard work, he passed the MCAS and he returned to the Quincy Public School system this fall to enroll at North Quincy High School where he will graduate next spring.

"I would have loved for him to have stayed in district. It made it very tough emotionally and socially but he did his time and now we're reaping the benefits."

Levine speaks for many parents when asked what message she wants to convey most.

"I would love to advocate for Quincy to have enough support and training to keep these kids in district, even if it's just one school takes them all or one classroom per school. It is about the money but I think our kids are worth it and I think our kids are worth it to say in the city that they love – Quincy."

Four-Day Controlled Deer Hunt In Blue Hills

State officials have approved a final deer management plan for the Blue Hills State Reservation allowing a controlled deer hunt on Nov. 30, Dec. 1, Dec. 7 and Dec. 8.

The plan was put in place because officials said deer population within the state reservation has reached heightened levels that are compromising the long-term health of the forest and its ability to regenerate.

"Blue Hills State Reservation is a vital recreational resource for the Greater Boston community, and the health of the local ecosystem is paramount to ensuring its survival," said Energy and Environmental Affairs Secretary Matthew Beaton. "I am confident that DCR, in collaboration with DFG and our law enforcement partners, will ensure a safe, effective hunt that over the long term will restore the habitat within the reservation."

The current deer population within the Blue Hills State Reservation has reached at least 85 deer per square mile of forest habitat, far more than the density range of 6 to 18 deer per square mile of forest that state biologists and wildlife officials have determined to be a healthy level for promoting long-term forest sustainability and regeneration.

If left unchecked, officials said, the Blue Hills deer population will continue to consume the reservation's vegetation at a high rate, which can be destructive to the forest's health in a variety of ways, including:

- The prevention of tree and plant regeneration, such as rare plant species;
- The potential to significantly decrease species diversity; and
- The heightened risk of forest wildfires.

The four-day controlled deer hunt will take place during the normal shotgun season in Massachusetts between the hours of 5 a.m. and 4 p.m.

DCR is also limiting the controlled hunt to areas of the state reservation that are north of Route I-93, thereby affording plenty of open space for those who wish to visit the property and avoid areas where the controlled hunt is taking place. Approximately 3,000 acres of the state reservation's 7,000 acres will be used for the hunt.

DCR and DFG worked with stakeholders that included the Department of Fish and Game, the Division of Fisheries and Wildlife, the Massachusetts Environmental Police, the Massachusetts State Police, local law enforcement, state and local officials, the Friends of the Blue Hills, and others to examine the range of deer management options available and their potential effectiveness. DCR and DFG then concluded that the most practical and effective management option was a regulated controlled shotgun hunt similar to the annual hunt DCR oversees at the Quabbin Reservoir.

"The Massachusetts Environmental Police is prepared to provide officers to assist DCR with their management plans," said Colonel James McGinn. "We have met numerous times with our law enforcement partners and have coordinated a unified command and response to any hunting law issues that may arise on the scheduled controlled hunt dates."

In response to public comments, DCR modified its initial plan by reducing the area of the reservation in which hunting will be allowed by 620 acres of land, and solidified the hunting boundaries by largely utilizing existing trails, roads, and pathways. DCR has also reduced the number of permitted hunters per two-day segment from 120 to 98 hunters.

The four days of the controlled hunt will include on-the-ground staffing resources from DCR, DFG, the Massachusetts Environmental Police (MEP), and the Massachusetts State Police (MSP). A unified command center will be established and staff from each agency will be working together to implement and oversee the controlled hunt.

The controlled hunt for the Blue Hills State Reservation will require prospective participants to apply for an access permit and then a random lottery will follow to select the hunters allowed to participate. Registered hunters who are interested in applying to participate in the Blue Hills State Reservation controlled deer hunt can apply online or download an application with instructions by visiting the Blue Hills State Reservation controlled deer hunt webpage.

Launch Petition Drive To Save Wollaston Golf Club

A citywide petition drive is underway to have the City Council amend the zoning ordinances to keep the Wollaston Golf Course as "open space."

The effort is spearheaded by the Montclair Men's Club and Quincy citizens who have proposed the golf club be taken over by the Metropolitan District Commission as an MDC Golf Club in order to retain the "open space."

Representative Joseph E. Brett has already filed a new bill in the legislature asking that the MDC take over the golf course.

DRUG PROBLEM VERY SERIOUS

Quincy's drug problem has now reached the "very serious" stage according to Norfolk County District Attorney George G. Burke.

The county's chief law enforcement officer last night in an interview with The Quincy Sun said that:

Drug use in high schools is "sharply increasing."

A "tremendous amount" of heroin is present in the city and is being used by teenagers. "We have a very serious problem here in Quincy," Burke declared. "Our office has been receiving numerous reports from concerned mothers and fathers and youths, too."

Burke said that he hoped that proponents of Survival, Inc. will work together with other interested parties.

Quarry, Granite Workers Museum Geology, Stone Splitting Presentation

The Quincy Quarry & Granite Workers Museum recentlhy held a geology and stone splitting presentation at the Lyons Turning and quarry site.

Les Tyrala, a registered geologist, gave a presentation on the geology of Quincy granite that included what is Quincy granite, what made Quincy granite, how did it get to Quincy and what uncovered Quincy granite.

After the geology presentation, museum members Al Bina and Tom Bonomi spoke on the history of stone splitting. The granite blocks were predrilled and after explaining this splitting method the attendees proceeded with the placement of the feather and wages in the holes and hammered until the granite split.

All were amazed by their ability to split the blocks with such ease using the plug and feather method used by stonecutters and quarrymen in years past. On display were tools used in the granite industry at the turn-of-the-century by stonecutters and quarrymen at the Turning Mill and the Lyons quarry.

The day was a great success and enjoyed by all.

The museum is planning more hands-on splitting presentations. For upcoming events visit the website at quincyquarrymuseum.org

Maria Droste Agency Annual Award Night At River Bay Club

Maria Droste Agency will hold its annual Awards Night Thursday, Nov. 19 from 6 to 9 p.m. at the River Bay Club, 99 Brackett St. in Quincy.

This year for the first time the Sister Joanne Westwater Award will be given. State Sen. John Keenan will receive the award in recognition of his efforts in working with the Senate on the current Massachusetts Substance Abuse Bill. This legislation was created to help combat the serious drug situation throughout the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The staff at Maria Droste Services recognizes the dire need to find solutions for this problem as every day, they treat persons caught up in the tide of sadness and fear of drug addiction.

Maria Droste Agency regularly relies on the generosity and sponsorship of area businesses. Each year the Agency remembers one of these special business with a Corporate Award. This year the Business Support Award will be given to Jen and Donnie Ormond, Coffee Break Café.

The Ormonds will be recognized for giving generously of their time and effort in support of the agency's annual fund raising evening, as well as several others throughout the city. They have also supported other charitable events throughout the city.

The Sr. Lorraine Bernier Award is named in honor of the agency's late director, Sr. Lorraine Bernier. The award honors a deserving staff, Board of Director or committee member. This year's agency award will be given to Marie Downey, LICSW, who has been a volunteer at the agency since the agency's opening in 1992.

The committee voted to recognize Downey with this award in gratitude for her support and in the hope that she continue to be part of the family at the Maria Droste Agency for many more years. "As a lifelong learner, I continue to do my part to learn, grow and change. So I may assist others in reaching their goals and healing potential," Downey said.

The Agency's foundation is built on the belief that each person has the right to a quality life and has worked tirelessly to enable each person to experience their worth and dignity as they move forward to a healthier lifestyle.

Since the Agency's opening in 1992 the staff and volunteer professionals have proved to be a critical support to individuals, couples and family groups on an adjustable fee scale based on the client's ability to pay. The sliding fee scale is made possible by the generosity of supporting people in the community, not unlike those given awards this year.

Friends and families of those receiving awards are invited to attend that evening. To make reservations or for more information about the event or the agency, contact Stacey Campbell at 617-471-5686 or email stacey@mariadrostecounseling.com.

Blessing of the Animals Oct. 25 At Quincy United Methodist

On Sunday, Oct. 25, Quincy Community United Methodist Church will hold its annual Blessing of the Animals worship service. Everyone is invited to bring their pet in person, or bring a photo of the pet.

"Each person will have to use her or his best judgment as to whether or not a pet should attend," the Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, the church's pastor, said. "Some pets are very uncomfortable in unfamiliar places and among unknown people. In such cases, please bring a photo of your pet. Other pets are very comfortable among strangers and take a new place in stride. We want everyone – pets and people – to have a great time, so everyone has to make their own decision."

All pets must be on a leash or in a carrier.

In addition to present pets, everyone is also invited to bring photos of past pests. The photos will be placed on the altar during the service.

The annual collection of supplies for the Quincy Animal Shelter will also be included in the worship service.

"Throughout October, Quincy Community has been taking up a special collection for the shelter. The shelter told us what its greatest present needs are and Quincy Community has been collecting cat and kitten food, blankets, paper towels, bleach and cat toys over the past month," Jarek-Glidden said. "During the worship service, these will be placed on the altar."

The church is located at 40 Beale St., across the street from the Wollaston MBTA station, and is handicapped accessible through the entrance nearest the flagpole.

WHAT'S COOKING with Marie & Suzie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

Dom's Vegetable Medley

By MARIE

My son Dom is a wonderful cook, and has a knack for throwing things together that is magical. He has a large vegetable garden some of which he used for today's recipe.

He used a cast iron pan, but a large skillet will work.

VEGETABLE MEDLEY

1 large zucchini (sliced)
2 green peppers (sliced)
2 large fresh tomatoes (sliced)
3 tablespoons Balsamic vinegar
2 tablespoons olive oil

First, heat the olive oil. Place the slices of zucchini all around the pan. On top of the zucchini, place the slices of peppers, then the tomatoes.

Sprinkle the balsamic vinegar over the top and cook covered slowly until the vegetables are tender. Cut in pieces like a pie- with the colors blending nicely.

Baked Apple Crisp

By SUZIE

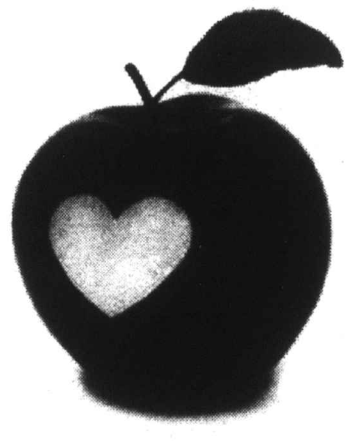
"An apple a day keeps the doctor away" is not just a cliché. They really are associated with reducing the risk of certain chronic diseases, including heart disease (because of their high fiber and pectin) diabetes, even asthma and certain cancers (specifically colon and liver)

Apples ranked second for highest antioxidant activity. However, they ranked highest for the proportion of free phenolic compounds which make them more easily absorbed in the blood stream. Much of their antioxidants are actually in the peel of the apple (catechin, procyanidins, chlorogenic acid to name a few) so don't peel your apples.

It is very important to only look for organic apples. Apples are one of the most pesticide contaminated fruits there are. Even if you wash them, many pesticides are "lipophilic" which means they enter the flesh of the fruit (or vegetable) so all the washing in the world won't reduce all of them, but does help some.

Make sure you always refrigerate to ensure crispness. A bowl of apples look pretty, but in a couple of days, they will lose their crispness.

Here is a great recipe for those of you who have gone apple picking and have lots of apples to cook with. It is grain free, and refined sugar free, as well as dairy free, although I like to substitute grass fed butter instead of the coconut oil in the crumb topping. ENJOY!



BAKED APPLE CRISP
(Dairy-Free, Grain-Free, Egg-Free)

FILLING: 7 apples, peeled, cored, sliced into thin pieces

1/4 cup orange juice (juice of 2-3 oranges)
2 tbs. raw honey (melted to liquid)
1 tbs. pure maple syrup
2 tsp. cinnamon
1/4 tsp. nutmeg

In a large bowl, mix together apples, orange juice, honey, maple syrup, cinnamon and nutmeg. Pour into a pie dish and bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes. Remove from the oven to sprinkle crumble on top.

CRUMBLE TOPPING:

Mix together 1 cup almond flour/meal
2 tbs. finely ground pecans
4 tbs. raw honey (melted to liquid)
2 tbs. coconut oil, butter or spread (softened).

Sprinkle on apples and bake at 350 degrees for about 20 minutes.

Gnocchis - Christian's Favorite

By MARIE

One of the hot summer Sundays when the family was together, my 16 year-old grandson Christian said he was eager to have gnocchis: his favorite kind of pasta and not a dish one makes in hot weather.

So I told him as soon as it gets cooler I would certainly make them.

So last week I began to make them. After making one batch, I froze them and will make more spastically until there is enough for everyone.

Gnocchis are usually made with boiled potatoes, and then mashed, or can be made with ricotta cheese. In today's recipe, I have used instant mashed potatoes with always great results.

Imagine just three ingredients makes the most delicious pasta.

GNOCCHIS

16 ounces mashed potatoes
Flour
1 egg (beaten)
Lots of patience

Make the potatoes according to directions. Let cool.

Place the potatoes in a bowl. Measure out the same amount of flour.

Place the cooled potatoes on a floured board or table. Make a well and add flour and egg. With a fork blend the mixture until it feels like a dough. Add a little flour if moist,

Knead for a few minutes until dough is smooth. Cut into strips and then cut in small pieces (about an inch long or so).

To make an air hole use your forefinger and middle finger right in the center and roll slightly. They resemble a pitted date. As you make them, place on a floured cookie sheet (parchment paper or foil then flour). If you're going to eat them right away, cook the same way you would pasta, but these will float to the top when done. Enjoy with tomato sauce and grated cheese.

If you are going to freeze them, place them the same way on the cookie sheet, cover with foil. They can be kept in a plastic bag after they are frozen until ready to use.

'Tiny Homes' Program Oct. 27

Christopher Page will present a program on "tiny houses" Tuesday, Oct. 27 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

Learn all about this new trend in minimalist, environmentally conscious living from one of the experts.

Page built his own tiny house with his own hands and is lecturing widely about this movement.

The tiny house movement is a growing phenomenon which taps into issues of sustainability, minimalism and economic freedom. While not for everyone, more and more people are considering the option of downsizing their possessions and living in a smaller space.

Page built a 210 square-foot tiny house during the second half of 2014 and has been living in it since then. His talk will cover some general information about the movement and his process of building and living in his house. There will be ample time for questions both during and after the presentation.

Intraocular Lenses In Cataract Surgery

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

RUTH JONES

Intraocular lenses (IOLs) are medical devices that are implanted inside the eye to replace the eye's natural lens when it is removed during cataract surgery. IOLs also are used for a type of vision correction surgery called refractive lens exchange.

FDA-approved IOLs have been obtainable since the early 1980s. Before their use, if you had cataracts removed, you had to wear very thick eyeglasses or special contact lenses in order to see after the surgery. Today there is a wide assortment of premium IOLs to choose from. The best intraocular lens for you depends on many factors, including your lifestyle and specific visual needs. During your preoperative consultation, your cataract surgeon can help you choose the best IOL for your needs, and can discuss the costs that entail choosing one of the premium lens implants. These are considered "premium" intraocular lenses because they have advanced features beyond those found in basic single vision IOLs that are covered by Medicare and other types of health insurance.

Aspheric IOLs- Conventional intraocular lenses have a spherical optical design, meaning the front surface is uniformly curved from the center of the lens to its edge. This design does not mimic the shape of the natural lens inside the eye, which varies in curvature from center to the border. So in fact, the eye's natural lens is aspheric ("not spherical"). A spherical intraocular lens can generate minor optical imperfections which can affect quality of vision, especially in low-light conditions such as driving at night. Premium aspheric IOLs, match more closely the shape and optical quality of the eye's natural lens, and can provide sharper vision, particularly in low light conditions and for people with large pupils.

Toric IOLs- Toric IOLs are premium intraocular lenses that correct astigmatism as well as nearsightedness or farsightedness. They can correct astigmatism because they have different powers in different meridians of the lens. They also have alignment markings on the peripheral part of the lens that enable the surgeon to adjust the positioning of the IOL inside the eye for optimal astigmatism correction. When the toric IOL is implanted during the cataract procedure, the surgeon rotates the IOL so the markings on the IOL are aligned with the markings put on the cornea, to insure appropriate modification of vision. LASIK, PRK and a procedure called astigmatic keratotomy (AK) also can be performed after cataract surgery to correct residual astigmatism, but toric IOLs decrease the likelihood of needing these supplementary surgical procedures.

Accommodating IOLs- Conventional spherical IOLs are monofocal lenses, meaning they are designed to provide clear vision at a single focal point (usually far away for good driving vision, for example). With conventional IOLs, typically you must wear eyeglasses or contact lenses in order to use a computer, read or perform other close-up tasks within arm's length. Accommodating IOLs are premium intraocular lenses that expand the range of clear vision. Their designed to allow the accommodating IOL to move forward slightly when you look at near objects, which increases the focusing power of the eye enough to provide better near vision than a conventional monofocal lens. Many people find these premium IOLs greatly reduce their need for reading glasses or computer glasses after cataract surgery, while providing exceptionally clear distance vision similar to that offered by a monofocal IOL.

Multifocal IOLs- Multifocal IOLs are another category of correcting IOLs that can decrease your need for reading glasses or computer glasses after cataract surgery. These premium IOLs contain added magnification in different parts of the lens to expand your range of vision so you can see objects clearly at all distances without glasses or contact lenses. Laser cataract surgery often is recommended if you are interested in multifocal IOLs, because precise alignment of these lenses is very important to give you the best visual outcome at all distances.

Monovision- An alternative to accommodating and multifocal IOLs for correcting farsightedness is monovision. Monovision is the technique of fully correcting the refractive error of one eye and intentionally making the other eye mildly nearsighted. In this scenario, the fully corrected eye sees distant objects clearly (but cannot see very well up close without glasses), and the mildly nearsighted eye sees very well up close without glasses (but not so clearly far away). Any combination of premium IOLs can be used for monovision cataract surgery. Monovision may sound odd the first time you hear about it, but this technique has been used very successfully with contact lenses for many years. And it is now being used frequently with cataract surgery to decrease a person's dependency on reading glasses and computer glasses after surgery.

Sometimes the best visual outcome after cataract surgery is achieved by using a different type of premium IOL in each eye. As an alternative your cataract surgeon may even recommend one brand of multifocal lens for one eye and a different brand for the other. This is because one brand may provide better computer vision and the other may provide sharper vision at a closer distance, for reading and other close-up tasks.

Medicare and private health insurance or vision insurance policies generally do cover the cost of cataract surgery, including the cost of a conventional monofocal IOL. If you choose a premium lens, typically you will have to pay the difference in cost between a conventional monofocal IOL and the premium lens implant. This out-of-pocket expense could range from $1,500 to $3,000 per eye or more, depending on the type of IOL and whether you opt for enhanced laser cataract surgery as well. To fully comprehend your medical costs and coverage, check the terms of your insurance policy prudently before you have surgery. Also, ask plenty of cost-related questions at the business office of your eye surgeon before consenting to surgery, to avoid objectionable financial surprises afterward.

Lawmakers, Advocates Address Opioid Epidemic

Markey noted the United States includes five percent of the world's population but consumes 80 percent of opioids, a class of painkillers that includes oxycodone (the active ingredient in OxyContin) and hydrocodone (found in Zohydro and Vicodin), among others. In 2014, there were 104,000 admissions to substance abuse treatment facilities in Massachusetts; 58 percent of those cases began with the use of prescription opioids, which led to the use of heroin. Deaths from opioid and opiate (a class of drugs including opioids as well as compounds derived from poppy plants, such as morphine) overdoses have surpassed those from motor vehicle crashes in Massachusetts.

"This is without question the issue of our time. The American people, the people in Quincy, are all saying 'enough is enough.'" Markey said. "We need an army of ordinary citizens in order to match off against the army of lobbyists for the pharmaceutical industry or the AMA (American Medical Association), who still stand there protecting a business as usual cultural.

"I think we can make a difference…it's going to take leadership like this, Mr. Mayor, for us to build that grass root support."

The U.S. surgeon general is set to release a report on opioid abuse and alcohol abuse in mid 2016, Markey added.

Lynch called the increase of opioid use nationwide an "insurgency," and said young people do not have a chance against opioids.

"When I was growing up, alcohol was the thing… At least kids back then had a chance if it was just alcohol they were dealing with," Lynch said. "OxyContin, especially when it first came out, was so powerful only one or two prescriptions and that child was gone. I could tell you some horror stories and I'm sure everyone here can."

Lynch recalled meeting one young woman who had a tooth extracted and received a prescription for opioid. She was addicted by the time the prescription was over and went back to the dentist, lying about pain in another tooth in order to get an additional prescription after having the second tooth pulled.

"When a substance is that strong that you're yanking good teeth out of your head just to get that prescription, you have to ask about the addictive nature of that drug," Lynch said. "The people that are manufacturing OxyContin are creating customers for life. That's a commercial advantage when you have a product that when you sell it, when you put it out there, you've got a customer for life."

Markey, Lynch and several of the subsequent speakers also credited Koch for efforts Quincy has made in recent years, such as steps to educate children and others on the perils of opiate use. The Quincy Police Department has also national recognition, from the White House and others, for its use of Narcan to reverse opiate overdoses. First responders elsewhere are now following the department's lead.

Kennedy outlined steps Congress has taken in recent weeks to curb the opioid epidemic. The House of Representatives unanimously passed a bill that would fund a national prescription drug-monitoring program, which Kennedy said would stop residents in his district from filling a prescription in Fall River and then go to Rhode Island to fill it again; he worked on that bill with representatives from Kentucky and Indiana. Kennedy is also working on another

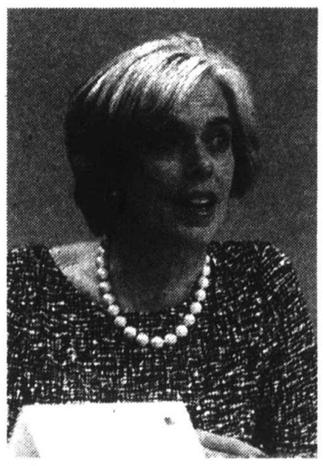
"GIVEN THE SCOPE of this issue, there is no silver bullet," Cong. Patrick Kennedy III said at the recent Opioid Forum in Quincy. "It's going to take an awful lot of effort chipping away at it from a very high level."



CONG. KATHERINE CLARK said statistics show a child is born dependent on opioids every 25 minutes nationwide. The federal government needs to do more, she stated. Quincy Sun Photos/ Robert Bosworth

STATE SEN. JOHN KEENAN (left) encouraged those in attendance to lobby their legislators to approve prevention measures. "Let the Legislature know, let the governor know, that you support prevention measures. If there is any part of this legislation you think works, please do not be afraid to express your support for that," Keenan said.

bill to address the epidemic, including additional funding for drug courts and veterans courts.

"Given the scope of this issue, there is no silver bullet," Kennedy said. "It's going to take an awful lot of effort chipping away at it from a very high level."

Clark said a child is born dependent on opioids every 25 minutes nationwide. The federal government needs to do more, she stated.

"We are pulling back in the federal government from funding basic research – making that investment. We can't afford to on many different levels, but we really can't afford to in addressing this crisis," Clark said. "We need to be able to get moms into treatment, get them the help they need to help rebuild their lives, and we need to do the research and get the best practices."

Keenan highlighted measures the Legislature has passed in recent years to curb the number of opiates available.

Legislation approved in 2012 required prescribers to participate in a prescription-monitoring program. That program was first established in 1992, but was voluntary with 4,000 practitioners enrolled in the system prior to the bill's passage, and many of them did not use the program. More than 30,000 prescribers are now enrolled in the program three years after the legislation was approved. They are required to check the program before prescribing a painkiller to a patient for the first time.

The 2012 bill also banned Massachusetts' pharmacies from filling prescriptions written from outside New England or New York. The Department of Public Health is also required to distribute information on the dangers of opioids and where to get assistance when a prescription is filled. A good Samaritan provision in the bill allows someone to seek assistance for someone overdosing without fear of arrest.

A 2014 bill, which became effective Oct. 1, requires insurance to cover up to 14 days of detox or step-down treatment. Keenan said he would look to increase that coverage to 28 days in the future.

Legislation approved recently by the Senate would require drug manufacturers to fund take back programs and give patients the ability to request less than a prescribed amount of painkillers, among other provisions. Approval of that bill is pending in the House.

Keenan encouraged those in attendance to lobby their legislators to approve prevention measures. Because of the effort being made by people in attendance for the forum, Keenan said the Bay State has a chance be a national leader in curbing opiate abuse.

"Let the Legislature know, let the governor know, that you support prevention measures. If there is any part of this legislation you think works, please do not be afraid to express your support for that," Keenan said.

"If there is a silver lining to this, it's that people are truly, truly committed to solving this epidemic. I'm convinced that while it may take a little while, we are making great progress and I think we're making great progress here in Massachusetts.

"A lot of the things we've done have been first in the nation and hopefully that means we'll be the first state in the nation out of this and we can lead the way for others so this scourge stops dead in its tracks."

Joanne Peterson, founder and executive director of Learn to Cope, discussed her family's experience with substance; her son, who is now in long-term recovery, became addicted to opioids a friend's father gave him a pill at a party. Schools should teach children about the impact addiction has on their brains instead of simply telling them not to take opioids.

"Rather than telling them about the drug, tell them about their brain, just like in fifth grade when I learned about my lungs and what cigarettes would do to them. I wasn't too young to hear that in fifth grade. My mother wasn't upset when I came home and ripped up her packs of cigarettes," Peterson said.

"I just think we're spending so much time worrying about being politically correct. We're wasting a lot of time. Parents at home can teach their kids there is this thing called addiction."

Quincy resident Nancy Holler, whose son Brendan MacDonald died from a drug overdose in 2013 at the age of 27, said she was hopeful after hearing what the other speakers had to say. Education is needed and should start in elementary schools, she added, and parents need to be educated as well.

"I'm very hopeful after listening to everybody. For everything you're doing, I'm really grateful," Holler said. "I agree with what everybody here touched on – prevention, education. I think it needs to start at a very young age, I would say elementary school. I think it needs to be part of the health curriculum and there needs to be mandatory education for parents."

John McGahan, president and CEO of the Gavin Foundation, also said education through the school system is important.

"We've got into the schools and we've got to start doing the work there," he stated. "We need to get into the schools and start doing the prevention work and stop worrying about when is too young."

"I welcome any of you to come and take a walk through our programs and see how young they are," McGahan added. "I don't even know if you can call it 'rehabilitation.' It's 'habilitation.' Twenty years ago if you were in a recovery home and you were 30 years old you were the kid. Now it's the median age."

Koch said those in the community should not lose hope.

"We've tripled the size of the drug unit since I've been mayor. We've added interventionists and forums in our schools, all kinds of education materials. Drug drop-off days. We've opened the Phoenix House," Koch said. "We're tackling every aspect, yet the battle continues and I can sense in the voices tonight people are losing hope. We can never lose hope."

"I think of the great saint, that little Albanian woman Mother Theresa, who was working the streets of Calcutta with the poorest of the poor," the mayor continued. "A reporter asked her 'Mother, how do you go on? How do you do this? You're not being successful,' and she said 'the Lord doesn't ask me to be successful, he asks me to be faithful.'

"If we continue to be faithful, each of us working together, being faithful as a community, coming together from different government entities…we will be successful."

FIVE PANELISTS spoke at an Oct. 13 forum on the opioid epidemic affecting Quincy and the nation, which was held at Coddington Hall. Among other topics, the panelists said more education is needed on the issue for students and parents. Speaking (far right) is Cheryl Bartlett, former commissioner of state's Department of Public Health and now the executive director of the Cape Cod Substance Abuse Prevention Initiative. The other panelists were (front row, from left): Nancy Holler, whose son died following a five-year battle with addiction; Joanne Peterson, founder and executive director of Learn to Cope; John McGahan, president and CEO of the Gavin Foundation; and David Kelley, deputy director of the New England High Intensity Drug Trafficking Area.

Baker Bill Targets Opioid Epidemic

By SCOTT JACKSON

Gov. Charlie Baker has proposed sweeping legislation aimed at curbing the Bay State's opioid epidemic

Baker's bill, unveiled Oct. 15, would limit the amount of opioid painkillers prescribed to certain patients; mandate training on substance abuse for doctors as well as parents and coaches of high school athletes; and give hospital personnel the ability to involuntarily commit an individual with a substance use disorder for up to 72 hours if they pose a threat to themselves or others, among other provisions.

The recommendations were developed by a working group the governor tasked with addressing the rising abuse of opioids in the state.

"Combatting the opioid epidemic in the Commonwealth calls for a comprehensive approach, and filing today's landmark legislation is a critical step toward creating more effective treatment pathways and better controlling opioid prescribing practices for first-time patients," Baker said in a statement.

QPS Enrollment Down Again

the number of students had increased every year since 8,763 students were enrolled in 2005-06, according to state records and those presented at the committee meeting.

At the high school level, 2,642 students are enrolled – the lowest total over the past 10 years. Enrollment at the high schools has decreased each year since peaking at 2,927 in 2007-08.

At Quincy High, 1,437 students are enrolled, down from the 10-year high of 1,551 in 2012-13. The school has 374 freshmen, 362 sophomores, 353 juniors and 348 seniors.

Enrollment at North Quincy High has increased in recent years, going from 1,172 students in 2013-14 to 1,205 this year; enrollment there over the past decade had peaked at 1,531 students in 2008-09. The school has 315 freshmen enrolled, 295 sophomores, 286 juniors and 295 seniors.

"A real positive here is that both schools now have freshman classes of over 300," DeCristofaro said. "That's a very healthy way to look at enrollment at both our high schools."

The vast majority of sections at both high schools – 525 of 605 – have 25 or fewer students.

"Eighty-seven percent of our sections have 25 or fewer students," the superintendent said. "Sixty-five percent…or 394 sections, have 22 students or fewer."

All requests for open enrollment at the high school level were honored this year, at least the fourth straight year that has happened. Sixty-one students who live in North Quincy High's district requested to enroll at Quincy High this year and 42 students in Quincy High's district opted to enroll at North.

At the middle school level, 2,164 students are enrolled, the most in the past 10 years. Central has the most students with 660 in grades 6-8; the school has had the highest enrollment each of year over the past decade. Since 2009-10, enrollment at Central has increased from 562 students to 660.

In addition to being the newest middle school in the system, Central is also home to an advancement place program (known as APC) for students from across the city; DeCristofaro, however, attributed the school's growth to increases in the neighborhood's population.

"[Central's enrollment] is not necessarily because of the APC program that is there – that's 241 of the 660 kids – it's the neighborhood. The neighborhood population is growing. The neighborhood enrollment is growing and 40 percent of those 241 students would be Central students anyway," DeCristofaro said.

"We need to keep an eye on that development. Yes, it is a new school – we want to make sure we have the class size we want."

The school system moved its lab enrichment program for fifth graders that had been meeting at Central to Point Webster to free up an additional classroom, the superintendent noted.

At Atlantic Middle School, 476 students are enrolled, down from a 10-year high of 517 in 2006-07.

Broad Meadows has 343 students enrolled in grades 6-8, down six from last year when enrollment was the highest over the past decade.

Point Webster has 344 students enrolled in grades 5-8, down 44 from the 388 students who were enrolled in 2012-13, the school's 10-year high.

Sterling, which the city plans to replace next, has 341 students enrolled in grades 5-8. Enrollment there peaked in 2011-12 and 2012-13 at 353 students. Over the past decade, Sterling's enrollment has been as low as 245 students in 2008-09, the year before fifth graders moved to Sterling from Lincoln-Hancock Elementary.

Ninety-four percent of all middle school classes – 428 of 455 – have 24 or fewer students; 230 of those classes have 20 or fewer. One class – an APC math class at Central – has 28 students.

"The sizes at the middle schools, again, are I think excellent. Ninety-four percent of those classes have [24] or fewer students in them. Out of that 93 percent, 53 percent or 230 classes have 20 or fewer students," DeCristofaro said. "At the middle school level there is one class of 28. That is the grade 6 APC at Central Middle School."

The lion's share of open enrollment requests at the middle school level – 54 of 74 total – were made to enroll at Central. Ten of those were granted, DeCristofaro said, nine of which were for siblings of students previously enrolled at Central. Thirteen of the other twenty requests for middle school open enrollment were granted as well; four enrolled at Atlantic, six at Broad Meadows, two at Point Webster and one at Sterling.

The city's 11 middle schools have a total of 4,056 students enrolled. Between 2006-07 and 2013-14, the elementary school enrollment increased from 3,593 to 4,228. That number has decreased in each of the last two years.

The Clifford Marshall School, which houses students in kindergarten to grade 4 and is the newest elementary school in the city, has the highest enrollment at 578. The school's enrollment in 2006-07 was 484 students.

Lincoln-Hancock, the city's other K to 4 school, has the second highest enrollment at 479. The school had as many as 502 students enrolled over the past decade, though that was before fifth grade classes moved to nearby Sterling.

The Montclair School has added 98 students over the past decade, going from an enrollment of 312 in 2006-07 to 410 this year. Snug Harbor has added 80 students over that timeframe, going from 223 to 303 this year. The Wollaston School's enrollment has increased from 286 to 350. At Atherton Hough, enrollment has gone from 225 in 2006-07 to 291 in 2013-14 to 267 for the current school year. The Merrymount School's enrollment was as low as 297 in 2008-09 before peaking at 387 two years ago and dropping to 346 this year. Beechwood Knoll's enrollment went from 344 in 2009-10 to 380 two years ago before falling to 355 this year. Bernazzani went from a 10-year high of 357 students last year to 342 this year, ten more students than were enrolled a decade ago. The Parker School has lost students in the past decade, going from 304 in 2006-07 to 295 this year. At the Squantum School, next in line for replacement after Sterling, 331 students are enrolled, down from 365 in 2011-12.

DeCristofaro said class sizes at the elementary level are "excellent." Classes for kindergarten and grades 4 and 5 average 20 students district-wide. Grades 1, 2 and 3 each average 19 students.

A total of 194 elementary students sought open enrollment this year; 54 of those requests were granted. Fifty requests were made to enroll at Bernazzani, of which 12 were granted. Thirty-five students requested to attend Beechwood Knoll (four granted) and 28 sought to go to Merrymount (two granted).

Quincy Teams Attend DA Morrissey's Peer Leadership Conference

Almost 300 Norfolk County students – including teams from Quincy and North Quincy High – came together at Patriot Place this weekend for a full day Peer Leadership Conference hosted by Norfolk Dist. Atty. Michael Morrissey.

"A strong core of students making healthy choices and promoting constructive activities may be the most important factor in building a strong, safe school community," Morrissey said after the conference.

"Every one of these students was hand-picked by their teachers and administrators because they already play an important role in the life of their school," Morrissey said, "and with the right support, network and assistance they can achieve even more."

Trainers from the Hockomock Area YMCA led two of the seminars, including a "Shark Tank" exercise in which each team pitched their concept for a public service announcement that fits the title "It's Not Worth It," about the real cost of risky behaviors.

"We know that teens often listen to teens more easily than on subjects like impaired driving, substance use and other issues," Morrissey said. "In the coming months, these teams will be developing PSAs that will resonate with other teens. Then we will help spread that work from community to community."

Different high schools are being paired along existing rivalry lines in a new "Team Rival," program where the peer leaders from those schools will compete to collect the Community Service Hours – including involvement in their community's substance abuse prevention coalition meetings and the PSA production.

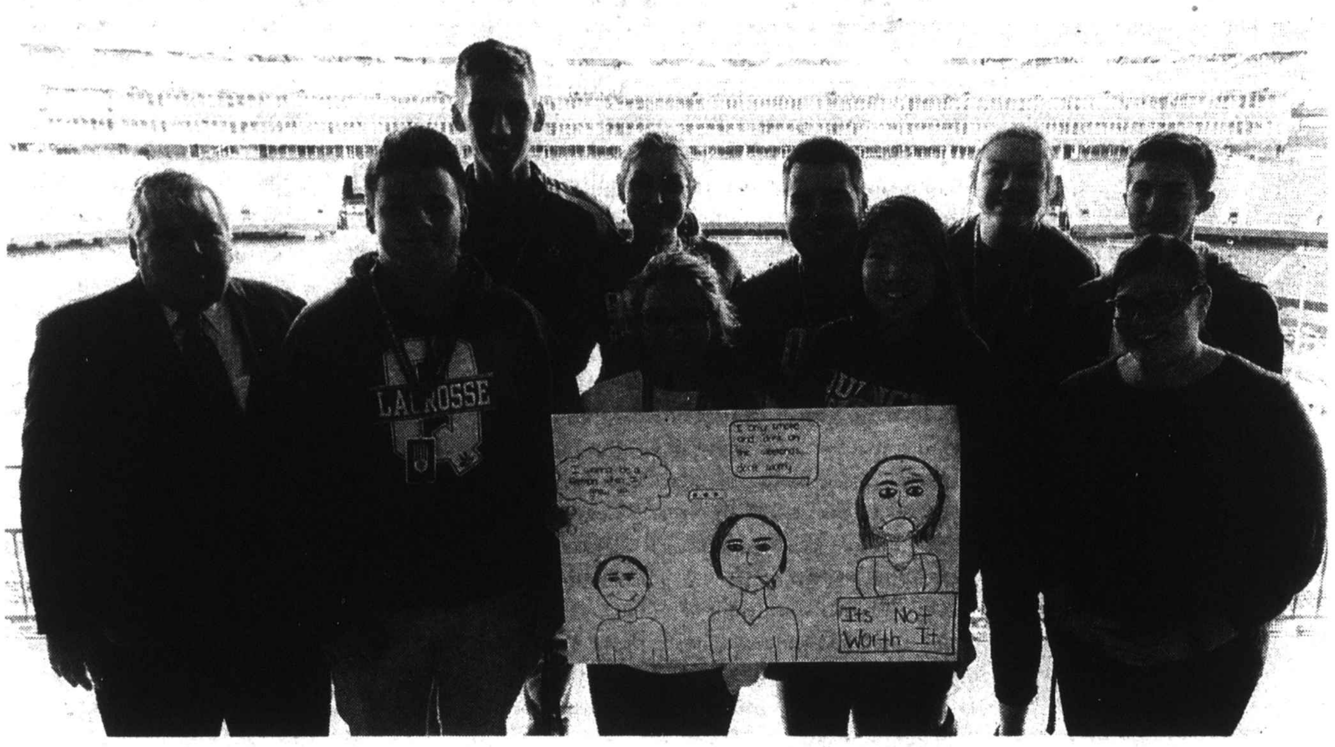
The Team Rival Project and the Public Prevention Campaign are both part of the Norfolk DA's Office's Drunk Driving Trust Fund prevention and education grant for 2015.

"We hope that we have opened some new opportunities and new avenues for those who came," Morrissey said.

The students heard from a young man who, as a teen, killed two of his best friends in a drunk driving crash, a mother who lost her son to an opiate overdose, a young woman whose casual experimentation with a pain pill led to an opiate addiction and overdose and the family of Haley Cremer, a past Norfolk County Peer Leader participant whose life was cut short by a reckless, unlicensed driver just steps from her home.

A "Do Unto Others," award in Cremer's name will be given at future Peer Leadership Conferences starting next year.

Morrissey also thanked the New England Patriots organization and Patriot Place for their longstanding partnership in his public safety and prevention efforts, and for providing an impressive setting for the conference. "It was an appropriate forum for these impressive students," he said.



PEER LEADERS from Quincy High School (above) and North Quincy High School (below) recently attended a conference hosted by Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey (far left, both photos) held at Patriot Place. The students are selected as peer leaders by their teachers and administrators. They were among 300 Norfolk County students who participated in the conference.

Plans For New Sterling Unveiled

students – it can also help enhance the surrounding neighborhood.

"We fully understand that it's a project that is about much more than just replacing an old, tired school building," Dunlap said. "The project is located in a site that occupies a critical piece to the Sterling neighborhood. We think of the project as the opportunity to transform the entire site that really enhances the neighborhood, not only from the school standpoint but the entire community standpoint."

Along those lines, the preliminary plan calls for a new building setback further from Granite Street than the existing school; the new building would sit almost equidistant between Roberts Street and Granite Street, with green space on both sides and a parking area off Roberts Street. A portion of the new building would be located within the footprint of the current building.

The proposed building would also be shorter, with two floors visible from Granite Street and a lower level built into the hill on site and accessible from an entrance on the Roberts Street side. The plan is to reduce the building's scale to better blend in with residences on either side.

"One of our goals with this project would also be to lower the scale of the building on this site. The existing school is four stories; [it is] pretty significant in terms of its size and mass," Dunlap said. "One of our goals would be lower that scale and bring it more into the neighborhood context."

Two entrances on the Granite Street side would be provided for students – one for students in grades 6-8 and the second exclusively for students in grade 5.

The first floor would feature two "academic neighborhoods" – one for fifth graders and the other for sixth graders – which Dunlap explained includes all classrooms and supports spaces for students in those respective grades. The second floor, the building's top floor, would house seventh and eighth graders.

Also on the first floor would be a cafeteria/common area for all students and administrative offices. The school's library would be placed on the second floor, above the cafeteria. The lower level would house the school's auditorium, gymnasium, band rooms and custodial space.

The process to replace the Sterling Middle School, which was built in 1927, began in 2012 when state officials joined local representatives on a site visit. School Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro identified a number of issues at the building during that visit, including electrical and heating systems, as well as the lack of an elevator and handicapped accessibility.

A statement of interest was accepted by the MSBA the following year and in 2014 the state agency approved an enrollment agreement, allowing the city to plan for a facility with room for 430 students. The school had 341 students in grades 5-8 enrolled this year on Oct. 1 and has accommodated as many as 353 students in recent years.

The new Sterling is following on the heels of the $50 million Central Middle School that opened in 2013 and the $126 million Quincy High School that opened in 2010. The city has already begun the process to replace the 96-year-old Squantum Elementary School as well.

Kerwin, whose company has served as project manager for 23 MSBA projects over the past decade, said the design of the new Sterling is moving at "lightning speed."

"We're on a little bit of a fast track in terms of advancing this project. I know the city is anxious to get moving," Kerwin said. "We have a very experienced administration here and certainly Dr. DeCristofaro and his staff have a lot of knowledge from the prior schools so it's been very easy in a lot of respects for us to move this along. We're not telling them too much they haven't already seen or heard before, which has allowed us to really move this along pretty quickly."

City Solicitor Jim Timmins, the chairman of the building committee, said the MSBA will provide a maximum reimbursement of 75 percent of eligible costs for the new Sterling. It is too early, he said, to provide a cost estimate for the project.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci, whose ward includes many families in Sterling's district, said the project is a longtime coming for the community; Councillor Michael McFarland noted the School Committee began discussing a replacement for the building in 1997.

"This is a longtime coming for a community that certainly deserves it, needs it and welcomes it," Palmucci said. "I have the fullest confidence in the superintendent and building committee to create a building that really gives the Sterling school community – the educators, the students, the parents – a school that reflects our community values and our dedication to education and bringing more and more technology into the classroom.

"I expect great things because I've been so impressed with the two buildings we've already done. I expect Sterling will be even better."

Palmucci did, however, identify several concerns his constituents living near the school have raised, including the impact of traffic on Roberts Streets, the potential loss of a basketball court currently located behind Sterling, and how construction of the new school would affect students going there, particularly when the conceptual plan has it partially located within the current building's footprint. Those concerns, he said, could be addressed at a future community meeting on the proposal.

"I just ask that you keep those residents informed and involved as much as you can to let them help shape how this project ultimately turns out," Palmucci said.

"It's a good news story and folks want to be part of the conversation," added Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall, who also represents families in the Sterling district.

Council President Joseph Finn asked Dunlap, the architect, if security measures would be incorporated into the building's design. Dunlap responded that such measures are "front and center" for all new school designs.

"Unfortunately it's become front and center in all design efforts on new schools," Dunlap explained. "The layers of security that have to be built into the thought process now start literally at the edge of the site, move across the site and then into the building and through all aspects of the building – things you wouldn't even think about."

People who abuse are psychos/crazy.

Gov. Baker Bill Targets Opioid Epidemic

"Our administration has already implemented a series of the working group's recommendations to tackle this epidemic from every angle, ranging from prevention to recovery support."

"Our administration is utilizing every tool in the toolbox to fight the opioid crisis tainting every corner of the Commonwealth," Lt. Governor Karyn Polito added. "Filing today's bill serves as the latest call to action to execute a dynamic strategy and we look forward to working with the legislature to enact meaningful laws to help our citizens."

If the bill were approved by the Legislature, a patient receiving a prescription for an opioid for the first time would be limited to a 72-hour supply; the same limitation would apply when a patient sees a new doctor. Emergency situations would be exempted from the limit and the Department of Public Health would be allowed to identify additional exceptions.

Practitioners, including emergency room personnel, would also be required to check the state's prescription monitoring program before prescribing an opiate.

All practitioners of prescribed substances would need to receive five hours of training related to effective pain management and the identification of patients at high risk for substance use disorder every two years. Public schools participating in the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association would likewise be required to provide training for parents, coaches, trainers and parent volunteers, physicians and nurses on the dangers of opioid use during the annual mandatory head injury safety training program.

Medical professionals would be granted the authority to involuntarily commit an individual for treatment for 72 hours if they pose a danger to themselves or others; doctors can already involuntarily commit a patient with mental health issues for 72 hours if they are deemed a threat to themselves or others.

Currently, individuals suffering from substance-use disorders can only be held for treatment through an order from the courts, which are not always in session, limiting access for families and patients in need of a 24-hour "front door" to treatment for a substance-related emergency," Baker said.

Sen. John Keenan, who is the vice chairman of a special Senate committee on substance abuse, said the caution is needed in implementing that part of Baker's proposal because enough long-term recovery beds may not be available for those who receive help at an emergency room.

"I applaud the governor for his efforts, for his creative thinking, for his willingness to tackle this issue. He's done some great, great things," Keenan said Oct. 13 in response to published reports on Baker's proposal.

"On this one, I think we've got to proceed cautiously. We may find ourselves in a situation like we did relative to mental health. We've got people who were and still are being boarded in emergency departments – they go there in an acute situation and then there is nowhere else for them to go and they end up being boarded there for hours, for days and sometimes weeks.

"If we have an increasing number of people going to an emergency department with the idea that they can be kept there for three days they will be in active detox, we have to figure out where they will go next and if we don't have the beds for them – the next level of treatment – we're going to find ourselves in a situation much like we did trying to address the boarding issue with mental health patients."

Baker's legislation does include several amendments to the state's civil commitment law. Under one change, women could no longer be committed to MCI-Framingham on a civil commitment for substance abuse. A second provision would authorize the Department of Mental Health to identify beds in its treatment facilities that could be used to treat individuals who have been civilly committed for substance abuse.

Masons Thanked For Contributions To School System

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy Public Schools administrators thanked the Rural Lodge of Masons for pledging to donate more than $20,000 to the school system for the upcoming school year during a recent School Committee.

The Rural Lodge of Masons, whose temple in Quincy Center was gutted by a four-alarm fire in September 2013, has pledged money to support three different initiatives in the school system.

Rachel's Challenge – a series of student empowering events for seventh and ninth graders meant to create an atmosphere of compassion and kindness to help students and parents fight bullying – received $7,000 from the Rural Lodge this year.

The Lincoln-Hancock and Snug Harbor Elementary Schools each received an automated external defibrillator (AED), a device that can be used to treat sudden cardiac arrest. The AEDs and related supplies cost $3,269.

The lion's share of the Rural Lodge's donations – $10,000 ¬– went towards positive behavioral interventions and supports. PIBS, as it is known, is being implemented in the school system's elementary and middle schools: The program is meant to encourage positive behavior among students to boost academic progress.

"Research does show us that schools make greater academic gains when they simultaneously build a school-wide positive social culture," Maura Papile, the school system's senior director of student support services, explained.

"We created an organized, data-driven system of intervention, strategies and supports that positively impact school-wide culture and individualized behavior planning. We teach behavioral expectations in the same manner we teach core curriculum. We create a process that is consistent with core principles of response to instruction with differentiated instruction components in place for all students based on a tier system."

Principals of four schools – Christine Barrett of Point Webster, Steve Sylvia of Squantum, Ruth Witmer of Lincoln-Hancock, and Rene Malvesti of Montclair – each explained how they've implemented PIBS in their schools. At the Squantum Elementary School, for example, a school-wide assembly was recently held to recognize one student in each classroom for displaying their greatest effort in safety, which was the focus during the month of September. In October, the students are now focusing on respect.

School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro said new initiatives like PIBS usually take between three and five years to implement. He said the support of the Masons – and the work done by Papile and the principals – have helped the program get off to a strong start.

"We're very, very lucky to have your continued support because you just simply make a difference every day in the Quincy Public Schools," DeCristofaro said to David Smith and Jeffrey Squires, who were on hand from the Rural Lodge to accept a certificate.

"Thank you very, very much."

Squires, whose wife is a schoolteacher in Braintree, said education played an important part of his life.

"One of the reasons I joined Masonry was to help people and through the Masons I've been able to help lots of people with the programs we do and the donations we make," Squires said.

"Being a special ed. child myself when I was younger…I wouldn't be here if it wasn't for the teachers in my life. It goes to show [education] really does get people where they need to go in life."

Burglary, Home Invasion Under Investigation

By SCOTT JACKSON

Investigators with the Quincy Police Department are continuing to investigate a home invasion and a potentially related burglary that took place within a half-hour of each other last week.

Around 10 p.m. on Oct. 14, officers were called to 159 Willard St. in West Quincy for a report of a breaking and entering in progress, according to Police Capt. John Dougan. The victim told officers he entered his apartment when three black males came down stairs from the third floor of the apartment.

The suspects placed the victim into a headlock, demanding money and told him not to yell. The victim told police he might have lost consciousness because the suspects were gone when he opened his eyes; he was taken to Quincy Medical Center for minor injuries.

The victim reported an iPhone, iPad and an envelope and money clip with cash were stolen.

Dougan said the suspects were described as black males wearing hoodies; one had a black hoodie, another a gray hoodie and one had a red ball cap under his hoodie.

About a half-hour later, officers responded to an armed home invasion on Edwin Street in North Quincy. The victims said they were sitting in an enclosed porch when two black males with dark colored hoodies pushed the door to the porch open. One of the suspects then pointed a silver revolver at them, forcing them into the residents. The victims were then zip-tied and one was forced on the floor at gunpoint. One victim was struck in the head with the handgun during the home invasion.

The suspects told the victims they were looking for someone who did not reside at the Edwin Street residence, Dougan said.

One suspect – the one with the silver handgun – was described as a black male between 25 and 32 years old, about 5'10" to 6' tall with a medium build. He was wearing a charcoal hooded sweatshirt and had a hospital-type mask covering his mouth under the hood. He was wearing dark colored pants and Adidas sneakers.

The second suspect, who was carrying a dark colored handgun, was also wearing a dark colored hooded sweatshirt, possibly greenish or blue. He had on dark colored pants and black sneakers.

The investigation into both incidents is ongoing as of Tuesday. Anyone with information is asked to contact Det. Ed Bagley at 617-745-5766 or can submit a tip using the police department's MyPD app.

O'Donnell Emphasizes Need To File Mortgage Discharges

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reminds consumers about the importance of filing a mortgage discharge in a timely manner after their mortgage has been paid off.

"During our office hours, one of the most common asked questions by homeowners is whether they have clear title to their property," O'Donnell said. "This can be determined by accessing the Registry's online records and verifying if all mortgages associated with the property have been discharged."

When a mortgage is paid off, O'Donnell said a mortgage discharge document needs to be recorded with the Registry of Deeds to clear a homeowner's property title. "A discharge is a document (typically one page) issued by the lender, usually with a title such as "Discharge of Mortgage" or "Satisfaction of Mortgage," he said.

In many instances, O'Donnell said, "Discharges are sometimes filed directly by banks or settlement attorneys with the Registry as part of a property sale or as a result of a refinancing transaction. In other cases, the mortgage discharge is sent to the property owner who is then responsible for making sure the document is recorded at the Registry.

"Whether or not a discharge is recorded by the lending institution or the individual property owner, it is ultimately the responsibility of the property owner to check and make sure that all necessary documents have been recorded at the Registry of Deeds," he said.

The Register further mentioned that there have been cases where no discharge has been recorded against a long paid off mortgage. Unfortunately, many of the lending institutions that provided funds for these mortgages in the first place are no longer in existence, in most cases these financial entities have merged with another lending institution.

Homeowners cannot sell their property without having all mortgage discharges recorded.

If a property owner needs to retrieve an original discharge of a mortgage and is unclear which lending institution is now responsible for providing the document, an option is to contact the Massachusetts Division of Banks at 1-800-495-2265. This government agency can assist the consumer in tracking down contact information for the lending institution that is responsible for the mortgage.

When recording a discharge, the original document is required. The Registry of Deeds does not accept photo copies or faxed copies of documents. The filing fee, set by state statute, is $76.

"After paying off all the mortgages on their property, homeowners want to be assured that they have clear title to their property, especially if they are contemplating selling it," O'Donnell said. "Being diligent and aware of what is required will go a long way in giving the homeowner peace of mind.

"The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds is staffed with a team of customer service representatives who can be reached Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at 781-461-6101. These representatives have been trained in researching documents and are well versed on the subject of mortgage discharges and what, if necessary, needs to be done to clear title to a property."

Ask Barbara Graceffa: Secretary Of The Interior

BARBARA GRACEFFA

In my country-style dining room, I have one large bank of windows that are dressed with expensive but plain beige curtain panels. Can you suggest any ideas on how to change the look but still use the existing panels? Jennifer

You have lots of options and many of them are low-cost, too.

First, you can accessorize the existing window treatments. If you window treatments are always open, try weaving some silk flowers along the curtain rod or placing a large floral spray in the center of the rod; you can change these seasonally, of course. Or add a series of straw hats along the rod or a more eclectic collection of country accessories like tin lanterns and natural, textured wreathes.

Another idea is to pin some triangularly folded dinner napkins or placemats to the top of the panels for a different look. You can tie back the panels with raffia, ribbons, jewelry, or even scarves or neckties to add some country flair.

You can also add a valance or window scarf in a color which complements your décor; that scarf could even be a tablecloth or light-weight quilt. Or transform the look of panels into soft balloon shades by using decorative ribbons to hold up each side.

Second, you can alter the existing panels by painting a stencil motif or free-handing a new design using fabric markers along the sides or bottom edge.

If you can sew, add some ball fringe or other trim along the inside edges or a large solid or print border to the panels (assuming they do not already approach the floor). If you do not sew, add a strip of fabric like gingham along the edge using iron-on double-faced fusible tape.

Even a few hanging plants can produce a fresh look. Adding a string of lights to the plants or around the window trim is another option that could work with any of the above.

Do you have a decorating problem needing a professional solution? Send your questions to Secretary of the Interior at barbara@sec-interior.com.

Police Marine Unit Embarks U.S. Naval Sea Cadet Corps

Officer Mike Foley and the QPD Marine Unit "Guardian, a former 41-foot USCG patrol boat, recently embarked three US Navy sponsored units from Massachusetts and New Hampshire Sea Cadet programs (Quincy, Boston, and New Londonderry, NH).

Ranging in age, 13-18, the cadets undergo rigorous training with various military, public safety, and first response marine units like Quincy Police Department. Upon completion of the program, many of the cadets receive congressional nominations to one of the federal academies and or have the option of enlisting as E-3's.

Underway, the cadets had a chance to experience the nautical heritage throughout Boston Harbor. Additionally and through a collaborative partnership with Hanscom AFB and the Mitre Corp, the cadets were introduced to the prototype maritime Mobile Adhoc Network (MANET) communications suite.

Through a collaborative research and development partnership with the Mitre Corp. and Hanscom AFB, the QPD Marine Unit under Lt. Bob Gillan, who is a Mass. Maritime Academy graduate and was one of the original Sea Cadet plankowners at the Quincy Navy Reserve Center, and Officer Foley helped field the innovative technology for the USCG First District and other maritime stakeholders in Boston Harbor.

Mike Hussey, a graduate of the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy in Kings Point N.Y., Master Mariner, and former US Navy LCDR, accompanied the cadets on the QPD Guardian and also hosted them at the Mitre Corp. this past Columbus Day

"This was an outstanding opportunity for the local Sea Cadet program, and the QPD Marine Unit is certainly at the forefront of maritime tactical operations and training," Hussey said.

Mike McFARLAND

COUNCILLOR AT LARGE

Vote Tuesday, November 3rd

The City of Quincy is a great place to live, to work and to raise our families. My top priority if elected will be to continue to improve the quality of life in the City of Quincy while balancing residential and commercial interests. I will continue to make all voting decisions based on a high standard for the quality of life and maintaining value for all of our residents and taxpayers. We are home to over 95,000 people and we need to have strong schools and feel safe in our homes and enjoy our City.

Over the last twenty years I have seen major demographic changes in our City. Working together with the Mayor, the School Committee and our federal and state delegations, I have provided the resources necessary to sustain and improve our quality of life.

The Quincy Public Schools provide an excellent education to our residents. Our staff includes well-trained teachers and offers a variety of academic and vocational programs. Our facilities continue to be upgraded and we have a new Quincy High School, a new Central Middle School and a projected new Sterling Middle School which is under design and review. Window replacement projects and energy efficient heating systems leveraged with state and federal grants will allow us to utilize our schools for years to come.

Public safety works its way into this balance. I will continue to vote for strong police and fire departments. We need effective manpower, equipment, training and communications. As the nature of threats continues to change we must be ready, willing and able to handle them. I will continue to push for drug education at the school level and use public access television to educate residents of all ages. Education, enforcement and rehabilitation are the only ways we can reduce this curse.

We need clean water and reliable sewers and storm drains. Systematic water main replacements and relining of the sewer system to prevent seepage are necessary expenditures to maintain our quality of life. I will continue to work with both our City and state delegations to leverage any MWRA grants and MWPAT grant programs that might be available.

I will continue to support public works and parks projects. We must keep our streets and sidewalks in good repair and maintain park spaces for our residents to enjoy. A clean and inviting city helps to promote civic pride and benefits both residential and commercial interests.

The needs of education, public safety, infrastructure and the neighborhoods must be balanced with available revenue resources. I will continue to vote for projects that sustain a quality of life and value for all of us through strong fiscal management and sound capital planning. We can move ahead if we all work together: taxpayers, residents, elected city and state officials. The solutions for a better quality of life are here. Quincy is my home and your home so let's be proud of it and continue to work together.

North Quincy Golf Team Making Strides

By JOE REARDON

Slowly and meticulously, the North Quincy golf team has gone about improving on the courses of the South Shore under head coach Bob Doyle, now in his ninth season.

Doyle likes what he has seen from his club so far as it goes up against a very difficult Patriot League schedule.

“We’re making strides,” said Doyle before a recent match. “We had a very close match with Quincy where we only won by two strokes. We’re young with just five seniors on the team.”

The Patriot League is notoriously tough in golf with strong programs that include Hingham, Duxbury and Hanover who are encouraged to play year around and it shows on the fairways and greens. So far, the Red Raider wins have come against nonleague opponent Saugus as well as a 25-stroke victory over Middleboro.

With 21 matches, North Quincy will get better as the season wears on and Doyle is encouraged by the positive attitude the team has been putting out. The crew at Granite Links has been supporting the team as well.

“Even in the matches we lost, they’ve shown a lot of competitiveness,” said Doyle. “Only eight can play in a match but on those off days I have kids who are out there working on their game and handing their score cards.”

Like Doyle said, the talent is there and it starts with Tom Maranian, who has an average of 39 for nine holes. Right now it looks as though the talented Maranian will be the lone representative at the states for the Red Raiders. Overall the team shoots on average of 43-47.

Kevin Johnson has shown a lot of progress, as has Austin Lee, Kevin McDonald and Dan Johnson-Tatelbaum.

“I couldn’t be prouder with the effort they’ve given. This year I’m making it a little more competitive. Most schools have a set lineup with eight golfers. I have five so different guys can earn it in practice matches. The work ethic has been phenomenal like I said.”This year we have a lot more guys working their game and it’s great to see. The future looks good for us. A lot of my guys are three-sport athletes so they have a comittment with hockey and baseball. Realistically, they’re playing about 10 or 12 rounds with the other schools out there pumping out 20 or 30 rounds.”

Doyle is a wealth of knowledge when it comes to the game but he is quick to bend ear of to pick pointers that would translate to North Quincy’s game.

“I took golf up in college,” he said. “I’m always picking the brains of other coaches. There’s a ton of stuff to teach and and you’re always learning and I try to convey that to the kids.”

Quincy Golf Team Showing Improvement

By JOE REARDON

Head coach Lou Venturelli knows what the jolt Quincy High needs on the golf course to get the players going.

“The hope is I get a freshman that didn’t get cut and he’s here and maybe in the summer after the season ends he falls in love with it and starts playing a lot,” said the coach, now in his 11th season.

Venturelli was busy going through his roster before a recent contest against the rock-solid Harbormen of Hingham to figure out what eight players were going to take on the elite crew. These are trying times for the Presidents. Learning to perfect your golf is one thing. Having to stand and deliver in the Patriot League is something completely different.

Still looking for their first win, the Presidents did push North Quincy to the breaking point their first time around, falling by just two strokes, 260-262 at Granite Links. It was a pretty “jovial” match Venturelli said because most of the kids played youth hockey against each other.

“That has been our best effort,” Venturelli said. “We lost by 15 strokes to Middleboro. I thought that was a winable match but we just didn’t play well.”

Ben Regan, a senior captain has flourished this season and has stepped forward as the squad’s best golfer. “He can compete,” said Venturelli. “He shot a two over against Duxbury. The Duxbury kid, though, shot a four under. He’s been our high scorer in just about every match.”

Venturelli has plenty of expertise alongside with his brother Dom and Joe Salvucci when it comes to coaching but their collective hands are tied on match days because the MIAA doesn’t allow coaches talking to their players on the field.

Venturelli, though, doesn’t always consider himself a coach but a manager because the kids have their own swings and he doesn’t want to change them too much if he doesn’t have to.

And Venturelli knows it’s a pipe dream now slaying the likes of Hingham, Hanover, Duxbury, Silver Lake and Scituate in the Patriot League, this year anyway.

“Many of those kids grew up on a golf course,” he said. “We’ve had guys come in who have never played before and I do not (make) cuts. It’s difficult to do because they don’t get much work because when we travel we only take eight. They’re only getting half the season to be honest with you.”

Venturelli believes, though, it’s important to throw the kids into the fire and get a feel of what’s to come.”

“It’s a tough sport to come out and not have any skills in the sport,” he said. “You’ve got to make your way on the golf course and you have to push through and shoot through your mistakes to get better. I’ve seen improvement amongst the kids who play regularly. The kids who are playing out there in practice are doing well too. We have seven juniors so if they practice in the summer we could be pretty good next year. I’m not saying we’ll beat these teams but we will be competitive.”

Other members of the Presidents include: Liam Gambon, Phil Cjakowski, Eoin Tierney, Nolan Walker, Nick Murray, Bobby Dunn and Matt O’Brien.

VOICE FOR HEALTH
by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

STRIKE UP THE BAND

Pain along the outer side of the knee, particularly among runners, is likely due to "iliotibial band syndrome." This type of pain usually begins a few minutes into a run and progressively worsens until it forces the runner to stop. The cause of this pain is an overly tight iliotibial band, the hard band of fiber at the outside of the thigh that extends down to the knee. It starts at the rim of the pelvis, crosses the point of the hip, comes down the thigh across the outer side of the knee, and attaches below the knee. To address underlying causes of this problem, the chiropractor will likely conduct gait analysis with particular focus on the hip abductor muscles.

We promote a drugless, non-invasive form of health care that addresses your lifestyle and physical issues affecting your joints and spine through procedures such as custom exercise routines. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, our office and our friendly staff will work you one-on-one to find the root of the problem. We invite you to call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we are currently accepting new patients. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort.

P.S. The hip abductor muscles are a group of four muscles located in the buttocks. Their primary function is to separate the legs from the midline of the body, which occurs during any athletic movement requiring side-to-side motion.

Handsom-Fields Scores 3 TDs But Presidents Bow To Hingham

The Quincy High football team bowed to Hingham 36-25 last Friday night at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

It was a strong effort on the ground by the Presidents' offense as senior running back Jahvae Handsom-Fields rushed for 199 yards on 31 carries. Quarterback Cody Desmond ran for 66 yards and Garrett Cronin had the rest.

Handsom-Field had three touchdowns (3 yards, 6 yards and 6 yards) and a two-point conversion for the Presidents. Desmond scored Quincy's other touchdown on a 9-yard run up the middle on a quarterback sneak.

Desmond also ran for a two-point conversion after Handsom-Fields' second TD. But the Presidents failed on three other conversions.

Head Coach Bill Reardon is optimistic that some of his injured linebackers will return to action. He said the team's defense also needs to improve on stopping teams on third down.

"We just can't seem to get off the field on third down. We make plays on the first and second down as Mike Munroe continues to dominate on the defensive line," Reardon said, noting Munroe received high praise from Hingham's head coach who called the senior captain the best lineman in the league.

"We are actually struggling in the secondary as a result of the injuries and the need to play so many underclassmen and first-year players," Reardon said.

The Presidents visit Duxbury Friday night at 7 p.m.

State Resolution Proclaims Quincy 'Most Patriotic City'

A resolution before the Massachusetts General Court proclaims Quincy, Mass. the Most Patriotic City in America, citing a uniquely powerful list of historic landmarks and contributions to American history from the 1700s through today.

A public hearing will be held at the State House on Wednesday, Oct. 28 at 1:30 p.m. before the Joint Committee of Veterans and Federal Affairs (Hearing Room A-2). Quincy residents, and citizens of any community, are invited to attend and show their support.

The resolution (Bill No. H3128) memorializes the Congress of the United States to declare Quincy the Most Patriotic City in America. It was filed by state Rep. Bruce Ayers (1st Norfolk District) and written with the help of Quincy resident and journalist Kerry Byrne.

"Quincy deserves national recognition as a historic and patriotic community that has made unique and defining contributions to the United States of America and to the ideals of representative government around the world," said Ayers. "The people of Quincy carry on this legacy today in their service to the nation and to each other, in their support of our veterans, in their patriotic celebrations, and in the pride they exhibit as citizens of the City of Presidents."

Quincy is the birthplace of two Founding Fathers and two signers of the Declaration of Independence, and the only city in America that is the birthplace of two U.S presidents. John and John Quincy Adams are entombed in the crypt of United First Parish Church ("Church of the Presidents") in Quincy Center, beside First Ladies Abigail and Louisa Catherine Adams. Visitors can touch their granite tombs, each draped in period American flags.

The church is located about one block from the Quincy birthplace of John Hancock, the famed patriot and president of the second Continental Congress whose very signature stands today as a global symbol of defiance against tyranny.

"Hancock gave the American Revolution its financial foundation and John Adams gave the Revolution its intellectual foundation," said Byrne. "Two Quincy boys pledged their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor to the creation of a new nation. It's a very powerful legacy for one community, but just one part of our city's great legacy."

Sixty-nine veterans of the American Revolution are buried today in 375-year Hancock Cemetery in Quincy Center, across from the Church of the Presidents.

Adams penned the Massachusetts Constitution, the world's oldest constitution and inspiration for the U.S. Constitution, in his Quincy home which still stands today. Quincy is the home of 108 sites on the National Register of Historic Places, seven National Historic Landmarks, the Adams National Historical Park and the nation's first presidential library.

The resolution also outlines how Quincy helped defend its revolutionary values against tyranny in the 20th century: two Quincy men received the Medal of Honor for their bravery in World War II, while Quincy airman Charles Sweeney dropped the atomic bomb that delivered victory to the allies and ended humanity's deadliest war. The city's industrial might produced many of America's most powerful warships. Two victorious Quincy-built World War II vessels are still afloat today and have been designated National Historic Landmarks: battleship USS Massachusetts (BB59) and aircraft carrier USS Lexington (CV16).

Quincy celebrates its patriotic legacy in many ways, including the nation's oldest Flag Day parade, a red-white-and-blue family spectacle held each year since 1952.

"The City of Presidents today still proudly supports the values of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness that our forebears here in Quincy fought to create," said Ayers.

18-Year-Old Struck, Killed By Train

By SCOTT JACKSON

An MBTA commuter rail train struck and killed an 18-year-old Quincy resident around 8:30 p.m. on Oct. 23, according to MBTA Transit Police. Foul play is not suspected.

Lt. Richard Sullivan declined to release the identity of teenager Monday afternoon, saying only that he was an 18-year-old male resident of Quincy.

Around 8:30 p.m. on Oct. 23, Transit Police, the Quincy Fire Department and EMS personnel responded to a report that a commuter train struck a person approximately 150 yards south of the Wollaston MBTA station by a commuter rail train on the Old Colony Line. The teen was pronounced deceased as a result of injuries sustained in collision.

Detectives with the Transit Police and the investigators with the Norfolk District Attorney's Office do not suspect foul play. Sullivan said Monday Transit Police would not be releasing any further updates on the incident.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Wednesday, October 14, 2015, at approximately 4:30 p.m., the Quincy Police Drug Control Unit (Detectives Sgt. Tapper, Detectives Powers, Cassidy, Glennon, and O'Brien were conducting surveillance in the West Quincy Area due to concerns about drug activity.

Detective O'Brien observed a vehicle looping the area of Brook Road and Water Street as he appeared to be looking for someone. At about 4:40 p.m., Detective Cassidy spotted the same vehicle as it pulled into the Star Market lot and the male driver/sole occupant/aka suspect 1 got out and went into the Rite Aid Pharmacy. After a few minutes, suspect 1exited this Rite Aid store and drove directly to the Rite Aid Pharmacy located on Hancock Street in North Quincy, followed by Detective Cassidy. Suspect 1 again went into the store.

At this time, a red Ford pulled into the Rite Aid parking lot occupied by one male/suspect 2, who exited his vehicle and stood outside. Suspect 1 exited Rite Aid and walked over to suspect 2 and after speaking with one another for a minute, they both got back in their cars. They then drove off together to the Walgreen's Pharmacy located on Adams Street, where suspect 1 went into the pharmacy and came out a few minutes later as suspect 2 waited in his car. Suspect 1 came out of Walgreen's and walked over to suspect 2's car and spoke with him briefly. Again they drove off together in separate cars, ending up at the Walgreen's Pharmacy located at 324 Hancock Street.

Suspect 1 went into the pharmacy as suspect 2 again waited in his car. After a few minutes, suspect 1 came out and walked to suspect 2's car and spoke with him for about ten minutes. Suspect 1 then went back into the pharmacy. When he did this, suspect 2 got out of his car and stood there waiting. Suspect 1 came out with a prescription bag and walked over to suspect 2. They spoke briefly and then suspect 1 got into the suspect 2's passenger seat while suspect 2 remained outside the car. After about a minute, suspect 2 leaned into the open passenger door window briefly and then stood up and got back into his car.

At that time, the Detectives involved in the investigation believed that the suspects were just involved in a drug transaction. Both suspects then got into their respective cars and drove back towards the Walgreens on Adams Street. At the intersection of Harvard Street and Elmwood Avenue, they both took a left onto Elmwood Avenue. They stayed together taking a right onto Norfolk Street and then crossed Granger Street where they both pulled over to the side of the road. Suspect 2 exited his vehicle and walked back to suspect 1's vehicle.

After a brief conversation which appeared to involve giving directions, the vehicles headed off in different directions. Detective Sergeant Tapper, along with Detectives Cassidy, and Powers, followed suspect 2 while Detectives Glennon and O'Brien followed suspect 1. Suspect 2 was stopped on Warren Avenue, where Detective Cassidy had suspect 2 exit the vehicle and then read him his rights to which he stated he understood. Suspect 2 stated that he had just met his friend but wouldn't say anything else.

LT. DAN MINTON

Detective Cassidy then searched the vehicle and located a Walgreen's prescription bag in the center console. Inside the bag was a CVS prescription pill bottle with the label ripped off containing (100) yellow capsules marked with IG322 / 300mg believed to be Gabapentin and (60) Suboxone strips. This information was relayed to the Detectives who were following suspect 1. Suspect 2, a 45 year old Braintree resident, was placed under arrest for Possession Class B, E, and Conspiracy to Violate Drug Laws. Suspect 1 drove back to the Walgreen's at 550 Adams Street and went into the pharmacy, coming out moments later with a prescription bag.

As he approached his vehicle, the Detectives placed the suspect under arrest. Suspect 1 was holding a prescription for Adderall he just received from Walgreens. He also had a prescription bottle in his left pant pocket which was for (84) Suboxone strips which was just filled at the Walgreens at 324 Hancock Street Inside the prescription bottle were only (24) Suboxone strips which had the same lot# as the Suboxone strips located on suspect 2. In suspect 1's right change pocket was a crumbled up CVS prescription pill bottle label with the someone else's name on it which had a description of the pills that should be in the bottle. It said, "Yellow oblong shaped capsule imprinted with 300mg on the one side and IG322 on the other". This description matched the yellow capsules found on suspect 2 and the ripped label had CVS on it. Suspect 2 also possessed $475.00 dollars and an iphone. In suspect 1's car was the paper directions for Suboxone strips that are stapled to the prescription bag but the prescription bag was not found.

The Detectives believed that the Walgreen's prescription bag found in suspect 2's car was the prescription bag for suspect 1's Suboxone prescription and that suspect 1 placed the (60) Suboxone strips and a pill bottle containing (100) yellow capsules into it and then gave it to suspect 2. Suspect 1, a 37 year old Revere resident, was charged with Distribution Class B (Suboxone), Distribution Class E (Gabapentin), Possession WID (Suboxone), and Conspiracy to Violate Drug Laws. The $475.00 and iphone 6 found on suspect 1 were seized pending civil forfeiture. Nice Work!

INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE SCAM: I have recently received numerous calls from citizens who are getting calls from people claiming to be from the IRS, demanding payment for late taxes. There have been threats that the local Police will come to your door to arrest you or you will be taken to court and put in jail. The IRS does not call you to discuss any issues they may have with you – their initial contact is by letter instructing you to contact a specific person within the agency. If you have caller ID, "Google" the telephone number to see who else has reported this fraudulent activity. When in doubt, call the Quincy Police Department at 617 479 1212 for assistance.

Top Priorities If Elected

If elected, my top priorities will be to continue to develop the City Council as the appropriate check and balance to the Mayor and provide a platform for the serious discussion regarding matters that impact the community at large. This includes ensuring the City Council's role in the continued development of our city along the principles of "smart growth" and to address constituent concerns related to traffic, parking and aging infrastructure.

I will push for renewal of the Pavement Management technology and rational plans for both maintenance and repair of city streets. Now near completion, I will implement the new technology that makes all city information available for the City Council and to expand access to information for all the citizens of Quincy.

I will work hard to renew the City's commitment to affordable housing targeted to working families at 60 to 100 percent of area median income in order to allow more Quincy working citizens the ability to rent or own homes in Quincy. I will again address the concerns of aging utilities and infrastructure, working closely with our state delegation to address the problems such as gas leaks, street repairs, etc.

I will continue to strengthen the position of City Auditor in order to provide professional oversight of our City Budget, Water & Sewer accounts and better fiscal management in order protect tax payers from the unnecessary levies and appropriations that result in higher taxes.

I will stay focused on urging the creation of appropriate reserves in our City Budget and toward further reducing our unfunded liabilities and monitoring our bond utilization and debt.

Finally, I will work on ways to improve accessibility of constituents to every aspect of city government.

Top Priorities If Elected

The City of Quincy continues to be a great place to live, to work and to raise our families. My top priority, if elected will be to continue to improve the quality of life in the City of Quincy while balancing residential and commercial interests. I will continue to make all voting decisions based on quality of life and value for all of our residents and taxpayer. We are home to over 95,000 people who need strong schools and need to feel safe and enjoy their City.

Over the last twenty years I have seen major demographic changes in our City. Working with the Mayor, the School Committee and our federal and state delegation, I feel we have provided the resources necessary to continue and improve our quality of life.

The Quincy Public Schools provides an excellent education to our residents. Trained teachers and a variety of academic and vocational programs exist. The facilities continue to upgraded, a new Quincy High School, a new Central Middle School and Sterling middle school under design and review. Window replacement projects and energy efficient heating systems leveraged with state and federal grants allow us to move the schools forward.

Public safety works its way into this balance. I will continue to vote for strong police and fire departments. We need manpower, equipment, training and communications. As threats continue to change we must be ready, willing and able to handle them. I will continue to push for drug education at the school level and use access TV to educate the public. Education, enforcement and rehabilitation are the only ways we can reduce this curse.

Another priority of mine is to continue to upgrade and replace our aging water, sewer and drain infrastructure. I will continue to work to improve storm water runoff and insure that only safe water enters the waterways. Systematic water main replacements and relining of the sewer system to prevent seepage are necessary expenditures to improve our quality of life. I will continue to work with both our City and state delegations to leverage any MWRA grants and MWPAT grant programs that might be available.

I will continue to support public works and park projects. A priority is keeping our streets and sidewalks in good repair and park spaces for our residents to enjoy. A clean and inviting city helps maintain the balance of both residential and commercial interests.

My top priority, if elected is to maintain a balanced budget. I have over the last several years as finance chairman of the City Council recommended and passed a balance budget. The needs of education, public safety, infrastructure and the neighborhoods must be balanced with available revenue resources. My top priority is to continue to provide quality of life and value for my neighbors through strong fiscal management and sound capital planning. We can make it work if we all work together taxpayers, residents, elected city and state officials. The solutions for a better quality of life are here. Quincy is my home and your home be proud and keep working together.

Municipal Experience: Current School Committee Member, Former Park & Recreation Board Member.

Family: Married to my wife Niamh, sons Tyler and Aidan

Top Priorities If Elected

If elected, my top priorities will be to take the burden off the taxpayers with revenue coming in from the new downtown development. I will support commercial based real estate including stores, restaurants and a big box department store. This will attract people to Quincy as dwellers, as well as visitors from other South Shore towns.

We need to explore other city models like the Seaport District in South Boston and Somerville. We need to find out what strives for those areas, analyze our demographics and incorporate it into what the vision of Quincy should be. I have experience in businesses, marketing and understand what a consumer is looking for. We also need to compliment the downtown with revitalization of the Wollaston Center, as well as other areas of the city.

The opioid epidemic is an area of concern for me, as I have lost friends to this powerful drug epidemic. We need to continue to educate in our schools. As a school committee member I have been involved in awareness programs inside the schools. I already have a working relationship with the superintendent, principles, elected officials, and other activists throughout the Commonwealth. I have worked with outside non-profits to educate, mentor and give awareness programs to the public. We need to continue to work with the Quincy Police, firefighters and first responders in combating this epidemic.

Some accomplishments on my years on the school committee have been the balance of the AP (Advanced Placement) at the other 4 middle schools. Starting this September for the first time ever, Atlantic, Sterling, Broad Meadows and Point-Webster have AP classes to complement the existing AP program at Central Middle School. Also, this past September we have included a peer mentoring program for all incoming freshman at both Quincy and North Quincy High Schools to help make a smooth transition from middle school to high school. Lastly, I have been a huge activist for the arts and music programs throughout the city. Over the last 2 years, the combined Quincy and North High Marching Band have increased 50% in enrollment from 60 to 90 students.

Knocking on doors for several months, many residents are concerned with the sidewalks, roadways and trees. I want to look further into a capital improvement plan and funding for our city. I will work with ward councillors to see which area is the most concern throughout the city.

Traffic concerns have come up while talking to residents and visiting senior houses. We need to look at other avenues of transportation which include upgrades with the MBTA trains as well as buses, bike paths and a boat ferry system. I have personally talked to several residents in Marina Bay that are interested in a ferry system into Boston. Transportation solutions need to be looked resulting from new development of apartments, condominiums and houses throughout the city.

Being a former president of the Ward 2 Civic Association, I understand how important it is as a city councillor to work on issues with civic and neighborhood associations. Our common goal is to maintain a clean and safe neighborhood for all citizens. I feel my involvement throughout the city over the last five years has given me a working relationship with these civic leaders at the Houghs Neck Community Council, Wollaston-Montclair Association, Ward 5 Neighborhood Association, Wollaston Hill Association as well as the Ward 2 Civic Association.

Ultimately, as small business owner I can apply my skills to city government. I will bring my business background, community activism and family experience to the City Council in order to keep a balanced approach when making decisions.

Top Priorities If Elected

I am running for At-Large City Council because I want to make a difference in the neighborhoods that raised me. I want to give back to the community that taught me the value of hard work. I want to help the working families of Quincy, and together, make our city an even greater place to live, work, and raise a family.

As I've gone door to door meeting with the residents of Quincy, I'm finding that our neighbors are eager to get involved and want to help make our city a better place. If elected, my top priority will be to engage more people into the process in moving our city forward. I will work every day to increase transparency by including the community at large and their ideas on how we can address the issues we are facing in this city. I want everyone in Quincy to feel they have someone who will listen, and a voice that will speak up for them.

As a lifelong resident of Quincy, I am excited to serve our city as your next City Councilor at Large. Born in Germantown, living in North Quincy, attending Sacred Heart School, playing softball in Squantum and volunteering in community efforts across the city, I have had opportunities to work with and be a part of the various organizations that make our city a great place to live.

After attending Hofstra University, I moved back to Quincy and have since had the opportunity to serve as the Office Manager of my family's restaurant group, the JP Fuji Group. In addition to overseeing a staff of over two hundred employees, a growing budget of $10 million, project management and business expansion, my experience with the JP Fuji Group has allowed me the opportunity to collaborate with multiple community organizations. As the liaison, I have not only had the pleasure of facilitating fundraising and event planning, but more importantly, have been able to be a part of the organizations' efforts in expanding on services provided to our residents. My ability to provide support in these efforts is because of the start our family got in Quincy. It's allowed our amazing opportunities, and it's made me the confident, successful woman I am today. I want to continue to work to make sure everyone in our community has these same opportunities.

Collaborative efforts among local organizations, businesses and public service facilities are relationships that should be promoted, fostered and supported by local government. This is just one of the ways we can engage more people in the community.

Quincy is an amazing city. We are facing many challenges, from improving our public schools, to tackling the increasing congestion on our streets and ensuring development doesn't come at the cost of our working families, to addressing the opiate epidemic and helping those in need. But I truly believe we can overcome these challenges by coming together as a city and working together. I've seen a community willing to get involved, and as an At-Large City Councilor I will work with you to make our city better.

Occupation: Director of Security, General Dynamics

Education: Boston College High School, University of Massachusetts (Boston)

Current South Shore Board of Directors, Quincy Mass.

Family: Married to Rosanne (Johnson) McCarthy.. 30 years; 8 Children ranging from 23 to 9 years old.

Top Priorities If Elected

If elected, my top priorities will be what my platform discusses. First and foremost fiscally responsible. It's not my money, it's the cities and the constituents tax dollars that make it all possible. So I will be sensible with the budget.

I will make sure all the departments are fiscally and properly attended too.Public safety, park and recreation, public works, veteran services and all others must be reviewed every year in order to make sure they have what they need. And of course education must be looked at closely with the Quincy Public School School System Administration as it is a community's foundation.

I vow to continue to attack the drug issue plaguing the commonwealth and the country. I will keep awareness programs alive and work with all to combat this epidemic. I hope to be able to learn more as a councilor and contribute to the agencies/local departments that address this daily.

It's a problem that has escalated over the past several years. We hoped it would disappear, it will not. It's killing off a generation and more. We must stay on this subject for quite some time.

I will work as a team player but with a new outside approach in regards to the administration on the downtown, over development issues, an affordable housing solution and all issues that we encounter. Taxes, snow removal issues, flood zone matters and everyday items that folks deal with.

I will stay in contact also with our seniors so I can make decisions that help them with their lives and quality of life.

Communication is a vital issue here in Quincy. Every department in the city has issues, let's try to balance the communication better so items and deliberations are worthwhile. Let's work as a whole so we can all have a say in moving Quincy forward.

I'm committed to work with local labor so that projects are fairly disseminated, are proactively conveyed to labor and that discussions happen sooner than later. Many organized labor unions have supported me and I am humbled for that. Discussions with all these organizations were open and candid. I want to see Quincy men and woman working. I want to see us work together to get local folks to work. Let's get the capable working people here in Quincy and Massachusetts first. We have to concentrate on this because this is our home, this is what we want to be proud of. Blue and white collar Quincy people back to work servicing their needs and the city's.

I will meet with the Mayor's office bi weekly, in order to keep all lines of communication open. Events happen, decisions are made. Having an open door mind set between the council and the executive office is a must. We have too much at stake.

Finally the success of Quincy will be crucial over the next few years. Big decisions will be made and executed. Let's make Quincy a city of destination and enjoyment. It's too important to forget. Its home to a lot of us.

Top Priorities If Elected

The most important role of a ward Councillor is to keep residents informed of matters that affect them and be accessible to their constituency. I pride myself on my constituent communication and responsiveness and will continue these efforts through snail mail, my website, e-newsletter, social media, phone calls and active community involvement.

During storm events, I spend time in the field posting updates and many have expressed their appreciation for my keeping them informed with such timely, relevant information. With Ward 1 comprising the majority of the city's 27 miles of coastline and being a lifelong waterfront resident and homeowner, coastal matters are one of my top priorities. When FEMA changed the flood maps, I coordinated workshops with local and federal officials and insurance agencies. I educated myself, becoming a local expert on this issue, and worked one on one with property owners so they understood the direct impact on their personal situation. Many residents shared that my advice saved them thousands of dollars.

The city has completed a citywide seawall assessment and repaired the Edgewater Drive seawall which rated the worst condition. I have been working with the engineering consultants on the next phase of seawall repairs and we have grants pending for Manet Ave. in Houghs Neck, Post Island, Shellton Road in Adams Shore and the intersection of Shore Ave. and Norton Road in Merrymount. With coastal flooding often disconnecting the Houghs Neck peninsula from the mainland and the other areas having repetitive losses, these are the priorities for repair. The Rockland Street Bridge in Houghs Neck is another vulnerable location during storm events and repairs are beginning this month. Growing up on the waterfront, like many in my neighborhood, I had my boat license before my car license. As a boat owner and member of Quincy Yacht Club, I am a strong advocate for the over 2,300 registered boaters, six yacht clubs and six private marinas. The Public Landing and boat ramp in Houghs Neck has served as the hub of boating in our community from the days of the steamboat bringing tourists in the early 1900s to the heyday as the Flounder Capital of the World in the 1980s. With only four other public access boat ramps on Boston Harbor, the Houghs Neck ramp is tidally restricted with boaters only able to launch two hours either side of high tide. I am working to improve access for boaters during all tidal conditions. I have project managed short term repairs and am chairing the committee working with the environmental engineering consultant on the long term repairs. We have already secured over $300,000 in grants for the facility and will be scheduling a community meeting once the engineer is ready.

Community Preservation Projects I have championed include repairs to our park facilities; Labreque softball field and basketball court, Merrymount Courts and Perkins Field, Palmer Park and Germantown Seawall, preservation work at Butlers Pond and the Souther Tide Mill. I am currently managing a grant for Marsh Restoration at Manet Lake and see many project opportunities including marsh restoration on Curlew Road in Adams Shore, and the Lenox/ Stoughton Street and Third Marshes in Houghs Neck. There are many development projects underway in Ward 1 on the periphery of downtown. My role as ward councillor is to represent the residents through the permit process and keep them informed as projects are underway. Currently, major developments include 10-18 Merrymount Rd., the former Central Middle School and former Temple Beth El on Hancock Street and 18 Johnson Ave.

Top Priorities If Elected

I am running to become your Ward 1 City Councillor because I care about people and I enjoy working with people on issues the effect our everyday lives.

I have enjoyed years of experience volunteering, serving on committees and helping with community events now I want to serve you in the neighborhood and at City Hall.

My involvement has already made a difference. The contractor demolishing the old YMCA was working late nights and Sundays. The neighbors living across from the site could not rest on Sundays. They came to me for help. I was glad to intervene for them and today the contractor is no longer disturbing their peace.

In February of 2015 over 125 people lost their gas and many of them their heat. National Grid was going to just make temporary repairs. I filed a complaint with the State Department of Public Utilities and kept on following up until they were required to replace all the gas lines insuring this would not happen again.

These are just a couple of examples of the type of effective, independent leadership I bring to the table.

What makes Quincy a great place to live and bring up our kids is that we have close-knit neighborhoods. We always put families first!

Our city is made up of hard working individuals, determined to make their kids lives a little better than their own. Its great economic diversity allowed for everyone, including union tradespeople, small business owners and executives to all be part of one community; sharing a common goal of improving and investing in a city they all love. There is much to do.

The lack of an independent voice representing Ward 1 is a real concern. My goal is to be an independent voice. I don't have all the answers but my strength lies in knowing how to find them.

Mature leadership is key. Not taking disagreements personally is paramount to fostering good dialogue that will lead to answers that we can all live with. As your city councillor, you may never need to call me but if you do, you need to know I will be there for you, responding within a reasonable time ; working for you until we get results.

This city election is probably one of the most important in recent memory. Quincy is at a turning point that will decide whether we choose progress over preserving our neighborhoods.

It begins with you and is why I ask for your vote Tuesday, Nov. 3rd.

The texting service is available daily from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. and the service is free, confidential, and anonymous. Samaritans hopes to expand their texting service hours in the coming months.

Samaritans Executive Director Steve Mongeau said texting provides another important option for those reaching out for help. Nearly 40 percent of people reaching out to the National Suicide Prevention Lifeline Chat Program indicated they would not be comfortable reaching out for help by phone.

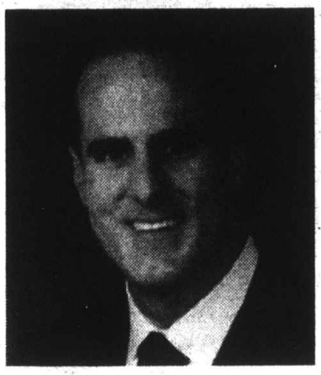
Ward 2 Councillor

Brad L. Croall



BRAD CROALL

Age: 35

Address: 65 Gay Street

Occupation: Institutional sales consultant, John Hancock Retirement Plan Services

Education: Quincy High School, Class of 1998. University of Massachusetts Dartmouth, B.S. Business

Municipal Experience:

Ward 2 City Councillor; past president of the Ward 2 Civic Association, past member of the City of Quincy's Park and Recreation Board and past chairman of the Ward 2 Democratic Committee

Family: Wife Lori and son PJ.

Top Priorities If Elected

If elected my top priorities are to continue my efforts in providing great constituent service, pushing for progress in the Ward 2 park system, implementing quality of life enhancement for Ward 2's senior citizens and continued advocacy for road and sidewalk improvements.

As your city councillor, I take a tremendous amount of pride in staying connected with residents. By taking this approach, you have given me feedback which has helped shape the vision for the ward. By placing the resident above all else I believe that I put myself in the best position possible to fight for what is important to you and important to our ward. By staying in touch and working in the trenches every single day together we are able to bring the necessary unity to our community.

Second, I will continue to be an advocate for our ward's park system. We have done some wonderful enhancements to recreate the user experience at Faxon Park, but my intention is not to let it stop there.

The park system provides opportunities to so many individuals, families and seniors and I believe it is part of our value system as a community. The park system not only helps attract people to our great city but also makes people want to stay. In the coming weeks I along with Mayor Koch and Rep. Mariano will be announcing a revitalization plan for Fore River Field as well.

Third, as the chairman of the City Council's Senior Citizen Committee I have the opportunity to spend a lot of time with our seniors. The one constant in my conversations is that there is a need to provide more programming and social activities at "this end of the city."

My thought is to create a satellite senior citizen center at the Fore River Clubhouse to help provide this programming service in a more local fashion. I'm looking forward to working with everyone to bring this concept to fruition.

Finally, we'd all agree that our roads and sidewalks could use a lot of TLC. As your City Councilor, I have filed a resolution last council session requesting that the Mayor conduct a feasibility study on how to augment the Chapter 90 monies that we get from the state. I believe that by having an alternative funding source we will be able to get more bang for our buck every construction season and I know after knocking thousands of doors during this campaign season that most taxpayers believe it is a good use of taxpayer money when we are investing in our roads and sidewalks. Taking this into account you can count on me to be your voice for capital infrastructure improvements.

In conclusion, I have laid out my goals and objectives for the next term in a very practical manner. By working together and staying focused we will make our ward a better place to live.

I appreciate you taking the time to read my column and respectfully ask that on Nov. 3rd that when you go to the poll, you vote for Croall. Thank you.

Top Priorities If Elected

If elected my top priori ies will be constituency ser ices, returning phone calls, istening to people in Ward and trying to resolve their ssues.

The next item I will con ider a priority is the down own development. I will egotiate with developers o use the local workforce nd not bring in out-of-state vorkers or companies to do vork in our city.

The next item on my genda will be senior citi ens to ensure their safety nd security collaborating vith all city departments nd elected officials. Our se ior citizens are an untapped esource in our society and ve need to respect and pro ect them.

Another big issue is drugs. There is an epidemic in society today and Quincy has seen their fair share of tragedy. We must educate our youth and rehabilitate those who come under the influence of this horrible plague of drug addiction.

There are a plethora of issues I could talk about but thre final one I will talk about is the condition of our roads and sidewalks. The pothole hotline is an initial start but not the final solution.

We need a schedule of ongoing street and sidewalk repairs to have a quality of life in our city today.

In conclusion I will emphasize that I will be an advocate for all Ward 2 citizens and humbly ask for your vote on Nov. 3 and thank you in advance for voting.

First order of business upon election will be to develop a comprehensive capital improvement plan in order to address the management, maintenance, and repair of our streets and sidewalks. KARL ROOS

Top Priorities If Elected

I have dedicated many years to our community while raising my family here in the City of Quincy. I am, and will continue to be completely invested in our neighborhood and in the future of the City of Quincy.

A top priority as your Ward 3 city councillor would be to ensure responsible development within the city. Projects would be required to enhance the long term vision of Quincy's yet untapped potential. Value must be determined not only in terms of financial worth but in the protection of the integrity and character of our community.

An appropriate balance of affordable housing would be imperative to ensure that working families can sustain residing in Quincy. Parking, traffic and congestion issues must be considered with any new development within Ward 3 and the entire city.

I will inform all residents of their rights concerning living conditions in order to prevent anyone from living in a dangerous situation. I would work to ensure that Inspectional Services is empowered to prohibit illegal development in our neighborhoods.

A deterrent and preventative tool in reducing code violations would be to increase the fines for committing the violations. Currently, the fine for an illegal rooming house is a meager $300.

I am committed to the importance of optimizing the Quincy Public Schools. Quality education attracts and retains families which stabilizes and increases the value of neighborhoods. As a father committed to raising a family in Quincy, I can attest to the fact that my children have and continue to benefit from the education they received in Quincy Public Schools.

While none of us particularly enjoy paying taxes, I am committed to ensuring that our taxes deliver a return value to all residents.

Our police and fire departments must be properly equipped, staffed and trained in order to provide public safety. We need to attract and retain talented, dedicated educators.

Our streets and sidewalks require maintenance. Trash needs to be picked up. City services are provided to our veterans and senior citizens.

All of these services have a cost associated with them. An investment in our city services and personnel is an investment in our homes and in the value of the city.

The opiate epidemic is a serious crisis. I would focus on ways the city can fight and help prevent the crisis from further escalating. I would call for the establishment of a professional city staff member to serve as a coordinating liaison to all city departments and outside agencies to address the ongoing opiate addiction facing Quincy.

The liaison would work across departments to coordinate help and seek funding on the State and Federal level. The police could follow the City of Gloucester model of finding treatment for people who voluntarily surrender themselves and their drugs to the police rather than seeking criminal charges against them. The focus would be on prevention, education, encouraging residents to safely dispose of prescription painkillers and increasing the funding for D.A.R.E. programs.

If elected as Ward 3 city councilor, it will be a priority for me to be the voice of you, the constituency.

On June 26, 2015, the Supreme Court issued a decision in Obergefell v. Hodges, holding that same-sex couples have a constitutional right to marry in all states. As a result, more same-sex couples will be recognized as married for purposes of determining entitlement to Social Security benefits or eligibility for Supplemental Security Income (SSI) payments.

Since a previous Supreme Court decision in 2013, Social Security has been able to recognize some same-sex marriages and non-marital legal same-sex relationships for purposes of determining entitlement to or eligibility for benefits. We also consider same-sex marriage when processing claims for SSI. Marriage may affect your SSI eligibility or payment amount.

We're working closely with the Department of Justice to develop and implement policy and processing instructions to implement the June 26, 2015 Supreme Court decision. As we have additional information, we'll update our website and issue instructions to our staff. You can read more about important information for same-sex couples at www.socialsecurity.gov/people/same-sexcouples.

In the meantime, if you're a spouse, divorced spouse, or surviving spouse of a same-sex marriage or non-marital legal same-sex relationship, we encourage you to apply right away for benefits. Applying now will preserve your filing date, which will protect you against the loss of any potential benefits.

If you have any questions about how to apply for benefits, call toll-free 1-800-772-1213 (TTY 1-800-325-0778). We can answer specific questions from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., Monday through Friday. Social Security Disability Helps People Who Work

By KRISTEN ALBERINO
Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

People with disabilities are challenged with both overcoming barriers and with convincing others that those barriers do not define them.

That's why we wanted to mark this October's National Disability Employment Awareness Month by reminding you that Social Security is an earned benefit for millions of disabled individuals, and we can assist them in going back to work.

The Social Security disability insurance program, or SSDI, is perhaps the most misunderstood program of Social Security. Some people may think that SSDI recipients have never worked and are taking advantage of the system by receiving money for minor impairments.

Nothing could be further from the truth. First, anyone who qualifies for SSDI must have worked enough to pay into the system and be "insured." Second, Social Security has some of the strictest requirements in the world for disability benefits. To qualify, a person must not only have an impairment that will last one year or more, or result in death, but they must be unable to perform any substantial work.

Consequently, Social Security disability beneficiaries are some of the most severely impaired people in the country, and they greatly depend on their benefits. You can learn more by visiting the Faces and Facts website at www.socialsecurity.gov/disabilityfacts. At the website, you will find many personal stories of those who have benefitted from Social Security when they needed it most.

We also have incentives that give beneficiaries with disabilities — who are able — the opportunity to return to work. These work incentives include continued cash benefits for a period of time while you work, continued Medicare or Medicaid coverage, and help with education, training, and rehabilitation to start a new line of work. In some cases, we may even be able to deduct certain impairment-related work expenses from your countable income, making it possible to earn more and also remain eligible to receive benefits. Examples of these expenses are wheelchairs, transportation costs, and specialized equipment needed for work.

Social Security also offers the Ticket to Work program, which gives participants a "ticket" to go back to work while keeping their disability benefits. This program is free and voluntary. Ticket to Work gives access to an employment network, which offers assistance with job searches and placement, and vocational rehabilitation and training.

Those who enroll find the Ticket to Work program makes it easier to explore whether going back to work is right for them. Some even find that they are able to eventually get back to work and earn far more than the disability payments they once received.

Visit www.socialsecurity.gov/work for more information on the Ticket to Work program and work incentives. You may also call 1-866-968-7842 (TDD 866-833-2967).

No Cost-Of-Living Adjustment For Social Security In 2016

With consumer prices down over the past year, monthly Social Security and Supplemental Security Income (SSI) benefits for nearly 65 million Americans will not automatically increase in 2016.

The Social Security Act provides for an automatic increase in Social Security and SSI benefits if there is an increase in inflation as measured by the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers (CPI-W). The period of consideration includes the third quarter of the last year a cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) was made to the third quarter of the current year. As determined by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, there was no increase in the CPI-W from the third quarter of 2014 to the third quarter of 2015. Therefore, under existing law, there can be no COLA in 2016.

Other adjustments that would normally take effect based on changes in the national average wage index also will not take effect in January 2016. Since there is no COLA, the statute also prohibits a change in the maximum amount of earnings subject to the Social Security tax, as well as the retirement earnings test exempt amounts. These amounts will remain unchanged in 2016. The attached fact sheet provides more information on 2016 Social Security and SSI changes.

The Department of Health and Human Services has not yet announced Medicare premium changes for 2016. For more information, go to www.socialsecurity.gov/cola.

Ward 5 Councillor

Kirsten Hughes

KIRSTEN HUGHES

Age: 38

Address: 116 Willow Ave.

Occupation: Attorney at Law and Chairman, MassGOP

Education: Notre Dame Academy, New York University, New England School of Law

Municipal Experience: Two-term Ward 5 City Councillor

Family: Married to Phil Doherty, two sons John (2), Ben (6 months)

Top Priorities If Elected

For the past four years I've been honored to serve as Ward 5's city councillor. I'm seeking another term on Nov. 3rd so I can continue to be a strong voice for our community. My focus during the next term will continue to be supporting our veterans, growing our local economy, keeping Quincy safe, and tackling the day-to-day concerns of Ward 5 residents.

I want to continue my work for our veterans, and I'm honored to serve as the chair of our City Council's Veterans' Committee. We've worked hard to ensure the VA Clinic continues to have a home in Quincy. I've been dedicated to helping our veterans access vital city services, and have ensured the city memorializes veterans whenever possible. In the next term, I want to redouble the Council's efforts to make sure our veterans are taken care of across Quincy.

I'm also focused on helping spur economic growth in our city. We've been hard at work trying to re-imagine the Wollaston business district, so our community is positioned well as Quincy continues to grow. That includes working to make sure our city is responsive to the needs of our small businesses.

I'll continue to work every day to ensure that Quincy is a safe and secure community for growing families. I made sure that Quincy police, fire, and EMS had the funding they needed. I also fought to keep an emergency room in Quincy. I've advocated for better crosswalks, more signage, and increased traffic enforcement in Quincy, to make our streets safe for motorists and pedestrians.

Most importantly, I'm focused on continuing to be a voice for the residents of Ward 5 every single day. I want to work as hard as I can to make sure your needs and concerns are addressed – from that broken streetlight, to making sure our streets are plowed in the winter. That's the work of a city councilor, and I'll continue it in my next term.

I'm a lifelong resident of Quincy, my mom was a public school teacher here, and I've chosen to raise my family here. I want a Quincy that is a safe, vibrant place for my two boys to grow. I'm committed to working diligently every day to make sure that happens. With that spirit, I humbly ask for your vote this Nov. 3rd.

Address: 57 Estabrook Rd.

Occupation: Substitute Teacher/Quincy Public Schools; Certified Yoga Instructor/Healing Tree Yoga

Education: Brighton High School, Lesley University - Bachelor's in Psychology

Top Priorities If Elected

If elected, my top priorities will be to keep the residents in Ward 5 informed and updated on relevant events occurring in our neighborhoods.

I recognize that everyone has a preferred method of communication. One of my first duties will be to reach out to residents and collect that information so everyone is informed on timely issues of concern. From the inception of my campaign, I have pledged to be available and to listen to matters that are important to my neighbors.

I can assure you that when you reach out to me, I will communicate back to you in a prompt and timely manner. I will work hard and do my best to rectify the issues of concern.

I have worked in service driven industries where I have learned to listen, to be patient, to compromise, and, most importantly, to be kind and of service to everyone. I look forward to bringing these skills to the Council and collaborating with other elected officials on issues that effect Quincy residents

This is my first time running for political office. To be quite frank, I know little about politics. Yet, I don't feel this is a liability. Rather, I believe it to be a great advantage.

I have an open mind and my allegiances lie only with the constituents in Ward 5 and the residents of Quincy That is one reason why I am a registered independent voter. I am an independent thinker with strong convictions and principles.

We are more alike than we are different. We al want the same things - good jobs with decent wages, a strong and solid school system where all children can thrive and learn, safe neighborhoods, and a clean environment.

My message is simple and clear. I will work hard for the constituents in Ward 5, and would be honored to be your councillor. I wil be a dedicated and devoted councillor.

I respectfully ask for you vote on Nov. 3rd.

Ward 6 Councillor

Brian McNamee

Age: 58

Address: 94 Newbury Ave., Unit 101

Occupation: Director of Finance, Norfolk Sheriff's Department

Education: St. Raphael Academy (high school); BA, Villanova University; MBA, University of Massachusetts/Boston.

Municipal Experience: Quincy Zoning Board of Appeals 2004 – 2005

Ward 6 City Councillor 2006 – Present

Family: Divorced - one Daughter

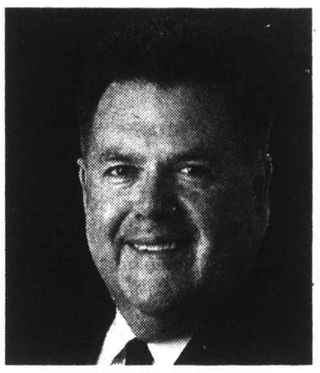
Top Priorities If Elected

If elected my top priorities will be to insure Ward 6 residents are notified of development proposals that affect their neighborhoods. Where proposals adversely affect the interests of the neighborhoods of our Ward I will continue to fight in opposition.

My efforts to preserve the unique character of the neighborhoods of Ward 6 can be evidenced by my strong opposition to C-Mart, the City of Boston's efforts to rebuild the Long Island Bridge, Moon Island Gun Range improvements without noise abatement, the opening of a Burlesque Dance School on Billings Road by a former sex club operator, a 84-seat Sushi and Hot Pot restaurant at the former site of the Fashion Quality Cleaners, Boston's efforts to build a wind turbine on Moon Island, and a 14-unit condominium complex at the former Star of the Sea site.

One of my highest priorities will be to fight for the taxpayer. This commitment was demonstrated by my rejection of a salary survey conducted by a committee that recommended pay increases not only for the Mayor, but also Department Heads and the City Council. As the recommendations of the committee appeared in the various departmental budgets I was the only City Councillor to vote "no" on each and every vote taken including the entire 2014 fiscal year budget.

I will also continue to make improvements to the public parks of Ward 6 as demonstrated by my collaboration with residents and using Ward 6 mitigation funds to improve Squantum's playground, renovation of Squantum's tennis courts to meet the demand for street hockey play space, current collaboration with the Parker Elementary School PTO to refurbish their playground and enlarge the play area with new equipment, and enlarge and upgrade the Teel Field Soccer Field.



BRIAN McNAMEE

The public safety for both pedestrians and motor vehicle operators will continue to be a priority of mine as it relates to the North Quincy Hancock Street Corridor. Over the past several years I have advocated for the re-engineering of the East & West Squantum Street intersection at Hancock Street. Today residents are seeing the conclusion of this comprehensive redesign. We now have an intersection functioning at what is considered an acceptable "C" level. This is a marked improvement over the former configuration which when evaluated by the MassDOT scored at the D Level indicating a failure to meet vehicular travel demands.

My continued focus will be to provide same-day response to constituent calls and emails. I remain committed to connecting residents with the municipal services they need such as, street and sidewalk repairs, snow removal, trash removal, parking rules enforcement, Inspectional Services oversight as it relates to construction site activity, illegal rooming houses, and blighted properties.

I have a solid record of success working with the Quincy Police Department when it comes to public safety and behavior that is disruptive to residential life. Those who have reported noise at Marina Bay, drinking at Squaw Rock, witnessed drug activity, or troubled apartment buildings and/or houses know of my success. I promise to use my ten years of experience to help residents develop winning strategies to get local government to provide the services they rightfully deserve.

In the words of the first woman President of the Quincy City Council, Patricia Toland, "...don't thank me for what you see; thank me for what you don't see."

Ward 6 Councillor

William P. Harris

Address: 74 Ashworth Rd.

Occupation: United States Postal Service, Postmaster, Woburn

Education: Don Bosco Technical High School, Boston, MA – Class of 1979; attended University of Massachusetts (Boston Campus); Wentworth Institute, Boston; Quincy College, Quincy.

Activities: Volunteer Masters of Ceremonies and Disc Jockey: Fund raising for charitable organizations and local community causes such as The Pan-Mass Challenge, Squantum 4th of July Committee and Storm Youth Football & Cheerleading; member Robert I. Nickerson Post 382, Squantum, (father is a veteran).

Family: wife Carole E Harris; children: Mary Harris and Edward "Ted" Harris.

Top Priorities If Elected

If I am elected to Ward 6 councillor, my top priority will be to insure the common good of all the citizens that I will represent. I will focus on issues concerning the spending of hard earned tax dollars paid by the citizens. I will not accept any irresponsible spending and waste of dollars while protecting the fiscal health and growth of the city.

I also intend to fight for the improvement of vital services that are provided to our seniors and our disabled. Most important will be my commitment to our future, which is our children. I will insure the support of a strong school system that includes after school programs.

Also, if I am elected Ward 6 Councilor, I will work with all elected officials, law enforcement and health service agencies to fight the drug epidemic that is plaguing our city. I will advocate for providing law enforcement and first responders with the tools they need as well as providing early education to our city's children regarding drug and alcohol abuse.

Another top priority will be the oversight of responsible real estate development in our ward so that it enhances our quality of life, while fighting against congested construction just for the sake of outsiders' profits with minimal tax revenue gains. I understand that parking and traffic in our ward is another major concern for the citizen that I intend to work closely with developers to improve (i.e., ferry service from Marina Bay to Boston).

Overseeing the proper repair and redesign of streets, sidewalks and other infrastructure in Ward 6 will be an everyday challenge which I am confident I will be able to do as I build a good working relationship with the hard working employees in the Public Works Department.

If elected, I will be there for the people of Ward 6 from day one. I intend to keep all Ward 6 citizens informed on current events and situations that may affect their day to day lives.

I will listen to my constituents of Ward 6. I will never dismiss anyone or any problem no matter what the magnitude of the issue is.

I will be the needed voice of the people of Ward 6. If elected, I will be a "New Face in a Tired Crowd."

Halloween Tips

By JULIE HERSEY

Stop & Shop Nutritionist

Halloween is Saturday, Oct. 31.

Here are some healthy and nutritious tips for youngsters before and after trick-or-treating.

- Eat a nourishing dinner and hydrate before trick-or-treating: A group of hungry, dehydrated, sugar-intoxicated kids can be frightening for any parent! Plan to have a warm and hearty meal before heading out. Be sure to take along a reusable water bottle to sip between houses.
- Downsize candy collectors: Turn the trick around so your kids think they have more candy simply by downsizing their door-to-door collector. Use pails or yogurt containers instead of pillowcases.
- Pass out non-food treats: Kids love non-candy treats like Halloween-themed pencils, pencil toppers, crayons, erasers, scary magnets or stickers, temporary tattoos, bubbles, jump ropes, whistles, fake money, glow-in-the-dark necklaces and bouncy balls that encourage activity.
- Go mini or fun size: Smaller-sizes will help stretch calories, servings and dollars. Some good choices that are lower in fat and calories include: York Peppermint Patties, Kit Kat Bars, or even those with peanuts for a protein boost, like PayDay!
- Keep candy out of sight: Out of sight, out of mind. If you're lucky, they may even forget it is there! Teach kids that candy is a treat that can be enjoyed after all other nutrient needs for the day are met.
- Choose whole grain-based treats: These include chocolate granola bars, trail mix, popcorn, small boxes of cereal, that are low in sugar but provide fiber, vitamins and minerals.
- Find fruit-based treats: Look for treats that have a fruit base and no artificial flavors or colors. Think chocolate-covered raisins, 100% fruit leather, fig cookies, and small boxes of dried fruit are all great choices.
- Balance treats with healthy pairings. Break up candy into smaller bites or supplement with a glass of water, low-fat milk, a piece of fruit or cheese.

Quinzee Memories Show

There's a new show on channel 8 on QATV - Quinzee Memories.

Inspired by a previously aired show about Squantum, Quinzee Memories captures stories about the 1930's and 1940's from those who lived through those times. Maureen Conway is an independent producer with QATV and is directing the show.

With the initial focus on North Quincy, seniors were interviewed at Kennedy Senior Center and talked about growing up in the Atlantic, Norfolk Downs and Montclair neighborhoods against the backdrop of Prohibition, The Depression, and World War II.

The first show featured Dr Alan Yacubian and his brother Arthur. There will be at least five more shows in the series. Some of those featured are Andy Walsh (Walsh's Restaurant), Lorraine Rooney, Gert Knowles, Marilyn McConville, Jean Delaney, Howie Crowley, Janet Hickey, Pat Mullaney, Donna Cummings and Mayor Tom Koch.

For information on show times, check the web www.qatv.org/qatv-8-program-schedule or call 617 -376-1440. Once North Quincy is complete, Conway will focus on another section of the city.

Do you have a story to tell? Contact Maureen Conway @617-328-3093 or quinzeemem@gmail.com.

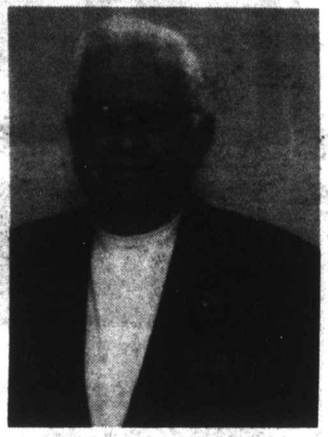
Alden W. Poole, 89



ALDEN W. POOLE

A funeral Mass for Alden W. Poole, 89, of Quincy – newspaper editor, emeritus professor of Communications at Simmons College, and peace educator/activist – will be celebrated tomorrow (Friday) at 10 a.m. in St. John the Baptist Church, Quincy.

Mr. Poole died peacefully at home on Oct. 17.

A Taunton native, Mr. Poole attended Brown University and received his bachelor's degree in journalism from Boston University, where he also did graduate work. He was a disabled combat infantry veteran of World War II, awarded the Bronze Star Medal and five other decorations for his service with the 100th Infantry Division in Europe.

Mr. Poole began his journalism career as a reporter for the Taunton Daily Gazette, editor of the Bristol, R.I., Phoenix, and suburban editor of the Haverhill Gazette. He went on to work at the Boston Herald for 18 years as copy editor, makeup editor, wire editor, and news editor before becoming executive news editor in 1972.

After teaching journalism part-time at Simmons College and Suffolk University, Mr. Poole became a full-time professor in the Communications Department at Simmons in 1972 and later served as department chair. In 1977, a Real Paper survey of ten Greater Boston campuses named him one of Boston's "Top Ten Professors." In 2000, the Simmons Review alumnae magazine profiled him as one of ten professors in the 20th century who were "regarded by alumnae and colleagues as shining examples of superb teaching."

Mr. Poole was an active member of: The American Newspaper Guild AFL-CIO, The Society of Professional Journalists, the Association for Education in Journalism, the New England Press Association and its board of directors, and the American Association of University Professors, its executive committee and collective bargaining team.

Mr. Poole's community service spanned five decades. In the 1960s, he joined Projects for Youth, an anti-drug coalition in Quincy, did anti-racism work with Quincy Fair Housing, and served the NAACP's Boston Branch. Later, he was involved with the South Shore Human Rights Coalition and the Quincy District 11 Nuclear Freeze movement.

He retired from college teaching in 1986 to devote himself to peace and social justice work as an educator and activist. He gave lectures, workshops, and sermons on peace, nuclear weapons, the death penalty, and nonviolence. He took part in many peace vigils and demonstrations, was arrested six times for nonviolent civil disobedience, and served 30-day and 10-day prison sentences for two of those charges.

Mr. Poole served as a volunteer chef at Haley House Soup Kitchen in Boston for ten years. He was an active member of Ailanthus: A Nonviolent Witness for Peace in Boston and a mission council member of the Agape Nonviolent Ministry in Hardwick. He was a lifetime member of DAV and an active member of Veterans for Peace. In 2008, he and his wife Janet were recognized by the Quincy mayor and city council for their "long record of advocacy for peace and social justice."

Mr. Poole donated his carpentry services to Habitat for Humanity, Swords into Plowshares in Greenfield, and Agape Nonviolent Ministry in Hardwick. He was a founding member of the Quincy Choral Society, where he sang in the bass section for 25 years. He was an avid bicyclist and swimmer until his mid-80s and had previously enjoyed sailing and skiing with his family.

He leaves his beloved "bride" of 64 years, Janet (Cotter) Poole, and eight children: Kathleen Poole of Hull, Tim Poole of NC, Gina Poole of Sandwich, Mary Poole of Bellingham, Lucy Burlingame of Hingham, Tony Poole of Quincy, Sarah McCarty of Quincy, and Joanna Poole of Arlington. His daughter Kristin Poole died in 1996. He also leaves 20 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Visiting hours were 4-8 p.m. yesterday (Wednesday) at Hamel, Wickens & Troupe Funeral Home, 26 Adams St., Quincy.

Committal of ashes will be private.

Memorial donations may be made to: Haley House Soup Kitchen, 23 Dartmouth St., Boston, MA 02116; Veterans for Peace Chapter 9, Smedley Butler Brigade, P.O. Box 1604, Andover, MA 01810; or Agape Nonviolent Ministry, 2062 Greenwich Rd., Ware, MA 01082.

MAYOR TOM KOCH ON SUBSTANCE ABUSE: THE RECORD IS CLEAR

"The 'Quincy Model': Saving The Lives of Addicts." — THE WHITE HOUSE

After listening to families across the City during his first campaign, Mayor Tom Koch became one of the first public officials in the state to confront the epidemic of substance abuse.

- Doubled the size of the Quincy Police drug unit.
- Formed a community task force comprised of affected families, law enforcement, educators, clergy, social service agencies, and other stakeholders.
- Mayor's task force recommendations became a model adopted by other communities in the region.
- Worked together with families of victims and first responders to make the Quincy Police Department the first in the nation to be equipped with anti-overdose medication. To date, more than 400 lives have been saved.
- Strongly supported opening a nationally renowned treatment facility in Quincy. A decision The Patriot Ledger called "politically courageous."

TOM KNOWS OUR WORK ISN'T DONE.

When Bill Phelan was mayor he refused to recognize substance abuse as a problem.

The Patriot Ledger

"Quincy Mayor William Phelan refers to it as 'the issue of drug use' in the city. Tom Koch, who is campaigning against Phelan, prefers stronger language: 'spiraling drug problem.'"

Koch, Phelan Meet At Final Forum

By SCOTT JACKSON

The two mayoral candidates facing off in next week's election had the chance to highlight the differences in their leadership styles at a public forum Monday night, which brought to an end a busy three months of candidates' nights hosted by various civic organizations in the city.

Incumbent Mayor Thomas Koch and former Mayor William Phelan debated for nearly an hour at Monday night's forum sponsored by the Quincy Democratic and Republican City Committees – the first time the two committees have sponsored such an event together. The forum inside Quincy High School was broadcast live on Quincy Access TV and will re-air as the Nov. 3 election draws closer. Some 150 residents were on hand Monday night.

Christine Cedrone – the chair of the city GOP committee who moderated Monday's forum with her counterpart from the Democratic committee, Alicia Gardner – asked each candidate what the major difference is between him and his opponent.

Koch said his administration has repaired relationships with state agencies, which has resulted in millions of dollars for the city.

"There are differences in style; I think that's fairly obvious. I'm one that likes to collaborate. I'm one that likes to bring people together," Koch said. "I think we've been very successful at repairing a number of relationships at the state level that were damaged.

"I think we've been very

The city of Quincy has reached a pivotal stage where experience and new ideas are not only needed, they will prove crucial to our city's future. Final Steel Beam Placed For West Of Chestnut Develpment

By SCOTT JACKSON

Ironworkers on Tuesday afternoon hoisted into place the final steel beam for the 169-unit West of Chestnut project following a brief ceremony to mark the milestone.

The West of Chestnut project – the first revitalization project undertaken in Quincy Center – is being undertaken by the Quincy Mutual Group and Gate Residential. Officials from both companies, including Quincy Mutual President and CEO Douglas Briggs and Gate Residential Managing Partner Kyle Warwick, were on hand for the topping off ceremony Tuesday afternoon, as were several city officials, including Mayor Thomas Koch and City Councillor Michael McFarland.

Once completed, West of Chestnut will include two six-story buildings featuring a combined 169 apartments and 12,000 square feet of ground level retail in the 1400 block of Hancock Street. The project was announced in November 2014 and received Planning Board approval in March of this year, with construction beginning later that month with little fanfare.

"We decided to forego the groundbreaking ceremony because we'd rather top off," Warwick said. "It has been a pretty quick year. We announced this project – we announced our partnership with Quincy Mutual – a year ago and we all raced. That included the city and that included our team, Quincy Mutual and Dellbrook [Construction]."

The steel beam hoisted into place Tuesday had a pine tree attached to it. Warwick said the tree is part of a Scandinavian tradition symbolizing growth and rebirth.

"If you think, mayor, about growth and rebirth, we are in Quincy Center and there is a lot of growth and rebirth," Warwick said. "I walked around two months ago and you could really feel it in the retail establishments and what's following us. We are setting the stage for further development downstream and it's really exciting."

One other project has already been approved in Quincy Center – Sean and Scott Galvin's proposal to tear down the former Woolworth's building at 1545 Hancock St. and replace it with two buildings with a

BROOCHES ARE BACK

If you ever thought of brooches as staid pieces of jewelry that your grandmothers and aunts wore on their suit jacket lapels, it is time to reset your conception of what these pieces can be. Today's brooches range in complexity from plain to heavily embellished and are often oversized for greater emphasis. They can be as fresh as a daisy or as bold as a diamond-studded constellation of stars and other heavenly bodies. There is virtually no limit to their form, with some even projecting three-dimensional effect from a platform pinned to the chest. Whether you prefer flowers and dragonflies or art-deco and surrealistic pieces that raise some eyebrows, there are brooches to suit every style and occasion.

Because brooches are the only pieces of jewelry not worn directly on the body, they may appeal to people who don't wear earrings or necklaces. For more information, please call 617-773-3636. We are a full service jewelry store, and we accept custom orders. Our prices have always been more than competitive with no fake markups in order to offer huge discounts. We also pay top dollar for old unwanted or broken jewelry. We welcome you to stop by our store at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center.

Don't Sit This One Out

Stay the course or "back to the future?"

That's the question voters will decide Tuesday, Nov. 3 in the mayor's race between incumbent Thomas Koch and former mayor William Phelan.

Koch has been at the city's helm the last eight years. He unseated Phelan in 2007 and has been re-elected three times, the last time unopposed in 2013. One of those re-election wins was a mayoral rematch with Phelan in 2009.

Phelan is attempting to return to City Hall where he served as mayor for six years from 2002 to 2008. He unseated former Mayor James Sheets in 2001 after Sheets had served for 12 years. Phelan was re-elected twice, once without opposition.

The winner of the third Koch-Phelan showdown will make political history by winning the first four-year mayoral term. Voters approved doubling the term from 2 to 4 years by initiative petition in 2013.

So, whoever wins Nov. 3, that person will lead Quincy for the next four years. The term does not expire until January, 2020. It also means that once that term is completed a man named Koch or Phelan will have served as mayor for 18 years collectively.

Round three of the political slugfest between Koch and Phelan this campaign year has lived up to its advanced billing. Each has attacked the other's record while in office while trying to map out a vision for the city's future. (More on what they had to say about their vision and priorities appears on Pages 20 and 21.)

There's no love lost between these two political rivals. Every generation in Quincy has had its political factions and since the early years of this new millennium it's been Koch against Phelan, Phelan against Koch.

You're either a Koch supporter or a Phelan fan - no middle ground. It's like Red Sox-Yankees, Canadiens-Bruins, Patriots vs. the rest of the NFL.

And so, again, on Nov. 3, voters have a choice – the same choice as Election 2007 and Election 2009.

We've been asked by some who are we endorsing or if we are endorsing a candidate in the mayor's race.

The answer is no one.

The paper has supported one mayoral candidate in one race quite some time ago but that's the exception to the rule.

The Quincy Sun does not endorse any candidate: for mayor, president, ward councillor or anyone else on the ballot.

Why?

We believe voters should be intelligent enough to determine who they support on the ballot without being persuaded by news publications. What voters should be doing is engaging in the political process well before they go to the polls. They should attend candidate forums, watch and read up on political debates and ask questions to the candidates directly to get the answers they want on issues that matter most to them.

The Sun has tried to enlighten its readers on candidates' positions and priorities in the contested races next Tuesday. We've covered some of the various forums that have been held throughout the city.

We've tried to do our part in making the electorate more informed when they go to the polls next Tuesday.

But our biggest message to residents is this: vote.

The fact that turnout in city elections has not crept above the 50 percent mark since 1989 – that's 26 years ago, folks – is staggering and unfortunate. That means less than half of the city voters are determining who leads the city, who represents them on the city council, and who's making decisions for them on the school committee.

Why the decline in turnout?

Take your pick.

Some say it's the city's changing demographics. Others believe it is cynicism with elected officials and government as a whole. Or some other reason or reasons.

We've said it before and we'll say it again: city elections are about leaders and representatives who determine Quincy's quality of life for everyone. They directly impact every aspect of the city's budget including public safety and the school department. They also deal with issues that affect all of us either directly or indirectly like the opioid epidemic.

Yes, the mayor's race has received the lion's share of the headlines and media coverage in the city election.

But there are six contested city council races on the ballot. There's also a school race shaping up with three candidates on the ballot and one write-in candidate seeking three seats.

Election 2015 will be historic because of the first four-year mayoral term.

But there are other reasons to go to the polls Tuesday, Nov. 3.

Every registered voter should consider casting a ballot.

Don't sit this one out.

MORE POLITICS but of the Presidential variety.

According to the Norfolk County Republican Committee, GOP Presidential candidate Marco Rubio won a closely-contested victory for the Republican Presidential nomination at the committee's annual Spirit Awards dinner held recently at Lombardo's in Randolph.

According to a release by the Norfolk County GOP Committee, Rubio - U.S. Senator from Florida – received 20 percent of the vote, followed closely by Carly Fiorina (former Hewlett-Packard CEO) and real estate developer Donald Trump, each with 19 percent. Texas U.S. Sen. Ted Cruz and former Florida governor Jeb Bush had 11 percent each. None of the remaining 10 candidates polled higher than seven percent.

THE QUINCY SUN would like to express our sincerest condolences to the family of Matt Gerakis, a 2015 graduate of North Quincy High School who died suddenly Oct. 16. Matt was a popular student and standout on the Red Raiders' basketball team, serving as co-captain his senior season.

One of our favorite photos of Matt is after NQ defeated rival Quincy in the second round of the South Sectional tournament Feb. 28, 2014 on the Red Raiders' home court. Matt, who wore #21, was an integral part of North's teams that advanced to the Sectional finals in 2013 and 2014. Those squads captured the spirit of North Quincy and had the entire city pulling for it in the championship games.

The second house from the right was the parsonage of the Sacred Heart Church that was then located an only short distance away on the corner of Hunt and Hancock Streets. In the distance on the right side of the street the X marks the location of what was Patrick Connelly's variety store on the corner of Clark Street. The building is no longer extant. Thanks Firefighters For Saving His Home

To: Deputy Chief Joseph Jackson
Quincy Firefighters

I want to thank each and every one of you who responded to the fire that leveled the Sons of Lebanon Club on Lebanon Street in Quincy Point early Sunday morning.

I live next door to the Club, and those flames were minutes away from jumping across to my house and destroying it. I stood in the street at 4:00 in the morning waiting for my house to go up, sick with fear and sadness. You saved my home. But I hope each of you knows that you saved even more than that, and you do so every time you respond to a dangerous fire.

My mother is old, sick, and in the sunset of her life. I'm sure that losing her home to fire would have broken her heart and her will to live. In a very real sense, you saved her life.

The speed at which you work, your quick responses, your split-second assessments, your bravery, the decisions you make under pressure to "knock down" fires and save lives and property--you are all an awesome example of team work!

Some of you might say "you were just doing your job." Saving people's lives and homes is never "just doing your job." The commitment and effort each of you brings to your work, and the tragedies you prevent as a result of your dedication, are way above and beyond "just doing your job." I hope you safely finish work every day knowing the good you leave behind for so many families.

I'll tell you, in a world singed with too much cynicism, watching firefighters at work would restore anyone's faith in people.

Again, my thanks and gratitude to you all.

The Destruction Of Single Family Neighborhoods

As I peruse the longest exchange on the Nextdoor website (in this case the Wollaston site)---it's about rooming houses blooming in Quincy neighborhoods.

To get it out of the way—yes I am white. But – rather uniquely--- my son is Asian and he is the love of my life. He is an immigrant and a naturalized American. Quincy has been a home of immigrants for centuries. It is a densely populated city, which is becoming more densely populated. But.... Should the neighborhoods be destroyed?

By that I mean—how come single family homes are being transformed into rooming houses, despite zoning for single residences? Why aren't massive fines being levied on those who choose to ignore the law? It appears that Quincy is afraid of its Asian population. Yes---it is largely our Chinese neighbors who are gleefully buying up single family homes-----renovating them into rooming houses and asphalting what little green space remains?

In my opinion—what does solar power mean when trees are eradicated? What does the purchase of greenspace mean if individual backyards become more asphalt, more cars, more people, and more noise? Frankly, asphalt on our neighborhood roads would be appreciated, but is not appreciated on remaining yards.

Hello Quincy—redevelopment of brownfields is good, destruction of single family neighborhoods is bad. This is destroying what makes Quincy unique and attractive.

New Candidates Urge Programs At Meeting

Although all the candidates for city offices were invited to attend last night's seventh annual Candidates Night held by the North Quincy Koch Club at the North Quincy Knights of Columbus Bungalow, it turned out to be a night for new candidates as only one candidate seeking re-election attended. Those seeking re-election to the School Committee were among the missing. Due to the City Council meeting only Councillor James R. McIntyre attended.

Seeking the office of mayor former city councillor Lawrence J. Curtin took to task Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa for his "insincere bunk." Mr. Curtin referred to the letters sent out by Mayor Della Chiesa to citizens on the occasion of a birthday, a birth or a promotion. (Also known as "Womb to the Tomb" cards.) Mr. Curtin questioned the Mayor's right to use the taxpayers' money in such a manner.

Councillor James R. McIntyre, getting out of a sick bed to attend the forum, spoke on his candidacy for a second term on the council.

CITY WINS IN DISPUTE OVER BALLOT

City Solicitor Douglas A. Randall said that Judge Reuben Lurie had handed down his decision on the city election ballot dispute case in favor of the city.

The court's finding that the petition of Joseph P. McDonough, candidate for city council, was without merit.

The judge ruled that City Clerk Donald R. Crane was correct in his intention to print the names of the candidates now in office at the top of the ballot with the words "Candidate for Re-Election" after them.

McDonough had contested that since the change in government was coming at the end of the year, the present councillors on the ballot were not "incumbents" for the reason that their duties under Plan A would be different than their duties under Plan E.

PRODUCTION UNDERWAY ON NUCLEAR CRUISER

Production on the United States' first nuclear powered surface vessel – a guided missile cruiser – is underway at Fore River Shipyard, several months in advance of the keel lying scheduled for sometime next spring.

Before production could get underway, the yard had to provide new facilities for the work and it also had to set up a training program for its personnel.

Chosen for two new positions were two Quincy men. They included John A. Wilkins, 35, of Squantum, service engineer in the nuclear power branch of the Central Technical Department and 38-year old William H. Collins, Jr., superintendent of sales of the Quincy Yard's special products division.

Attendees will also have the opportunity to network with other innovators, investors and business leaders.

In addition to the showcase and networking, guest speaker Steve Papa, will be sharing stories from his entrepreneurial journey on a topic dubbed: "Is everyone crazy or is it just the entrepreneurs?" Papa is back with his latest software business, Parallel Wireless. Come hear what he and other local innovators have to say.

The QCI is marking its second anniversay this year.

"The evolution of the QCI community in just the last year has been tremendously gratifying," said Travis Hunter, general manager, Quincy Center for Innovation. "The diversity of companies that make up QCI today - companies in markets as varied as robotics, healthcare, edtech and cleantech - is unlike anything in the region and we look forward to opening our doors in November to celebrate them and the business community."

WHAT'S COOKING with Marie & Suzie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

Apple Scotch Pie

By MARIE

I recently found today's recipe for apple scotch pie and could not wait to try it. The combination of buttery apples with brown sugar was a delicious treat.

It takes a little bit longer to make than an apple pie, but worth the effort.

APPLE SCOTCH PIE

5 cups thinly sliced pared apples (about 4 medium apples)
1 cup brown sugar
1/4 cup water
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1/4 cup flour
2 tablespoons sugar
3/4 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 tablespoons butter
two pie crusts (I used Pillsbury)

In a sauce pan, combine the apples, brown sugar, water and lemon juice. Cover and cook over medium heat 7 or 8 minutes or until the apples are just tender. Stir in the flour, sugar and salt. Cook stirring constantly until mixture boils and thickens.

Remove from heat, and stir in butter and vanilla.

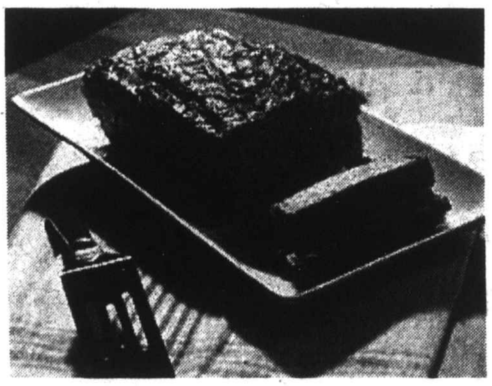
Heat oven to 425. Turn apple mixture into pastry lined pie plate. Cover with crust and cut slits on top. Bake 40-45 minutes. Cover the edges with foil to prevent excessive browning.

Meat Loaf

By SUZIE

Meat loaf can be a healthy (and delicious) comfort food, especially when made with some extra veggies and the bread crumbs are nixed. Here is a yummy and healthy one. Feel free to substitute grass fed ground beef if you prefer. Add more spices if you like! (My kids like when I add Siracha sauce to this recipe....also use organic ingredients when available for a healthier meatloaf) One of my tricks when making this is to break off a little piece when all mixed and fry in a small pan until done to taste if there is enough salt/seasonings. If not enough, just add a bit more! (always start small because you can't take it out once its in there!)

1 lb organic ground turkey
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 medium onion, chopped fine
1 medium red pepper, chopped fine
2 garlic cloves, minced
4 small mushrooms, chopped fine
1/2 cup shredded zucchini
2 eggs
1/4 cup tomato paste



1/2 cup coconut flour (takes place of the breadcrumbs)
1/4 cup fresh chopped parsley
1 teaspoon dried thyme
1 teaspoon cumin
1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
Sea salt and pepper

Saute' onion, pepper, and mushrooms for about 5 minutes until slightly browned in a bit of olive oil. Let cool. Mix everything together and knead all ingredients well and place in a nice even mound on parchment paper on a cookie sheet. Bake about 45 minutes until cooked through. Let sit about 5 minutes before cutting.

Peaches-Raspberry Treat

By MARIE

If you are looking for an easy dessert here is one that is delicious. Especially with the abundance of peaches these days.

Peaches-Raspberry Treat

4 large peaches (cut in halves)
1/3 cup red raspberry jelly (heated slightly)
1 pint pistachio ice cream

Place peach halves in a dessert dish. Pour the raspberry jelly over it, and refrigerate for a couple of hours.

At serving time, top with scoop of the ice cream.

Muffuletta Sandwich

By MARIE

Is there anything more satisfying than a delicious sandwich?

There are a lot of us who sort of watch their bread intake, but for today's sandwich it's an exception.

According to my daughter Ann Marie who found this recipe, this sandwich originated in New Orleans in the early 1900s from Italian immigrants. It is still the main course in New Orleans for some people to this day.

1 round loaf crusty bread (hollowed out)
1/8 pound mortadella
1/8 pound salami
1/4 pound sliced provolone cheese
1 can marinated chopped black and green olives
1 fresh tomato leaves of lettuce.

Cut the loaf of bread in half. Hollow out the center and then layer all of the ingredients until the tomato and lettuce is on the top.

Cut in pie like pieces. The flavors are like not ordinary sandwich.

Voters Decide First 4-Year Mayor's Term Next Tuesday

city's 54,666 registered voters.

The main attraction on the Nov. 3rd ballot is the spirited race for the first four-year mayoral term between incumbent Thomas Koch and former Mayor William Phelan. This is also the third time in eight years that Koch and Phelan have squared off for the city's highest elective office.

Koch, who is seeking his fifth term, unseated Phelan in 2007. Phelan had served for six years after unseating incumbent former Mayor James Sheets in 2001 in one of the closest elections in Quincy history. After a recount, the final margin of victory for Phelan was 17 votes.

Koch defeated Phelan in a mayoral rematch in 2009 and was re-elected in 2011 defeating School Committeewoman Anne Mahoney. Koch was unopposed winning a fourth term in 2013.

Koch and Phelan advanced to the Nov. 3rd final election after winning nominations in a four-way preliminary election Sept. 24. Koch finished first with 6,670 votes and Phelan was second with 3,514 votes. Finishing "out of the money" were Councillor at-Large Doug Gutro (3,066 votes) and Mahoney (3,037 votes).

Gutro and Mahoney have endorsed Phelan in his bid to win back the mayor's office. Phelan is also backed by former Mayor Joseph LaRaia. LaRaia served for two years – 1976 and 1977 – and was unseated by Arthur Tobin – Phelan's future father-in-law.

Koch has received some endorsements of his own including the backing of Gov. Charlie Baker who Koch supported in the race for governor last fall. The 930-member Quincy Education Association, 197-member Quincy Fire Fighters Association, Local 792 and the Professional Fire Fighters of Massachusetts (PFFM), a state organization of 12,000 members, has also announced support for Koch.

In gauging interest in the city election and thus his turnout forecast, Shea noted that 960 voters had cast absentee ballots by noontime on Monday. By comparison in 2009 – the last time Koch and Phelan battled for the mayor's seat – 1,109 absentee ballots were cast. Turnout for the final election that year was 44.72 percent.

The final day to vote by absentee is Monday, Nov. 2 by noon at the city election department, second floor, City Hall (glass annex building).

Shea said the race for the first four-year mayoral term plus contested races for councillor at-large and five of the city's six ward seats should help draw voters to the polls Nov. 3. There's also been an uptick in the race for three school committee seats. There are three candidates on the ballot but a sticker campaign is being waged by a former school committee member who lost her seat two years ago.

The polls will be open at precincts throughout the city from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 3. A list of those polling locations appears on Page 9 in English, Page 10 in Chinese and Page 11 in Vietnamese.

Here's a look at the rest of the ballot:

Councillor at-Large:

There are five candidates seeking three council at-large seats. They are incumbents Joseph Finn, 15 Williams St., and Michael McFarland, 27 Village Dr., School Committeeman David McCarthy of 48 Whit-two-year term. He is challenged by political newcomer Willliam Harris, 74 Ashworth Rd.

City Election Nov. 3

The Quincy Sun published profiles of all the city council candidates in contested races in its Oct. 22nd edition.

In the race for three school committee seats, there are three candidates on the ballot but a fourth candidate waging a write-in campaign emerged earlier this month.

Incumbents Paul Bregoli, 80 Willow Ave. and Kathryn Hubley, 44 Marion St., are seeking second four-year terms. Hubley has served the past two years as the vice chairwoman of the school board.

Also on the ballot is first-time candidate James DeAmicis, 66 Campbell St., a 2015 graduate of Quincy High School and freshman at Suffolk University. DeAmicis, who turned 19 years old Oct. 14, would become the youngest resident elected to office if he wins one of three School Committee seats Nov. 3.

A fourth candidate – retired QHS principal and former two-term School Committee member Frank Santoro – had qualified for the ballot but dropped out of the race in August citing personal reasons.

Emily Lebo, a former Quincy School Committee member, launched a write-in campaign for one of the three school seats Oct. 6. Lebo lost a bid for a second term in 2013 by 273 votes. Winning seats that election were political newcomer Noel DiBona who topped the ballot, Anne Mahoney and Barbara Isola.

If she wins a School Committee seat Nov. 3, Lebo would become the first resident to win elective office as a write-in candidate.

Shea has trained and hired extra poll workers to count write-in ballots cast next Tuesday. All ballots with a sticker or a name written on the "write-in" line must be counted by hand.

Shea is hopeful the election results in all the other contests – mayor, councillor at-large and ward council seats – will be tabulated by 10 p.m. Results of the school committee race could stretch another hour or more, he said.

Community Groups Collaborate For Houghs Neck Clean-Up Day

Quincy's Department of Planning & Community Development, Houghs Neck Community Council, Restore Christian Church, and Life Community Church successfully organized over 20 volunteers recently to participate in a clean-up event for the Houghs Neck community.

Restore Christian Church provided sandwiches, snacks, trash bags and gloves. Participants cleaned up Edgewater Beach, Sea Street, the Fire Station, Leo Kelly Park, World War II Memorial, Macy Street Park and the Atherton Hough school yard. Altogether, about 10 bags of trash were collected from the area.

Other participants worked hard to beautify the Houghs Neck Community Center. They picked up trash that was on the lawn, spread 14 bags of mulch, and replaced a piece of our fence that had been damaged during the winter in front of the building. They even built a picnic table so the seniors and kids will be able to enjoy some time outside. Life Community Church purchased the mulch, picnic table materials and fence piece.

The volunteers went above and beyond. At least 11 kids came to lend a hand with their parents. It is great to see parents and guardians getting their kids involved in volunteering at such a young age to help the environment and the community. Thanks are owed to the many volunteers and donors who made the event happen. A special thanks to Restore Christian Church for inspiring and co-organizing the event.

NQHS Incorporates Summer Reading With Guest Speaker Programs

North Quincy High School was honored to host two very special guest speakers recently: Medal of Honor recipients Melvin Morris (US Army Vietnam) and Hershel Woodrow Williams (USMC WWII).

Morris and Williams spoke about serving in support of country and of others and valuing the freedoms we enjoy as Americans. Holding American flags, the student-audience lined up in front of the school welcoming the guests. Students asked great questions and sent the heroic visitors off with a fantastic impression of NQHS. The program was related to the 11th grade students reading the book Unbroken by Laura Hillenbrand.

On Sept. 23, the granddaughter and great granddaughter of Henrietta Lacks were welcomed as guest speakers for a 10th grade program connected to the bestselling book The Immortal Life of Henrietta Lacks by Rebecca Skloot.

Henrietta was a a poor tobacco farmer whose cells—taken without her knowledge in 1951—became one of the most important tools in medicine, vital for developing the polio vaccine, cloning, gene mapping, and more. Henrietta's cells have been bought and sold by the billions.

On Sept. 30, Travis Roy was welcomed into NQHS and he discussed his book 11 Seconds which was read by the senior class. The ninth grade program "The High School Journey" began on Sept. 22, and will continue throughout the year.

All 9th graders read the book The Alchemist.

Melvin Morris received the Medal of Honor for his valorous actions on Sept. 17, 1969, while commanding the Third Company, Third Battalion of the IV Mobile Strike Force near Chi Lang. Then-Staff Sgt. Morris led an advance across enemy lines to retrieve a fallen comrade and single-handedly destroyed an enemy force that had pinned his battalion from a series of bunkers. Staff Sgt. Morris was shot three times as he ran back toward friendly lines with the American casualties, but did not stop until he reached safety.

Hershel Woodrow Williams received the Medal of Honor for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of his life above and beyond the call of duty as demolition sergeant serving with the 21st Marines, 3d Marine Division, in action against enemy Japanese forces on Iwo Jima, Volcano Islands, 23 February 1945.

Quick to volunteer his services when our tanks were maneuvering vainly to open a lane for the infantry through the network of reinforced concrete pillboxes, buried mines, and black volcanic sands, Cpl. Williams daringly went forward alone to attempt the reduction of devastating machine-gun fire from the unyielding positions. Covered only by 4 riflemen, he fought desperately for 4 hours under terrific enemy small-arms fire and repeatedly returned to his own lines to prepare demolition charges and obtain serviced flamethrowers, struggling back, frequently to the rear of hostile emplacements, to wipe out one position after another.

On one occasion, he daringly mounted a pillbox to insert the nozzle of his flamethrower through the air vent, killing the occupants and silencing the gun; on another he grimly charged enemy riflemen who attempted to stop him with bayonets and destroyed them with a burst of flame from his weapon. His unyielding determination and extraordinary heroism in the face of ruthless enemy resistance were directly instrumental in neutralizing one of the most fanatically defended Japanese strong points encountered by his regiment and aided vitally in enabling his company to reach its objective.

Cpl. Williams' aggressive fighting spirit and valiant devotion to duty throughout this fiercely contested action sustain and enhance the highest traditions of the U.S. M.C.

NORTH QUINCY HIGH School also recently welcomed the granddaughter and great granddaughter of Henrietta Lacks as guest speakers for a 10th grade program connected to the bestselling book The Immortal Life of Henrietta Lacks by Rebecca Skloot.

Archeological Presentation Nov. 4

The Quincy Quarry and Granite Workers Museum will present a PowerPoint presentation on the work of archaeologist Richard Muzzrole.

The presentation will begin with his first archaeological work in Quincy through his main involvement in the Granite Railway, the first commercial railroad in America. The railway was completely obscured by years of dumping and filling of discarded quarry waste and the overgrowth of the woodlands of the West Quincy site.

The presentation will take place at the Ward 4 Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy, on Wednesday, Nov. 4 at 7 p.m.

The public is welcome to attend.

In coming to Quincy in the 1950's, after many years of roaming the country, Muzzrole landed a job with Roland Wells Robbins, the archaeologist hired by the city of Quincy to uncover the first iron blast furnace in America located along side the brook now called Furnace Brook at Hall Place in West Quincy.

Muzzrole was hired by Robbins as an archaeological assistant. From that point on, he spent the rest of his life uncovering history.

A self-taught archaeologist, Muzzrole was hired by the Smithsonian Institution in Washington D.C in 1962 and spent nine years at the Smithsonian. After leaving the Smithsonian, he was hired by the City of Alexandria Virginia as the first city archaeologist.

Returning to Quincy, he continued unearthing single-handedly the remains of the Granite Railway,.not only in Quincy but in Milton at the terminus of the railway at Gulliver's Creek as it enters the Neponset River in Milton.

Muzzrole also unearthed an early Germantown glassworks that included buildings and the wharf on the Town River. The quarry museum has digitized over 300 of his slides. He donated, 150 to the museum and 150 to the Quincy Historical Society before his death in 2013.

For information, call the museum at 617-472-1322 and leave a message or visit our website at www.quincyquarrymuseum.org

Inter-Church Council Hosting Info Session On Opioid Addiction

The Inter-Church Council will host an information session on the current opioid addiction epidemic Wednesday, Oct. 28 at 7 p.m. at St. Chrysostom's Episcopal Church, 1 Linden St., Quincy.

Representatives from Phoenix House Intensive Treatment Services, located in Quincy, one of the region's leading providers of substance abuse treatment services, and Boston's highly respected Gavin Foundation, will present information on the addiction crisis and their collaborative response to it.

The public is invited to attend.

"Families often turn to their church and pastor when a family member is struggling with drugs or alcohol," said The Reverend Eric M. Hillegas, Rector, St. Chrysostom's Church. "We are fortunate, despite being at the epicenter of a devastating drug epidemic, in having two such outstanding organizations joining forces here in Quincy to save lives and provide healthier, happier futures to troubled individuals and their families."

The presentation will focus on resources available to the public, including information about whom to contact when help is needed, online resources, the admission process, insurance and payment questions, and the unique partnership between Phoenix House and the Gavin Foundation. A question-and-answer session will follow.

Phoenix House New England, in partnership with The Gavin Foundation, opened Phoenix House Intensive Treatment Services in February 2015 to provide Acute Treatment Services and Clinical Stabilization Services to adults struggling with drug or alcohol use. The 64-bed facility, located at 43 Old Colony Avenue in Quincy, offers separate units for men and women and focuses on stabilizing individuals; enhancing their motivation to change; and linking them to continued treatment and collateral services.

Three Stores Warned Following Alcohol Sting

By SCOTT JACKSON

Three stores received written warnings from the Board of License Commissioners after selling beer to an underage female during a series of September sting operations.

The board unanimously approved the written warnings Oct. 20 for Kam Man Market, 219 Quincy Ave.; Brewers Corner Liquors, 372 Granite St.; and Hancock Tobacco, 1500 Hancock St. Brewers Corner Liquors was also cited for having an employee drinking while on duty.

Quincy Police Lt. Peter Turowski, the department's liquor inspector, said a 19-year-old woman was sent into 30 bars, restaurants and retail stores on Sept. 12 with a marked $10 bill and attempted to purchase alcohol. The three stores brought before the board all failed the compliance check.

The woman was able to purchase a six-pack of 12-ounce Miller Lite bottles at the Kam Man Marketplace and told Turowski she had not been carded. Turowski then went inside the store and spoke to the cashier who told him, through her manager who translated for her, that "she was tired and had a long day."

Lewyn Ong, the manager on duty that night did not dispute Turowski's report and said the store would make sure it does not happen again.

"It's a mistake, but there is no excuse for that," Ong told the board.

At Brewers Corner Liquors, the woman was able to purchase a six-pack of 12-ounce Bud Light bottles. She told Turowski the cashier had not asked her for identification, and that the cashier appeared drunk himself.

Turowski then went inside and spoke with the cashier, who owner David Devoy later identified as a friend who was helping him out that night. The lieutenant told the board he could smell alcohol on the cashier's breath and he had red, glassy eyes and was slurring his speech slightly. Two open and partially empty cans of Natural Ice were also found on a windowsill, Turowski said; one was still cold and the other was warm.

When asked if he had been drinking that night, the cashier told Turowski he was "OK." The man, Turowski stated, later said he did not card the underage woman because he thought he knew her from the neighborhood.

Turowski told the board he previously gave Devoy a verbal warning after the owner was intoxicated while working in the store on July 2. Devoy disputed that claim at the Oct. 20 meeting, though he did not dispute Turowski's report on the Sept. 12 incident.

"I don't believe I was drunk that day," he said. "I don't remember drinking that day."

The woman purchased a six-pack of 16-ounce Bud Light bottles at Hancock Tobacco, and again said she had not been carded. The store's cashier told Turowski he "wasn't paying attention," and forgot to ask for identification when asked why he hadn't done so.

Jon Aieta, an attorney for storeowner Manny Patel, did not dispute Turowski's report at the board meeting. Patel plans to have the store's cashiers TIPS (Training for Intervention Procedures) certified as a result of the incident, Aieta said.

"It should not have happened," he said.

New Restaurant 'The Quill' Opening In Quincy Center

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Home Ice Sports Bar in Quincy Center has closed for good and a new establishment –The Quill – operated by a local restaurateur will open in its place following several months of renovations.

The Board of License Commissioners on Oct. 20 gave unanimous approval to a request for a transfer of the all alcohol restaurant and cabaret licenses from the Home Ice Sports Bar at 35 Washington St. to Tokenfire LLC, which will open The Quill in the space following two or three months of renovations. The new venue, a combination restaurant and bar, will have 60 seats and a maximum capacity of 80 people.

The Quill will be operated by Noel O'Connor, the manager of record, and Devin Adams. Adams recently opened The Townshend, a restaurant located at 1250 Hancock St. in Presidents Place that offers a menu boasting craft beers and specialty dishes, such as ricotta ravioli with duck sausage and a boar ragu with polenta.

DENTISTRY
for the 21st Century
by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

DANGERS OF CIGAR SMOKING

While tobacco products pose a known risk for oral cancer and other types of cancer and disease, cigars are often regarded as being safer than cigarettes. After all, cigarettes are packaged with a warning label while cigars are more ceremoniously wrapped, packaged, and smoked. However, the National Institutes of Health reveals that a cigar emits as much as 90 times the level of nitrosamines (potent cancer-causing compounds) that a cigarette does. A single premium cigar can also hold as much tobacco as an entire pack of cigarettes. So even if a cigar smoker takes an occasional puff and does not inhale, he or she is still bathing his or her mouth and throat in at least 60 cancer-causing compounds.

The best way to ensure better health is to give up any kind of smoking. For quality, compassionate dental care, please call 617 479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We are located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we are proud of our staff - a staff dedicated to helping you look and feel better. We are grateful for the trust our patients have placed in us by choosing us to provide their dental care. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist.

P.S. According to the National Institutes of Health, smoking one to two cigars daily doubles the risk of cancer of the lips, tongue, mouth, throat, and esophagus. Smoking more than two daily increases the risk dramatically.

ling Middle School. It would be the continued work on our infrastructure, which is old and antiquated, whether that's more seawall work or flood control projects or water and sewer replacements and drain replacements, road reconstruction," Koch said.

"We put in an early statement of interest for a new elementary school in Squantum to replace that aging plant. We continue to work with Dan Quirk on a vision for the [Fore River] shipyard. More of what we've been doing is essentially what I see."

With two developments already underway in Quincy Center, Koch said the next project to go through the permitting process will be Peter O'Connell's proposed 15-story apartment building, which would be located on the city-owned Hancock Lot. That project could go before the City Council for approval as soon as Nov. 9. City officials are also working with LBC Boston on plans to build a hotel in the 1500 block of Hancock Street.

"It will need council approval. There will be public hearings. There will be a public process on that. That will be the next piece," Koch said. "We continue to work with the new group in town, LBC Boston, and they're looking at a hotel. They're looking at some residential. We will continue to work with them to bring that to fruition."

The city, Koch noted, has also applied for a $5 million state grant for infrastructure work in the vicinity of the Parkingway. The grant could be awarded as soon as this week.

"We're looking at one road to connect Granite Street to Hannon Parkway – not an alleyway, a real road. This MassWorks grant would allow us to build a road in the Parkingway closer to the Hancock Street stores that then creates more developable parcels in the end," Koch said. "I expect to hear positive news."

In the coming months, Koch also plans to unveil a proposal to build a 700-car garage on the Hancock Lot. Those plans are being finalized, but the garage is expected to cost in the range of $20 million, which Koch plans to pay for with new revenue generated in Quincy Center.

"We're going to have to go in for the council for more bonding capacity to build a new approximately 700-car parking garage on the Hancock Lot. All of these things were always part of the master plan. The residential is popping sooner because that's where the marketplace is right now," Koch said.

"The only difference is, under the old way the master developer was going to build it and we would buy the garage back. [Now], we're going to build the garage but the funding source is the same: the new businesses in the downtown, the new tax growth from the downtown pays down the infrastructure cost."

Koch is confident additional developments will come online in the downtown as well. Once plans for the garage are finalized, excessively," Phelan said.

"Number two: We need a school system that is top notch – second to none – and we shouldn't rest until we have the best school system in the state. Number three: We have to control the development of our city. We're now seeing development control us and control the future of our city. We have to make sure we stand up to the development that isn't consistent with our zoning and if we want to direct development in certain areas, we rezone in order to create that development, just like the Quincy Center revitalization initiative I began.

"Second to last, we need a city that has a vibrant city center and I would absolutely move forward with that vision that was created by the public when I was in office. Lastly, keep two feet on the ground. Be transparent and accessible and preserve our neighborhoods, reinitiate the neighborhood first initiative, reinitiate constituent services, and open office hours and make sure those bread and butter issues that impact people's quality of life get addressed in a professional and timely and economic manner."

Phelan, who served as the city's mayor from 2002-2008 and previously served on the School Committee, said finances would be his top priority if he were elected to a four-year term Nov. 3. The city, he said, needs to hold the line on property taxes and have a healthy respect for taxpayers whose money it spends.

"I reduced taxes two out of my six years in office," Phelan said. "That's certainly going to be a goal of mine."

In terms of education, Phelan said a strong school system would be beneficial to the city's finances as it makes the city more attractive.

"A strong school system is the one common denominator in most cities that have strong finances. If you want a strong city financially, you want to have the best school system in the state," Phelan said. "It will be reflected in your finances as well, because people want to live here. It will generate more tax revenue and help you hold the line on property taxes, notwithstanding the fact that it's going to help kids and our future, and that's obviously a priority as well."

Phelan, if elected mayor, would serve as chairman of the School Committee. He said he would work with the other committee members and school administrators to identify priorities for the system.

"There are all different types of priorities when it comes to education," Phelan said. "The mayor is the chairman of the school committee and the approach I always took was the mayor is one member – let's get a report from the superintendent as to where the need is, where the future lies, and then lets have an honest to goodness discussion with the School Committee to set our priorities and then let's fund.

"I'm not going to sit here and tell you what I'm going to do in terms of education at this point in time without

ABE COHEN

Remembering Abe Cohen And His Work

A TRIBUTE and APPRECIATION

Granite Bench Dedicated In Memory Of Human Rights Activist, Quincy Veteran

By SANDY EATON

Quincy veteran and human rights activist Abe Cohen was memorialized on Oct. 18th with the dedication of a granite bench at the Robert Burns Park in Quincy Center.

Hosted by Abe's family and the South Shore Coalition for Human Rights, civic leaders and friends stepped forward to praise Abe Cohen and the work for peace, equality and socialism to which he had dedicated his life.

Abe passed away in June 2014, three months short of his 98th birthday. As a boy in the 1920s, he joined his parents in fighting to save the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti, and as a youth in the 1930s he worked to lay the foundation for the building of the CIO in the Fore River Shipyard. With a degree in optometry, Abe found himself in Europe during WWII as an Army Medical Corps officer risking his life to save others in the infantry, which led to his capture by German soldiers. Ironically, he was hounded for his deep beliefs during the McCarthy witch-hunts of the 1950s. Abe and his wife Madeline helped build the fair housing movement in Quincy during the civil-rights upsurge that swept the country, North as well as South, in the 1960s.

When the South Shore Coalition for Human Rights was organized in the 1970s, Abe and Madeline dove right in, both becoming activists and officers in this movement to reverse the damage being done to the region's social fabric by the stoning of Black children during the desegregation of Boston's public schools. With Abe as its president during much of the 1980s, the SSCHR pioneered efforts to integrate housing, both public and private, across the South Shore. Madeline and Abe spent nights with the first Black family to move into the City of Quincy's family housing in Germantown in order to minimize the danger they faced.

The dedication ceremony, chaired by Coalition president Deanna White-Hebert, was highlighted by messages of support by elected officials. Mayor Thomas Koch, State Rep. Tackey Chan and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin spoke of Abe's exemplary contributions to Quincy. David Harris, Jr., president of Randolph Fair Practices, recalled the founding of the Coalition, in which he participated, and his reception of the Coalition's Citizen of the Year award in 1982. Virginia Dindy, a Coalition board member, spoke on behalf of the South Shore Baha'i community, with which the Coalition worked closely in the 1990s on anti-racist education. Harold Crowley spoke on behalf of the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library, recalling Abe's immense service as a volunteer there in recent years.

Abe's family was well represented, with daughter Nancy Cohen and her partner Norman Christophersen coming from Chicago, son David and spouse Judy Atkins from Greenfield and granddaughter Mandy from Los Angeles. Nancy spoke on behalf of the family, and all helped with the unveiling of the bench. Many other family members participated, as well as former neighbors and friends from all over.

After returning to Quincy following World War II, Abe and some friends formed the United Granite Company on Columbia Street, which specialized in Hebrew lettering and graphics. One-time friendly competitor A. Monti Granite Company produced this granite bench, beautifully engraved with the logo of the South Shore Coalition for Human Rights and the insignia of the US Army Medical Corps.

The Reverend Dr. Sheldon Bennett, minister emeritus of the United First Parish Church, was away and unable to attend, but he sent a moving message to be read that concluded:

"A granite bench under the gaze of Robert Burns - how appropriate! I look forward to sitting on this bench, feeling the rock-solid steadfastness and strength of Abe's spirit, so full of life and with such a passion for justice, and to look out over the City of Quincy he so loved."

Thirty four women participated in the project some making two and three lap robes. A resident donated a great deal of yarn which helped make this project so successful. Also at the luncheon were Mayor Thomas Koch, Veterans Services Director George Nicholson and Norfolk County RSVP Volunteer Coordinator Cris Goldsmith. Mayor Tom Koch: A Quincy Story.

Tom Koch grew up in a house where service to community was important.*
His parents, Richard and Simone, founded the youth sports and charitable organization, the Koch Club, *with a simple motto: "Everyone Willing To Help, Willing To Help Everyone."

The Koch Club's legacy lives on today in the City's annual Flag Day Parade and Celebration. Tom took it over from his late father in the 1980s, and working together with the business community, transformed it into one of the largest events of its kind in America and one of Quincy's great summer traditions.

Tom took those values of helping others, hard work and treating every person with dignity to a career in public service.

As a mayoral aide in the 1990s, Tom helped negotiate the agreement that transformed a landfill into a world-class golf course and playing fields for our young people in West Quincy.

Tom moved on to the job long held by his father, Park Commissioner, leading a once-in-a-generation restoration of our parks, playing fields and open spaces.

When he became Mayor, Tom repaired the City's finances and launched an improvement program that included schools and a senior center, flood relief, public safety and parks — all earning Quincy national attention.

Tom took on tough issues ignored for years and built partnerships with local, state, and federal officials that led to unprecedented investment in our community.

Yes, there are campaigns, but Tom's heart, his honesty, his work, and his passion are about something bigger than politics:
It's About Quincy.
Always has been. Always Will.

That's Leadership We Trust.

Andrew McCarthy Serves Country With FEMA Corps

Andrew McCarthy just started working at the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) Joint Field Office in N.J., but the project is the beginning of the end of his AmeriCorps journey.

"I've gotten to live in different cities. . . . It has definitely opened up my eyes and mind to different ways of life and given me a greater appreciation for our country," McCarthy said.

McCarthy, a 2010 graduate of North Quincy High School, joined FEMA Corps, an arm of AmeriCorps National Civilian Community Corps (NCCC), in February 2015. AmeriCorps NCCC members are 18-24 year olds who dedicate themselves to a full-time residential service program for about a year. AmeriCorps NCCC partnered with FEMA in 2012 to establish FEMA Corps, which specializes in projects related to disaster preparedness, response and recovery.

McCarthy is trained as Hazard Mitigation Specialist and is a member of Recovery Task Force Team Alpine Four. Alpine Four, based out of Denver, Colo., is tasked to complete three project cycles or "spikes" that last between six and 11 weeks. The team conducted earthquake shelter surveys for the American Red Cross in Utah. The team then worked at FEMA National Headquarters in Washington, D.C. before being deployed to an active disaster in Austin, Texas.

McCarthy helped out in Texas by completing recovery of two counties, or over 1,000 properties, in a computer program that calculated the cost of damages. Yet, he most enjoyed the tangible experience of going on field assessments.

"We were able to actually get out to affected areas and see actual damage instead of just seeing numbers on a computer screen," McCarthy said.

For Alpine Four's third and final round, McCarthy joins the Public Assistance team in N.J. Disaster Declaration 4231 after a wind storm hit four counties in South Jersey this past June.

While McCarthy said his hometown of Quincy is familiar with less damaging straight-line wind storms, he hopes family and friends can connect to his personal story. For instance, he traded in coaching a ragtag team of Quincy Middle School hockey players for living with a rowdy bunch of teammates on Alpine Four.

"I've made lifelong friends who live all over the country," McCarthy said.

McCarthy intends to continue his studies in Political Science at University of Massachusetts Boston after the program ends in November. He has participated in Rotary clubs since high school.

Mike McFARLAND

COUNCILLOR AT LARGE

Vote Tuesday, November 3rd

The City of Quincy is a great place to live, to work and to raise our families. My top priority if elected will be to continue to improve the quality of life in the City of Quincy while balancing residential and commercial interests. I will continue to make all voting decisions based on a high standard for the quality of life and maintaining value for all of our residents and taxpayers. We are home to over 95,000 people and we need to have strong schools and feel safe in our homes and enjoy our City.

Over the last twenty years I have seen major demographic changes in our City. Working together with the Mayor, the School Committee and our federal and state delegations, I have provided the resources necessary to sustain and improve our quality of life.

The Quincy Public Schools provide an excellent education to our residents. Our staff includes well-trained teachers and offers a variety of academic and vocational programs. Our facilities continue to be upgraded and we have a new Quincy High School, a new Central Middle School and a projected new Sterling Middle School which is under design and review. Window replacement projects and energy efficient heating systems leveraged with state and federal grants will allow us to utilize our schools for years to come.

Public safety works its way into this balance. I will continue to vote for strong police and fire departments. We need effective manpower, equipment, training and communications. As the nature of threats continues to change we must be ready, willing and able to handle them. I will continue to push for drug education at the school level and use public access television to educate residents of all ages. Education, enforcement and rehabilitation are the only ways we can reduce this curse.

We need clean water and reliable sewers and storm drains. Systematic water main replacements and relining of the sewer system to prevent seepage are necessary expenditures to maintain our quality of life. I will continue to work with both our City and state delegations to leverage any MWRA grants and MWPAT grant programs that might be available.

I will continue to support public works and parks projects. We must keep our streets and sidewalks in good repair and maintain park spaces for our residents to enjoy. A clean and inviting city helps to promote civic pride and benefits both residential and commercial interests.

The needs of education, public safety, infrastructure and the neighborhoods must be balanced with available revenue resources. I will continue to vote for projects that sustain a quality of life and value for all of us through strong fiscal management and sound capital planning. We can move ahead if we all work together: taxpayers, residents, elected city and state officials. The solutions for a better quality of life are here. Quincy is my home and your home so let's be proud of it and continue to work together.

elect JAMES M. CONNORS
Ward 2 CITY COUNCIL

I am a proud parent and single father to my four children: Stephen, Erin, Caitlin and Kristen. I have worked as a Quincy City employee for over 25 years. There are many issues in our community and I would like to be a voice for our neighborhoods.

I share the concerns for our city's seniors and will work hard to advocate on keeping our neighborhoods clean, safe and secure. I am very concerned with the drug epidemic in our community and support treatment programs in the hopes of recovery for those in need, I plan to work with the cities elected officials and community groups to expand educational programs in the city. Education is essential to a prosperous community and we must support our schools. With current development plans we must make sure we have adequate space for our incoming students. I will make constituent services a priority. With great focus on good jobs and better opportunities for Quincy residents. I am hoping my neighbors and all city residents will give me the chance to represent them and fight for the needs of their families.

Be Smart, Be Safe, Be Seen For A Safe Halloween

Tips For Motorists And Trick-Or-Treaters

Every Halloween, monsters, zombies and ghouls fill the streets across the United States to celebrate. With all those excited youngsters walking (and running) around, the trick-or-treaters and motorists each play an important role in making it a safe night.

"On Halloween, motorists need to be especially vigilant between the hours of 4 p.m. and midnight, when pedestrians are the most vulnerable," said Diana Imondi Dias, Traffic Safety Education Specialist for AAA Northeast. "Slowing down, and watching for trick-or-treaters who may cross between cars or mid-block may save a life."

To help make the roadways safer this Halloween, AAA Northeast offers motorists a few easy tips:

• Avoid Neighborhood Shortcuts. If possible, avoid cutting through residential streets where trick-or-treaters are likely to be present.

• Watch for children in the street. Watch for children walking on streets, medians and curbs. Excited trick-or-treaters, often in dark costumes, may not pay attention to traffic and cross mid-block or between parked cars.

• Slow down. According to the AAA Foundation for Traffic Safety, a pedestrian is more than twice as likely to be killed if hit by a car traveling 35 mph compared to 25 mph. What seems like a small difference – just 10 mph - can be the difference between life and death.

• Drive sober. Alcohol-impaired drivers make up about one-third of all motor vehicle deaths resulting in an average of one death every 45 minutes. Always designate a sober driver.

AAA also has tips for parents and children:

• Trick-or-treat together. AAA recommends that parents accompany youngsters at least until the age of 12.

• Make a plan. Review trick-or-treating safety precautions and plan the route ahead of time. Remind children never to cross the street mid-block or between parked cars.

• Check costumes. Choose disguises that don't obstruct vision and where possible use face paint instead of masks. Check and adjust the length of costumes to avoid tripping and add reflective material or tape to keep kids visible. Carry a flashlight.

• Buckle up. If driving trick-or-treaters between neighborhoods, always use appropriate car seats and have children exit and enter on the passenger side of the vehicle.

"Our brand beyond food and beverage is really hospitality and how we treat people, how we manage the space and how we keep things safe. We will have a space of quality that attracts quality people. What we hope to do is really brighten up that area and I think it will be successful," Adams said.

"As far as food goes, it will be on the same basis as The Townshend – quality and as locally sourced as we can get."

O'Connor said they want to clean up the venue – both physically and image wise.

"We want to do really good food, craft beer, craft wine and just have a really safe, fun environment," O'Conner stated. "We believe strongly in treating guests well and they'll treat us well and come back. That's kind of our mantra."

The proposal was well received by members of license board.

"The Townshend is beautiful, absolutely super," Health Commissioner Drew Scheele said. "If you're going to have that kind of restaurant there, it's going to do nothing but make improvements so I'm real happy."

"It's a positive change up there," Police Chief Paul Keenan added.

In March of this year, a patron inside the Home Ice Sports Bar was attacked and killed by another patron. The suspect in that case, Paul J. Fahey, was indicted on a charge of murder and has pleaded not guilty in court.

Domestic Violence Ended

OCTOBER IS DOMESTIC VIOLENCE AWARENESS MONTH

Excuses

Unfortunately, many abusive partners are very good at excusing their behavior and blaming it on others. Victims and survivors often believe that the abuse in the relationship is either their fault or not the responsibility of their abusive partner. Here are some common and important excuses to look out for:

"I was only abusive because I was drinking. I will get sober and the abuse will stop".
While alcohol and drugs can exacerbate an aready abusive situation, alcohol and drugs alone do not cause someone to become abusive and controlling. Becoming sober will not solve the underlying problem.

"I have bi polar disorder, I can't help it when I become abusive".
Bi polar disorder is marked by someone that experiences manic highs and depressive lows without being able to control which pole they feel when. Someone that is abusive can often switch between kind and caring and controlling and degrading when other people are not around to witness the abuse.

"I have an anger management problem, I lose control and explode".
Anger management is a very different issue from abuse. Many abusers are calm and still very controlling and manipulative. People with anger management problems lash out at many people in their lives. Abusive partners usually focus this behavior on one person and are able to control their behavior when others are around.

"I'm really stressed, you pushed my buttons".
We all have bad days and are often pushed to the edge with stress. Everyone is responsible for their own actions and behavior despite their circumstances.

If you identify with any of these behaviors, there is help available. The following provide counseling and education to stop abuse:

Halloween Health, Safety Tips From Quincy Health Dept.

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

Even though it's not an official holiday, Halloween is much treasured by children and adults alike. What could be more festive than trick-or-treating, apple bobbing, or costume parties? Fall celebrations like Halloween are fun times for children, who can dress up in costumes, enjoy celebrations, and eat yummy indulgences. To make sure ghosts, gremlins and spiders are the only things to be afraid of on Halloween, check out these tips to help make the festivities fun and safe for trick-or-treaters, party guests and your children.

- Snacking: Children shouldn't snack while they're out trick-or-treating. Give them a light meal or snack before they venture out – don't send them out on an empty stomach. Urge them to wait until they get home and let you examine the contents of their "goody bags."

- Safe Treats: Tell children not to accept – and especially not to eat – anything that isn't commercially wrapped. Inspect commercially wrapped treats for signs of tampering, such as an unusual appearance or discoloration, tiny pinholes, or tears in wrappers. Throw away anything that looks questionable.

RUTH JONES

- Choking hazards: If you have very young children, be sure to remove any choking hazards such as gum, peanuts, hard candies, or small toys.

Bobbing for apples is an all-time favorite Halloween game. Here are a couple of ways to scare away germs that can cause foodborne illness:

- Reduce the number of bacteria that might be present on apples and other raw fruits and vegetables by thoroughly rinsing them under cool running water.

- As an added precaution, use a produce brush to remove surface dirt.

If your notion of Halloween excitement is a party at home, don't forget these tips:

- Beware of spooky cider! Unpasteurized juice or cider can contain dangerous bacteria such as Salmonella, which can make you ill. To stay safe, always serve pasteurized products at your parties. Normally, the juice found in your grocer's frozen food case, refrigerated section, or on the shelf in boxes, bottles, or cans is pasteurized.

- No matter how enticing, don't taste raw cookie dough or cake batter that contains uncooked eggs.

- Frighten bacteria away by keeping all perishable foods refrigerated until serving time. These include, for example, finger sandwiches, cheese platters, fruit or tossed salads, cold pasta dishes with meat, poultry, or seafood, and cream pies or cakes with whipped-cream and cream-cheese frostings. Cold temperatures help keep most harmful bacteria from multiplying. Bacteria will creep up on you if you let foods sit out too long. Don't leave perishable treats out of the refrigerator for more than two hours (1 hour in temperatures above 90°F).

Whether you're goblin or ghoul, vampire or mummy, poor costume choices, including face paint, decorative contact lenses and flammable costumes, can haunt you long after Halloween if they cause allergic reactions or injuries. Enjoy a safe and happy Halloween by following these guidelines from FDA, the Consumer Product Safety Commission, and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention:

- Wear costumes made of fire-retardant materials; look for "flame resistant" on the label. If you make your costume, use flame-resistant fabrics such as polyester or nylon.

- Keep candle-lit pumpkins and luminaries away from doorsteps, walkways, landings, and curtains. Place them on sturdy tables, keep them out of the reach of pets and small children, and never leave them unattended.

- Wear bright, reflective costumes or affix strips of reflective tape to the costume so you'll be more visible; make sure the costumes aren't so long that you're in danger of tripping.

- Wear makeup and hats rather than masks that can obscure your vision.

- Test the makeup you plan to use by putting a small amount on the arm of the person who will be wearing it a couple of days in advance. If a rash, redness, swelling, or other signs of irritation develop where the makeup was applied, that's a sign of a possible allergy.

- Check FDA's list of color additives to see if makeup additives are FDA approved. If they aren't approved for their intended use, don't use them.

- Don't wear decorative contact lenses unless you have seen an eye care professional and gotten a proper lens fitting and instructions for using the lenses. This can lead to significant risks of eye injuries, including blindness.

- Hold a flashlight while trick-or-treating to help you see and others see you. Always walk and don't run from house to house.

School Committee Candidates Make Their Pitch

are both finishing their first four-year term, and newcomer James DeAmicis, a 2015 Quincy High graduate and freshman at Suffolk University. A fourth resident, former committee member Emily Lebo, is running a write-in campaign for one of the three seats and was invited to participate in Monday's forum.

At the forum, co-sponsored by the city's Democratic and Republican committees, each candidate was allowed three minutes to introduce themselves voters. The candidates were not asked any questions.

Bregoli, a longtime Quincy Public Schools teacher, guidance counselor and coach, said he is running on his record on the committee.

"I have a record and I am running on my record. When I said four years ago some of the things I set out to do, I think I've accomplished [them]," Bregoli said.

"I talked about academic standards and we have now in place that athletes cannot fail more than one subject and still play a sport. I asked for health educators back in both high schools, we now have them. I asked for athletic trainers back in both high schools, we now have them.

"I asked the superintendent if we could please put CPR in place with our health educators – last year 125 middle school students were certified in CPR. I spoke with the DA's office last year about dating violence in our high schools and we're going to have some type of program in place by the end of the school year."

Hubley, a mother of two students in the school system, said the committee cannot afford to lose her perspective.

"I am the only current Quincy Public Schools parent on the ballot for School Committee on Nov. 3. I experience the school system from a parent's perspective every day and have done so for the past 12 years. As parents, we give our kids a voice and we the committee cannot afford to lose that perspective," Hubley said.

"Prior to being elected to the Quincy School Committee, I volunteered for the Quincy Public Schools for nine years, serving two terms as president of the Quincy Citywide Parents Council, where I worked to address important issue such as bullying and drug awareness. These issues impact our children's general readiness to learn across all areas.

"Prior to my volunteer work, I was a teacher at preschool and kindergarten doing my student teaching at the Snug Harbor Elementary School. That's 21 years of experience as a parent, advocate and teacher."

DeAmicis, who is vying to be the youngest elected official in city history, wants to bring a student's perspective to the committee.

"I believe we need new representation. It's evident to me that our city's government currently does not embody the future of this great community. We need leaders who will listen, who will share your concerns and will work hard to resolve what needs to be done," DeAmicis said.

"In addition, I am part of a growing network of young leaders who believe that now is the time for the next generation to step in with fresh ideas and energy. When tasked with being a School Committee member, it does help to have years of experience and professional development, but in reality Quincy does not have some-one with a student's perspective.

"I do and it's because of this I am qualified for this role. I know what students and parents value in their education and believe that as a committee member I will be responsive, receptive and continue to encourage an open dialogue."

Lebo, who has served as a school administrator in Quincy and Boston, touted her background.

"I know I have the skills needed to fully understand the work required for School Committee. This work means knowledge of state regulations and includes a tremendous amount of reading and analyzing materials about each individual school and about the district as a whole, not the least of which is an almost $100 million school department budget, which is by the way one-third of the entire city budget," Lebo said.

"I believe my experience as director of career and technical education for first Quincy and then Boston Public Schools and my past experience on the School Committee has prepared me well to do this important work.

"I know the School Committee plays a significant role in the city because it drives and maintains our school system. We all know the effect a good system has on the future of our children; additionally, we know the effect a good school system has on our property values."

Contractor Sought For Snow Hauling

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city is putting out to bid a contract to transport snow removed from city streets during the upcoming winter.

Last winter, when a record-breaking 114 inches (9.5 feet) of snow fell in Quincy – 85 inches of which fell during a three-week period in January and February – the city paid contractors $7 million to haul snow removed from streets and sidewalks to snow farms at Squantum Point Park, the Fore River Shipyard and Crown Colony.

Chris Walker, a spokesman for Mayor Thomas Koch, said the state suggested the city to put the contract to haul snow out to bid this winter given the amount of hauling required last winter; the city has previously out to bid contracts for plowing streets, but not hauling. Putting the hauling contract out to bid is not expected to result in a cost savings, Walker noted.

"This is the first year we bid for removal. This was a suggestion from the state," Walker said. "Some cities do it and some cities don't."

Wide scale snow hauling efforts, Walker added, such as the one seen this past winter would only be undertaken if necessary.

"This is just the hauling contract, which we will only do in the worst of the worst situations," he stated.

Bids for the contract are being accepted until 11 a.m. on Nov. 13, at which time they will be unsealed. Only companies that have been hauling materials for municipalities for at least five years are eligible to bid and each bidder must own at least 90 percent of the fleet it intends to perform work under the contract.

The winning contractor would also be required to repair any damage caused during snow removal operations by May 1, 2016.

combined 56 condo units and 7,500 square feet of retail space. Two other projects have been announced, a proposal by Peter O'Connell to build a 15-story apartment tower with 122 units on the Hancock Lot and a proposal from LBC Boston for a 116-room hotel at 1500 Hancock St.

Briggs, whose company had invested in previous master developer StreetWorks' plan for the downtown before partnering with Gate Residential, promised the project would be beautiful once completed, with top-of-the-line amenities.

"This has been a long, hard road but this is going to be an absolutely beautiful building when it's finished with state-of-the-art amenities and features. Right now, it looks a bit of a mess but when it gets finished it's going to be absolutely beautiful," Briggs said. "In fact, I said to my wife the other day I would really love to move into this building. I would love to move out of our house and I'd love to move in."

Koch credited the companies behind the project, particularly Quincy Mutual, for jumpstarting redevelopment in the downtown.

"This is a great day; it can't be overemphasized and I'm so grateful to the partners, but in particular Quincy Mutual. Your commitment to the city, decade after decade, is remarkable and you've been the steady hand behind this program for some time," Koch said.

"I can't say it enough – if this wasn't happening we wouldn't be talking about Peter's project; we wouldn't be talking about the Galvin project. Something had to happen – you guys have made it happen here today.

UNION WORKERS, developers and city officials signed a steel beam before it was hoisted into place Tuesday afternoon. This was the final steel beam installed at the West of Chestnut project. "This is the first time we've had construction south of Granite Street in a decade. It's been talked about for a long time. Because of your efforts, Mr. Briggs, your company and your partners, here we are today to see the building come up. Some of my opponents and naysayers are very sad to see this day, but I'm so delighted for the future of our city because this is just the beginning…this is the first visible sign of the rebirth of our downtown."

The construction of West of Chestnut remains ahead of schedule, the developers said.

The wood frame for the top five floors of the 64-unit building on the Hancock Street side of the site has already been completed, and windows are now being installed; its steel frame on the first floor was completed in July. That building was scheduled to open as soon as next April.

The second building, on the corner of Chestnut Street and Cottage Avenue, will hold 105 apartments once completed with a 75-car garage underground. The final steel beam for that building was hoisted into place Tuesday. That building should be ready to open in July 2016.

Quincy Mutual, in November 2014, also announced plans to build a 220-unit residential building with additional street level retail in a portion of the company's parking lot. Work on that project, dubbed East of Chestnut, will commence sometime after West of Chestnut is completed.

"Let's get the crane moved over to East of Chestnut, Doug, and get started on that one," Koch said.

Mayor Thomas Koch: Focus On The City's Future

Koch plans to begin the process of finding the developer for the remaining portions of the Hancock Lot, a process he expects to play out over the next year.

"This is all going to shake out pretty quickly, probably within the next year, on how everything will get laid out. The garage decision will be made in a couple months. The garage decision will determine what else we have available to either lease out or to sell for further footprint," Koch said. "The Parkingway, I expect we'll either be building another garage or a private developer will be building a new garage on a development on that side of the street."

Koch has been criticized by Phelan for making "election year deals" with developers planning to build in Quincy Center. Koch dismissed that criticism and said his plan for Quincy Center is a result of public input received soon after Street-Works, the city's previous master developer, signed on to redevelop the downtown.

"I think [it's] hogwash," Koch said of the criticism. "The reality is the downtown has been talked about for almost 50 years. When I first took office after we negotiated a deal with Street-Works we had more than 30 public meetings. We talked to every neighborhood. We had business meetings. We had interpreters for the Asian community. It was a very extensive, open public process.

"What's happening in the downtown is a result of that. These things don't happen overnight. We had a recession. We obviously fired the master developer. The city was protected through the LDA; they lost millions, we didn't lose anything. We advanced our plan. We leveraged federal and state dollars. We got our MEPA permitting in place.

"So I'm not sure what people mean by that. There are those naysayers or those that hang in the background or throw the grenades in no matter what you do. But I've been hearing for years 'you'ye got to do something about the downtown, we've got to do something about the downtown.' Guess what: It's happening. It's not happening overnight."

As the city's mayor, Koch has served as chairman of the Quincy School Committee for the past eight years. When asked about the possibility of adding more teachers or other personnel in the future, he said the school system is healthy as it is now, but left the door open to the possibility.

"The schools, I think, are healthy. Does that mean everything is perfect? I'm not suggesting that at all. But we have very, very good class sizes. The teacher-pupil ratio is very, very good. We will continue to monitor that," Koch said.

"There are no glaring missing pieces from my perspective. I think we're handling the educational challenges well…Something may come up over next year or two that makes sense to introduce a new program that may require some additional staff. I'm open to that at any time. But just adding for the sake of adding, I'm not in the business of that."

When asked about finding a replacement for Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, if the superintendent were to retire during the next four years, Koch said the School Committee, as a whole, should determine if outside candidates would be considered along with candidates already within the school system.

"We have a very large school department with a very well-educated, talented staff. The superintendent position is unique. You're looking for certain qualities for leadership in addition to knowledge," Koch said.

"When Rick makes that decision, as a committee we'll come together and decide how we want to approach that, whether we open it up to the outside or not. I do think we have qualified candidates in house, but that's something we will get into as a committee. I'm one of seven, so we'll make that decision as a body."

Koch was also asked about public safety spending. The Quincy Fire and Police Department, he stated, are both at healthy levels of staffing. He would, however, like to the see the fire department's rescue truck in service more often.

"As you know, two years ago we added 10 patrolmen to the budget. We have a very healthy number of manpower in the police department," Koch said. "If I had the opportunity, would I add to the fire department? Yes. I would like to see the rescue truck in service on a regular basis. It's a lot more in service now than it used to be, but it would be nice to have that in full service all the time.

"But I've got to be very careful because we're getting a lot of things done. We're making a lot of commitments. We've got to continue to find the balance, budget wise."

If re-elected, Koch said his next budget would likely include a "drug czar" to coordinate efforts being undertaken already by other city departments and groups in the city. That person would be tasked with allocating mitigation funds the city will receive from a planned medical marijuana dispensary on Ricciuti Drive and looking for grant money, among other roles.

"In the next budget we'll probably put in a position somewhere – a drug czar type thing – just to head up the whole effort, because I think it's becoming that time consuming and all inclusive. It's not one department, it includes so many aspects of government, so I'll be looking to do that in the new budget," Koch said.

"Don't get me wrong, there are people paying attention to the issue, but in their part of the world. Schools are doing good programming in the schools. Police are doing good things. Bay State Community Services/Impact Quincy does good things. [This would be] somebody to really pull it all together, identify the issues in our city and work with the task force."

HELP FOR FIBROMYALGIA PATIENTS

Fibromyalgia is a chronic condition characterized by pervasive pain above and below the waist and on both sides of the body, as well as in the skull, spine, rib cage, and the bones in the throat and ears. Diagnosis is predicated on the experience of tenderness or pain in 11 of 18 recognized "tenderness points." Fibromyalgia is not only very difficult to diagnose, but it is also very challenging to treat. However, recent research involving patients suffering from severe fibromyalgia shows that chiropractic treatment involving cervical adjustments led to significant improvement of a number of symptoms by 15% or more when added to other fibromyalgia treatment regimens. Researchers speculate that chiropractic adjustments may get at the root of the problem.

Is the pain of fibromyalgia getting you down? If so, then chiropractic care may be just the thing for you. The care we provide at FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, is becoming increasingly popular among fibromyalgia sufferers because of the pain and stress relief that it offers. Please let us help you and call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Previous research involving fibromyalgia has suggested that combining chiropractic treatments with physical therapy may enhance the effects of both treatments.

having a good discussion with my peers on the School Committee."

If current school Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro were to retire in the next four years, Phelan said he would interview candidates from outside and inside the school department.

"I think without question that's going to be the most important position that's filled for many years to come. We have to attract the absolute best candidate and recruit the absolute best candidate for that position," Phelan said. "I don't care where he comes from or where she comes from. The best candidate has to be recruited for that position. You look outside, inside, inside out and you find the best candidate for that spot."

It was his administration, Phelan said, that laid the framework for downtown development, taking steps including the rezoning of Quincy Center and establishing a District Improvement Financing zone, which set the stage for the construction of Hannon Parkway by funding necessary land acquisitions and related work.

"My administration – first time in, I don't know, 30 years – rezoned the entire downtown, allowing for streamlined permitting processes to encourage development, allowing for more dense development and mixed-use development in the downtown area. Along with that streamlined permitting process and rezoning, we wanted to make sure that there were safeguards in place related to the development that took place in the downtown, so we also created very specific design guidelines to go along with that zoning that required quality development," Phelan said.

"In addition, we developed a first of its kind District Improvement Finance zone within the downtown because at the time we were in the framework and infrastructure in the downtown needed to be changed in order to realize the dream that was created by the public. We hired Goody Clancy, one of the best urban design firms in the country, certainly in the state to put on public charrettes prior to the rezoning so we could develop a vision with the help of the public for the down."

Phelan faulted Koch for his handling of the effort to redevelop Quincy Center. Phelan criticized the incumbent for making a series of "election year announcements" related to the redevelopment, including a proposal by Peter O'Connell to build a 15-story building on the city-owned Hancock Lot.

"We've seen a series of election year announcements and it seems as though we're kowtowing to developers and an election year cycle to determine how we're going to develop the downtown. That's just not leadership," Phelan said.

"I would get acquainted with all the major players in the downtown, review the vision plan that Goody Clancy prepared in conjunction with the public's vision for downtown that we unveiled under my administration, because we have to take it away from the developers and remember who we're developing the downtown for – not the developers, the people. The people prepared a vision for their downtown in conjunction with very professional, top of the line, urban designers. Let's follow that plan.

"What that plan envisioned was leveraging the Hancock Parking Lot through a process of requests for proposals so that the city can outline specific ingredients of that parcel that they want to see and then put it out to the development world and ask the development world who wants to bid on this property and tell us whether or not they can help us to realize the vision that was created.

Phelan said O'Connell would be welcome to the table, but public input is needed first.

"The mayor of the city shouldn't be working, hatching backroom deals with developers, local or otherwise, without public input when it comes to the sale of public land," Phelan said. So what I would do is to have a public process for the leveraging of our city's asset, our people's asset, the Hancock Lot. Peter O'Connell and every other developer would be welcome to the table in that regard."

Phelan identified four programs he would launch if elected, including neighborhood meetings with city department heads and open office hours for residents to come and meet him at City Hall.

"We need to be more transparent, so I would reinstate four programs I had in that regard. One: The neighborhood first initiative, where we proactively go out with all the department heads to every neighborhood in the city and address concerns individual to those neighborhoods," Phelan said.

"Two: Constituent Services Department and an expansion of community policing. Three: Open office hours every single week, the same hours. Any member of the public can come in. We would adjust the schedule to meet the needs of the community, to meet the needs of the residents. It's all about serving the residents. I would have weekly office hours where every member of the public could come in and speak to their mayor, and I did that before. And I would also reinstitute the press availability."

The shift to add additional community police officers, Phelan explained, could be achieved by reassigning existing officers within the department.

"You don't have to [hire more officers]. It's a different method of policing and serving the public. It's using the same police department, just in a different way and we'd expand it gradually. We want to have community police officers in every neighborhood in the city. We want them in every school," Phelan said.

Red Raiders Play Four Hard Quarters

By JOE REARDON

North Quincy did Friday night at chilly Veterans Memorial Stadium what head coach Mark Nutley knew without a doubt the Red Raiders could accomplish from day one of the season.

Led by captain Aidan Brown's 115 yards rushing, North Quincy matched Patriot League champion Scituate through an entire 44 minutes in a 21-7 loss that was far closer than the score would show in what turned out to be an enormously interesting game that had the chilled crowd cheering all evening.

The Red Raiders, who dropped to a frustrating 1-7, were knotted up at 7 with playoff-bound Scituate (6-2) with just 1:37 remaining when running back Charlie Malone scampered in from the 2-yard line for the 14-7 lead. The Sailors put the game out of reach 17 seconds later when a Joe Fallon pass was deflected and picked up on the fly by defensive back Noah Pillsbury who raced into the end zone for an easy score. A keep and 22-yard scoring run by quarterback Peter Churchill gave Scituate a 21-7 bulge with 1:20 left.

North Quincy, though, was strong on defense all evening in a game that, on paper, shouldn't have been close. Nutley knew different.

"I've been telling these guys all year they can play with anybody. We finally showed up tonight," he said. "I told the guys I thought we out physicaled them and it was nice because I thought we could do that all year. It took eight for us to finally show up and unfortunately we're a 1-7 team. That's the frustrating part about it. I knew we could do that all year and it finally shows up tonight. It was a good football game, plain and simple."

The Red Raiders had possession of the ball for just 1:47 of the opening quarter, but came away with zero points. The Sailors got on the board with 49 seconds left in the half when running back Charlie Malone put the finishing touches on an 11-play, 46-yard drive to go up 7-0.

North Quincy looked sharp on its next possession as Brown picked up 34 yards on four carries and moved into Sailor territory before being forced to punt. The Red Raiders extinguished a Scituate scoring bid after that when defensive back Tom Whooley intercepted a floating pass by Churchill in the end zone for a touchback.

Brown, the Red Raiders' most dangerous offensive weapon, was dragging Scituate players the entire game,

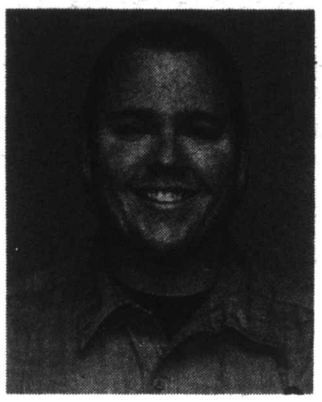
Quincy Fire Department Bracing For Winter

By MIKE SLADE
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Last winter, Quincy had a six week snow siege that blew past all previous records of snowfall. The Quincy Fire Department had the enormous and continuous challenge of responding to emergency calls, while continuously digging out all of Quincy's 2,549 buried hydrants. Each time that Quincy Firefighters would make headway digging out hydrants, another storm would come and burry the hydrants once again. Quincy Fire sent out Special Service Units with backhoes to target hydrants that were deeply plowed in and difficult to locate. The National Guard was sent in to assist Quincy Firefighters with clearing hydrants. The Quincy Fire Department launched the Adopt- A-Hydrant program which allowed Quincy citizens to adopt a hydrant of their choice, thereby keeping it clear of snow. Participants were entered into a drawing in which five winners received $50.00 gift certificates to local restaurants in Quincy. The Quincy Fire Department would like to thank Jimmy Liang, Nina Liang, and the JP Fuji Group for providing the gift certificates in support of the Adopt-a-Hydrant program.



MIKE SLADE

This year, Louis Restaurant at 1269 Sea Street has generously donated five $50.00 gift certificates for the Quincy Fire Departments Adopt-A-Hydrant program. All of last year's participants along with new participants will be entered into the raffle. At the end of the snow season, five winners will be pulled from a hat. The winners will each receive a $50.00 gift certificate to Louis Restaurant at 1269 Sea St, Quincy. Any citizen wishing to participate in the Adopt-A-Hydrant program may do so by emailing mslade@quincyma.gov. Please include in your email, your name, contact number, address, and the hydrant(s) you would like to adopt.

Another major concern for the Quincy Fire Department is carbon monoxide poisoning. Carbon monoxide has no smell, color, or taste. It is invisible and can kill you quickly. Many people who have been poisoned by carbon monoxide and survived said that they thought that they had the flu. Just last week, two homeowners in Quincy suffered carbon monoxide poisoning. Both occupants had to receive hyperbaric oxygen therapy. The purpose of hyperbaric oxygen therapy for the treatment of carbon monoxide poisoning is to reduce the amount of carbon monoxide in the blood and restore the oxygen level to normal as quickly as possible. The occupants were lucky to have survived.

To avoid carbon monoxide poisoning in your home, the Quincy Fire Department recommends that a carbon monoxide detector be placed in each level of your home. Always operate generators outside of your home and in a well ventilated area. Please make sure that vents to gas dryers and forced ventilated heating units are free of any obstructions. Please keep the area around your boiler and hot water heater clear of any combustibles.

The Quincy Fire Department takes great pride in serving the citizens of Quincy. If you should have any questions whatsoever, please do not hesitate to contact the Quincy Fire Prevention Bureau at 617-376-1015.

successful in bringing tens of millions of dollars in federal and state dollars back to our city. I think we've been very successful working with state agencies and entities because we built great relationships."

Phelan said he would stand up for residents, even if it makes him unpopular, like when he took a firm stance on rising health care costs that led the city's teachers to go on strike in 2007.

"I see a health line item go from $18 million in four years to $36 million. What do I do –start laying off teachers, firefighters, and police? No," Phelan said.

"I take a difficult stand and say 'hey listen, we have to do something about this folks' and when I start negotiating with the unions, I stand up for taxpayers. The result? We saved $10 million. Did I make a lot of friends doing it? No, I didn't. Not in city government."

The two candidates were also asked what is the biggest issue facing the city's elderly population.

Koch said his administration opened the Kennedy Center and before that the city did not have a senior center despite having a large elderly population.

"We opened up a beautiful, comprehensive senior center at the old former Myles Standish School, which also housed the Beechwood by the Bay for several years. Think about that – we had one of the largest senior populations in the entire commonwealth and we had not had a senior center while many towns around us did," Koch said. "It's not just a building. It's all that programming through that senior center that is offered to our seniors.

Phelan said the biggest issue is the ability of seniors to afford living in their homes, adding that his administration had proposed a tax rebate for residents over 70.

"The biggest issue facing our elderly population is the affordability and taxes. I can't tell you how many people I've spoken with knocking on doors that are truly concerned with how they're going to pay their tax bills," Phelan said. "It's a real, live issue. We have to hold the taxes in this city. We're spending wastefully. It's creating a tax burden that our seniors can't afford."

The candidates asked what they would do about property taxes in the city.

Phelan said he would reduce taxes, noting the rate at which property in the city was taxed decreased twice during his six years in office.

"The answer is lower taxes. That's what you do. I did it two out of my six years in office," Phelan said. "This mayor increased taxes on our residents twice as much in one year as I had in my six years combined."

Koch criticized Phelan for citing the tax rate but not the average single-family tax bill, which did increase under the former mayor.

"Mayor Phelan oversaw the largest single tax increase in the last 30 years – $550. He went into the council with a $605 figure and the council cut it down," Koch said. "It's incredible how he can spew these factoids… with no basis in fact."

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Tuesday, October 20, 2015, at approximately 4:23 a.m., Officer Scott Doherty and his K9 partner Mace were on routine patrol in the area of Sea Street when he was dispatched to the 600 block of Sea Street for a report of a man down on the sidewalk.

Upon arrival, the Officer observed a male on the sidewalk on his knees with his head down on the pavement as he clutched a bag under him. Officer Doherty recognized this man because he spoke with him 45 minutes earlier in the same area. At that time, the male was lucid and could communicate with no difficulty. This time, the Officer had difficulty waking the male, who didn't respond to touch or verbal commands so Brewster Ambulance was dispatched to the scene.

At this time, Officers Bryan Donovan and Sean Crowley arrived on scene to assist. The Officer rolled the male onto his side (to prevent any choking) but he still did not move, although he was breathing. While Officers Donovan and Crowley kept observation of the male, Officer Doherty checked the bag he was clutching underneath him for any positive identification or any clues as to what substances or drugs he may have taken between now and the last time Officer Doherty interacted with him that left him unresponsive. Inside the black bag was a purse with an ID which of a female who lived nearby. The purse also had house keys, a tube of lipstick and a small camcorder in it. The male was placed in the back of the ambulance and transported to Quincy Medical Center for treatment.

The Officers then went to the female's address for any signs of a breaking and entering. The front door to the home was ajar, so they rang the doorbell and a male and a female responded. When told that they found her purse, the female was surprised and immediately went to where she keeps her purse and exclaimed that it was missing. When asked to describe the purse, she was very specific and accurate. When asked if her door is usually locked at night, she said it was closed but not locked. She said she sleeps on the couch and had her purse right under the coffee table. She said she fell asleep on the couch around 1:00 a.m. and knew her purse was there before she fell asleep, which means that the suspect was very close to the victim.

The suspect, a 35 year old homeless man originally from Weymouth was charged "Receiving Stolen Property and Burglary." The male suspect was placed under arrest at Quincy Medical Center. Nice Work!

VALUABLE AND/OR SENTIMENTAL JEWELRY: People too often keep their precious jewelry (expensive or sentimental value) in a jewelry box, often in the bedroom. It provides easy access and order when you need it. It also provides the same for the thief, whether it is an actual break-in or an inside job, like a relative or laborer in your home. For the victim, it may be difficult to replace expensive items and practically impossible to get sentimental jewelry back once it is stolen.

WHAT TO DO: consider concealing jewelry that falls into these categories rather than just leaving it in the jewelry box. For example, one idea is hollowing out an innocuous can or box, leaving the label on and then storing the jewelry there. A few years back, a woman showed me a mayonnaise jar that she washed out and then painted white inside. She kept money inside the jar stored in the refrigerator. Another person hollowed out a thick book to store her jewelry.

BOTTOM LINE: If you do not use this jewelry often but treasure it, why keep it out in the open? Remember to confide in someone close to you where these valuables are being stored in the event that something happened to you.

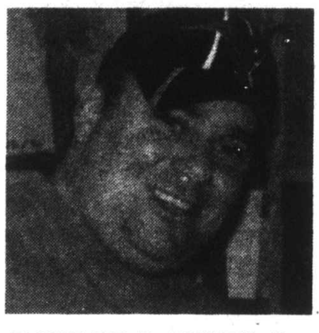
Donald B. Jones, Jr., 46



DONALD B. JONES, JR.

A funeral Mass for Donald Brian "Donnie" Jones, Jr., 46 of Hull was celebrated Monday in St. Mary's Parish in St. Ann's Church, Hull.

Mr. Jones died peacefully October 20 surrounded by family at Kindred Hospital in Brighton after a long battle with heart disease.

He was born and raised in Quincy, where he graduated from North Quincy High School in 1987. Mr. Jones moved to Hull in 1995 with the love of his life, Stacey (McInnis) Jones. They bought their home, adopted a dog and soon started their own family. He loved living in Hull, the smell of the air, the stormy seas and he could almost always be found up at the gut listening to the windmill, watching the boats and ships pass by or the planes fly overhead, listening to country music, drinking his Dunkin' Donuts and taking in the beauty of the sunrises and sunsets.

Mr. Jones was known for his laughter and smile. He had a charm that made everybody feel welcome, his kindness and quick wit would bring a smile to your face. He was always ready to lend a helping hand no matter what was needed: Rides, repairs, snow removal, baby sitting – no task was too big or too small and yes he always did it with a smile and never looked for anything in return. He loved life, especially the times he spent with family and friends. His favorite things to do were family vacations to New Hampshire, celebrate holidays, especially Christmas – Mr. Jones undeniably made the best Santa year after year at the Annual McInnis Family Christmas Party. His jolly personality had every child believe he was the real deal. Camping with his two favorite scouts, his sons Zach and Andrew, they loved getting away and just hanging out, fishing, telling stories and cooking on a campfire.

Mr. Jones was a master safe technician for Diebold, Inc. and prior to that he was employed by Mosler, Inc. and Mancini Safe. He was a longtime participant in the Men's Quincy Softball League. He was an avid miniature train collector, a huge American history buff, an extreme Yahtzee player, and a fanatic for Boston sports, especially his beloved New England Patriots.

He had a great love for animals, adopting all species, birds, cats, and his favorite four legged furry friend – his dog Cody who will be waiting to greet him at the Rainbow Bridge.

Mr. Jones leaves his beloved wife Stacey (McInnis) Jones, his two loving sons Zachary Laurence and Andrew Brian Jones, all of Hull. Son of the late Donald Brian Jones, Sr. and Barbara (D'Alessandro) Jones of Quincy. His brother Michael Gaudreau and his fiancé Pia Swann of Lexington, his sisters Faith Jones of Quincy, Shirley (Jones) Concepcion and her husband Henry of Taunton, Sheryl (Jones) Compericchio and her husband Thomas of N. Attleboro. Donald is also survived by many loving aunts, uncles, in-laws, cousins, nieces, nephews, and many close friends and co-workers.

Funeral arrangements were made by McDonald Keohane Funeral Home, South Weymouth.

Interment at Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

One of Mr. Jones' last requests was to ask more people to become organ donors, kindness pay it forward from the heart. Memorial donations may be made to the Jones Boy's Educational Fund, c/o Jinnie Walsh, Hingham Institute for Savings, 401 Nantasket Ave, Hull, MA 02045.

picking up yardage after the initial hit. "He's a tough runner," said Nutley. "He ran the ball hard tonight. The offensive line opened up some holes for him and he got his nose in there dirty, which is nice."

Scituate coach Herb Devine wasn't surprised by North Quincy's performance. He knew full well the Red Raiders were better than a one-win team and they had a tough back in Brown.

"Tonight was not pretty, but I'll take a W any Friday night," said Devine. "Their coaching staff did a great job. They played great all night. We knew they had a great running back (Aidain Brown) and we had to stop him. He broke a couple of good runs. Their offensive line played physical and I think they brought it at us. Our kids had to wake up there in the second half. They (North Quincy) hung around and was in that game in the fourth quarter.

"Overall, North Quincy just played tougher than we did."

North Quincy was even better in the second half and tied it at 7-7 with 5:02 in the third. Brown had his best series of the night, breaking a 31-yard run and putting up 58 yards on seven carries to put the Red Raiders at the Scituate 12. Fallon rolled out on the next play and hit a wide open Tom Koch for the score with Dara Griffin drilling the point after kick to tie it.

Linebacker Liam O'Connor and defensive end Allen Daley were tough on defense all evening and both players threw Scituate for big losses in Scituate's go-ahead scoring drive with under two minutes left in the contest.

Nutley was disappointed with the loss, but very pleased with North Quincy's best effort of the season against a Scituate club, who the week before, trounced a tough Middleboro squad 34-13.

"It was nice," said Nutley. "We haven't done that all year. We did it in the first half against Middleboro and tonight we put four quarters together. We just have to learn to finish, finish games. We're tied going into the fourth quarter. That's a good football team. They're going to represent our league well. I'm just happy we played four hard quarters."

In other football action, Quincy bowed to Duxbury 33-13 but the Presidents advanced into the opening round of the MIAA playoffs and will visit Marshfield Friday at 7 p.m.

North Quincy travels to Medway for a 7 p.m. kickoff Friday evening.

NQ Girls Soccer Primed For Playoffs

By JOE REARDON

North Quincy co-captain Marissa McGue is anticipating a strong tournament run in her final year on the field and she's fully convinced the Red Raiders have the lineup to go deep in the playoffs.

"We have a really strong senior group and we're very unselfish and that's the way a team should run," said the Westfield State-bound midfielder. "(Head coach Paul Bregoli) wants us to play with heart. If you play with your heart it's a game you'll win."

McGue wants to see a solid postseason effort, not only for her teammates but for Bregoli as well. "We've known him since third grade," she said. "He's done a lot for us and we want to give back by playing well."

McGue and her teammates will have to amp up their game a few notches from the somewhat lackluster performance in Saturday night's 2-0 win against city rival Quincy at chilly Veterans Memorial Stadium. McGue and Emily Anglehart picked up the tallies for the Red Raiders, improving their record to 11-3-3 heading into the final week of the regular season before the postseason pairings are set.

The win gave North Quincy the season sweep of the Presidents after beating them earlier on the schedule, 1-0. Quincy's tough season continued with the loss, dropping the Presidents to 1-13-1.

Bregoli was happy to come away with the win, but knows the Red Raiders will have to tweak their game going forward to make any noise in the tournament. "Not yet," Bregoli said when asked if the Presidents were ready for postseason play. "Not the way we played tonight. We should have had three more goals if we finished. We didn't play clean. We're like Jekyl and Hyde out there and when we play the second way we have our problems. We really have to spread the field better and make better runs."

The game had some historical significance as North Quincy goalkeeper Shannan Kennedy, who has been tremendous in frame for the team all fall, tied Kristen Bowes' 1998 school record of 12 shutouts. Kennedy will get the chance to erase that mark this week in the team's final three games.

Seth Harmon's Quincy squad had its share of opportunities to get on the board but wasn't able to finish up on its scoring bids. Co-captain Joelle Robinson set up Kari Wismar with a pass in close early on, but Wismar's hard shot passed just wide of the post. Kennedy then pulled in a seeing-eye direct kick from co-captain Gabby Jerahian with 23:48 remaining in the half.

The Red Raiders' first tally was as pretty as they come. Midfielder Mandy Hazelton lofted a direct kick towards the Quincy net from 25 yards out and McGue was there to head the ball past goalkeeper Emi Guarente for the 1-0 lead with 15:06 left in the first.

The Presidents had a chance to tie it three minutes later when forward Annie Doherty penetrated deftly through the North Quincy defense only to have her shot sail over the crossbar.

The Red Raiders made it 2-0 with 9:55 left in the first when midfielder Emily Butruccio fed Cora Cluett, who proceeded to move hard towards the frame and deliver on shot just under the crossbar for the tally.

North Quincy thought it had a third tally minutes later, but the referee ruled the shot that Guarente got her hands on didn't break the goal line.

Quincy was far more agressive in the second half and did come up with a small handful of chances to cut into the two-goal lead. Taylor Routhier missed just wide with 29:53 remaining on a pretty feed from Wismar and the Presidents best chance of the game came with 11:10 left when freshman Lindsay Sheridan wove her way through the North Quincy defense and put a hard shot toward the net that was just over the crossbar.

Bregoli said he thoroughly enjoys the process and watching his team improve on the way to securing a tourney bid. "It's more exciting to watch the kids come in and develop," he said. "The tournament is gravy. The fun part is the work getting there."

Quincy Child Sexual Abuse Prevention Partnership Formed

Coalition Meets Again Dec. 1 At Police Dept.

The movement to prevent child sexual abuse in the city got a significant boost last week. With support from Sen. John Keenan and Rep. Ron Mariano, the Enough Abuse Campaign convened a meeting of Quincy citizens and leaders from law enforcement, education, youth-serving organizations and the faith community, to form the Quincy Child Sexual Abuse Prevention Partnership.

The coalition is the latest one to join the Enough Abuse Campaign, a community mobilization and citizen education effort now operating in several other communities across the state. A seed grant from the Grace E. Brooks Trust is providing support for the new effort.

Sen. Keenan spoke of the importance of an organized city-wide effort to prevent child sexual abuse, and said that the range of organizations represented at the meeting shows a great level of commitment by the City's leaders and citizens. Quincy Police Chief Paul Keenan pledged his full support for the Enough Abuse Campaign as a way to reduce the all-too-regular flow of sexual abuse cases his Department investigates.

Jetta Bernier, whose organization MassKids directs the Campaign said: "The resolve of these concerned citizens will be a powerful challenge to those who would sexually abuse and exploit our children in the places they live, learn and play. By pairing the formidable energy of this group with the Campaign's tested tools and strategies, we are confident that thousands of Quincy residents will become educated about the issue and take specific actions to prevent it."

The group's first task will be to identify and vet local professional and lay volunteers to become certified Enough Abuse Campaign trainers. These individuals will participate in a 2-day Training of Trainers that will prepare them to provide free educational sessions for parents and a range of professionals throughout the city. The group will also focus on supporting schools and youth-serving organizations to adopt a set of specific standards aimed at strengthening their policies to keep kid safe from sexual abuse. It will discuss a number of current legislative proposals on Beacon Hill, including a bill aimed at addressing educator sexual misconduct and abuse – a problem that according to the U.S. Department of Education is affecting 10 percent or 4.5 million school children from K-12th grade.

The Partnership convenes again on Tuesday, Dec. 1 at 7 p.m. at the Quincy Police Department. All interested individuals are encouraged to attend.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your honesty continues to impress everyone who needs reassurance about a project. But be careful you don't lose patience with those who are still not ready to act.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Pushing others too hard to do things your way could cause resentment and raise more doubts. Instead, take more time to explain why your methods will work.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Be more considerate of those close to you before making a decision that could have a serious effect on their lives. Explain your intentions and ask for their advice.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might have to defend a workplace decision you plan to make. Colleagues might back you up on this, but it's the facts that will ultimately win the day for you. Good luck.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The Big Cat's co-workers might not be doing enough to help get that project finished. Your roars might stir things up, but gentle purrr-suasion will prove to be more effective.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Someone you care for needs help with a problem. Give it lovingly and without judging the situation. Whatever you feel you should know will be revealed later.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) While you're to be admired for how you handled recent workplace problems, be careful not to react the same way to a new situation until all the facts are in.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Rely on your keen instincts as well as the facts at hand when dealing with a troubling situation. Be patient. Take things one step at a time as you work through it.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your curiosity leads you to ask questions. However, the answers might not be what you hoped to hear. Don't reject them without checking them out.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Be careful not to tackle a problem without sufficient facts. Even sure-footed Goats need to know where they'll land before leaping off a mountain path.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Appearances can be deceiving. You need to do more investigating before investing your time, let alone your money, in something that might have some hidden flaws.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your recent stand on an issue could make you the focus of more attention than you would like. But you'll regain your privacy, as well as more time with loved ones, by week's end.

BORN THIS WEEK: You're a good friend and a trusted confidante. You would be a wonderful teacher and a respected member of the clergy.

Flag Poles Dedicated To School, Track Leaders

For Christopher Kennedy, Lou Tozzi, And Geoff Hennessy At Faxon Track Facility

The city recently dedicated flag poles at Faxon Track facility for longtime school and track leaders.

The poles were named for Lou Tozzi, Geoff Hennessy and the late Christopher Kennedy. Mayor Thomas Koch was joined at the ceremony by Tozzi, Hennessy and Kennedy's family.

Mr. Kennedy, a World War II veteran, served as an educator, School Committeeman an d Dean of Students at Northeastern University. He was also a former member of the Park and Recreation Board. Mr. Kennedy was remembered for his commitment to the people of Quincy and his dedication to education.

Tozzi, a former coach of the North Quincy High School track and field and cross country teams, is a member of the Massachusetts Track and Field Coaching Hall of Fame. A retired director of Quincy Public Schools Department of Special Needs, he was introduced by Rich Kennedy and lauded for his ability to extract every ounce of potential from his team. Tozzi coached several state champions while at North Quincy, and his expertise helped the City design the Faxon track facility.

Hennessy, the current coach of the North Quincy High School track and field team and the combined cross-country teams, as well as the director of the Quincy Track Club, was thanked for his tireless commitment to youth athletics and host of achievements in making the Quincy Track Club one of the finest running clubs in the country.

DeAmicis Youngest Elected Takes Third School Seat

By SCOTT JACKSON

History repeated itself Tuesday as incumbent Mayor Thomas Koch defeated William Phelan for a third time in a race to serve as Quincy's chief executive, this time by 2,810 votes.

History was also made Tuesday as political newcomer Nina Liang was elected to one of three at-large seats on the City Council, becoming the first Asian American elected official in Quincy's history, and 19-year-old James DeAmicis was elected to the School Committee and will become the youngest elected official in city history.

Koch, 52, will be sworn in to the first four-year mayoral term in Quincy's history in January after defeating Phelan 12,425 votes (55.97 percent) to 9,615 (43.31 percent). Koch carried five of the city's six wards Tuesday, losing only in Ward 1. He has served as mayor since 2008 having unseated Phelan in the previous year's election. Koch also won a 2009 rematch against Phelan.

Shortly after 9 p.m. Tuesday, Koch addressed 300 supporters gathered at the Granite Links ballroom joined by his wife, Christine, and twin children Abigail and Thomas; his oldest son, Cornelius, is away at college.

"This victory belongs to all of you," Koch told his supporters. "We made a decision at the be-

John Adams' Legacy Remembered On 280th Birthday

2nd President's Love Of Education, Desire For A Well-Educated Populace

By SCOTT JACKSON

Speakers at a wreath-laying ceremony marking John Adams' 280th birthday warmly recalled the second president's love of education and his desire for a well-educated populace.

More than 300 people, many of them students, attended the wreath-laying ceremony held Oct. 30 inside the United First Parish Church, the final resting place of the late Founding Father as well as his son, sixth President John Quincy Adams, and their wives, First Ladies Abigail and Louisa Catherine.

Among his many accomplishments, speakers focused on John Adams including a mandate for public education in the Massachusetts Constitution, which would later serve as a model for the U.S. Constitution.

Kelly Cobble, the curator for the Adams National Historical Park and the guest speaker at the ceremony, said Adams took pride in his vast library that consisted of thousands of volumes. Those books helped guide Adams, including as he drafted the Bay State's constitution inside his law office in Quincy, which is

New Sterling Cost $49.7 Million

$4 Million Less Than Price To Renovate Current School

By SCOTT JACKSON

The new Reay E. Sterling Middle School could cost upwards of $49.67 million in a worst-case scenario, nearly $4 million less than the projected cost of renovating the current school, according to the team responsible for planning the new facility.

Tom Kerwin, a project manager with Joslin Lesser, and L. Scott Dunlap, the managing principal of Ai3 Architects, gave a presentation on conceptual plans for the new school at the School Committee's Oct. 28 meeting.

Earlier that day, the city's Sterling building committee had met with the Massachusetts School Building Authority's facilities subcommittee to present plans for the school. The Sterling committee will be before the MSBA's full board on Nov. 18; the state agency will then decide between building a new school on site and rehabbing the current facility. The project team believes the MSBA will decide to

Moratorium Sought On High Stakes Testing

By SCOTT JACKSON

Members of the Quincy School Committee have called for a moratorium on high stakes standardized testing, citing its impact on students and teachers.

Committee members Kathryn Hubley, David McCarthy and Barbara Isola on Monday approved a resolution that was to be introduced yesterday (Wednesday) by Hubley, the committee's vice chair, at a conference of the Massachusetts Association of School Committees.

The resolution, which comes as state officials weigh whether to scrap the Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment System (MCAS) test for grades 3-8 in favor of the national Partnership for Assessment of Readiness for College and Careers (PARCC) test as soon as next spring, says such high stakes tests negatively impact both students and educators alike.

"The overemphasis on standardized testing has caused considerable collateral damage in too many schools," the resolution reads in part, "including narrowing the curriculum, teaching to the test, reducing a love of learning, pushing students out of school, driving excellent teachers out of the profession and undermining school climate."

The resolution calls for "locally developed, authentic assessments and more time for educators to teach and students to learn."

It also calls on federal and state officials to work with educators and parents on "assessment systems that support positive teaching practices and better prepare students for lifelong learning."

More than half of school districts statewide administered the PARCC to students in grades 3-8 last school year, according to state records. State officials could vote as soon as this month to require all districts to administer the PARCC in those grades starting in the spring of 2016.

The School Committee on Oct. 28 voted in favor of supporting several other resolutions that will be introduced as this week's conference of the Massachusetts Association of School Committees. They include a resolution seeking a study of changing start times for middle and high schools and the addition of a school committee member on the state's Board of Elementary and Secondary Education.

THE CHAMELEON GEMSTONE

Named after the Russian tsar Alexander II, alexandrite is a gorgeous gemstone that was once mined exclusively in the Ural Mountains. In recent years, alexandrite has also been found in Brazil, India, Myanmar (Burma), Madagascar, and Zimbabwe. This is good news for those who appreciate the gemstone's surprising ability to change color. In daylight, alexandrite is green or bluish-green. However, when the sun sets and an alexandrite gemstone is held up to the light of an incandescent bulb, it turns a soft shade of red, purplish-red, or raspberry red. This unique optical characteristic makes it a most valuable gemstone, while its relative hardness (8.5 out of 10) means that it is uncomplicated to wear.

Alexandrite has been ascribed with a variety of magical and mystical properties. For example, gamblers like to wear it because they believe it improves their chances of winning. Shea's Big Shoes To Fill

City Clerk Joseph's Shea's decision to retire sometime early next year – after serving the city for nearly a quarter of a century as city clerk – leaves some pretty big shoes to fill.

SHEA

Shea has performed the myriad of duties as clerk since 1992 with dedication and professionalism not only with his government colleagues but the public at-large. He's overseen the modernization of the city clerk's office while fulfilling his responsibilities as clerk of the City Council, record keeper, Board of Registrar chairman and member of the Quincy License Board.

If you've been around Joe while he's working at City Hall, he's always moving and multi-tasking. One minute he's on the phone, the next he's looking up a record or checking a license. And he treats everyone the same: with respect, patience and fairness.

He's also a very humble and unassuming guy. He likes to say he's been fortunate to succeed a legend like former City Clerk John Gillis.

But the fact is, Joe's a legend, too.

His career in local government dates back to the administration of former Mayor Walter Hannon. Shea served as Hannon's executive secretary for four years from 1972 until 1976.

He returned to City Hall in March of 1991 succeeding the late great Thomas Burke who stepped down after more than 20 years as assistant city clerk. Gillis tapped Shea as his assistant city clerk and less than two years later, Gillis stepped down to run (and be elected) a Norfolk County commissioner. Shea then moved up to the clerk's job after a vote by the City Council.

He's been a City Hall fixture ever since.

During his tenure as city clerk, Shea has performed his responsibilities deftly and admirably. He also helped guide the move and temporary relocation to the new permanent home of the City Clerk's office on the second floor of the glass annex of City Hall – a process that took several years. The relocation involved – among other painstaking tasks – moving and relocating hundreds of volumes of city records to a temporary office and then back again to City Hall. Through it all the clerk's office remained open to conduct business as usual.

Joe's been known to work nights, early mornings, weekends, holidays – whatever it takes to make sure what needs to get done gets done. And in a timely manner.

Shea has also been active in the community, most notably as a member of the now dissolved Quincy Partnership. The former group of active citizens and business professionals left its mark on the city raising funds for the John Adams and Abigail Adams/John Quincy Adams bronze statues in Quincy Center, new "Welcome to Quincy" signs at various gateway locations throughout the city, and exterior lighting at some historic sites.

He's also been one of the ringleaders of the Saint Patrick's Day Brunch that's raised thousands of dollars for charity and local causes.

Shea will be leaving City Hall as the clerk but he intends to remain active as a Norfolk County commissioner, succeeding Gillis who is stepping down after serving some 23 years as a commissioner in what became a second chapter of public service. Shea said he plans to volunteer on several government projects, including the preservation of historic records and further updating of vital statistics. He'll likely seek his own four-year term as county commissioner in the 2016 election.

Shea's decision to retire will lead to speculation as to who the next city clerk will be.

The most obvious, qualified, and deserving of potential successors is Nicole Crispo, the current assistant city clerk. Crispo began working in the City Clerk's office in 1999 after being employed for a time at Quincy City Hospital. She's held three positions in the office – two in the election division and one in the assistant's office. Crispo is a trained municipal clerk and is on track to be a certified municipal clerk soon.

CRISPO

Crispo is a lifelong Quincy resident and 1989 graduate of Quincy High School. She was named assistant city clerk in March 2014 replacing Maureen Hallsen who retired after 20 years as the assistant.

Shea said Crispo is a worthy and qualified successor.

"She's been involved in all facets of the City Clerk's office. She's been trained at every level. She'd make a great clerk," Shea said.

The appointment of the next city clerk is in the hands of the City Council. One scenario has the current council naming Crispo acting City Clerk with an appointment date as the new clerk when Shea retires.

Or the council could wait on an appointment until after the new council is seated in January.

Whenever this decision is made, we hope that the nine city councillors who are voting on this appointment consider two main factors: experience and tradition.

Crispo has worked in the City Clerk's office for 16 years – including the last 20 months as the assistant city clerk. She's been Shea's shadow during this time – attending conferences, training, and professional seminars. She's filled in as a member of the License Board and as City Council clerk in Shea's absence.

Certainly the time she has spent learning and performing the various duties of the City Clerk's office deserves merit and strong consideration.

There's also a tradition of succession.

The last three city clerks: Allen Cole, John Gillis and Joseph Shea – also served as assistants before they became clerk. Those appointments were quick and unanimous.

We hope the City Council follows suit and appoints Nicole Crispo as the next city clerk.

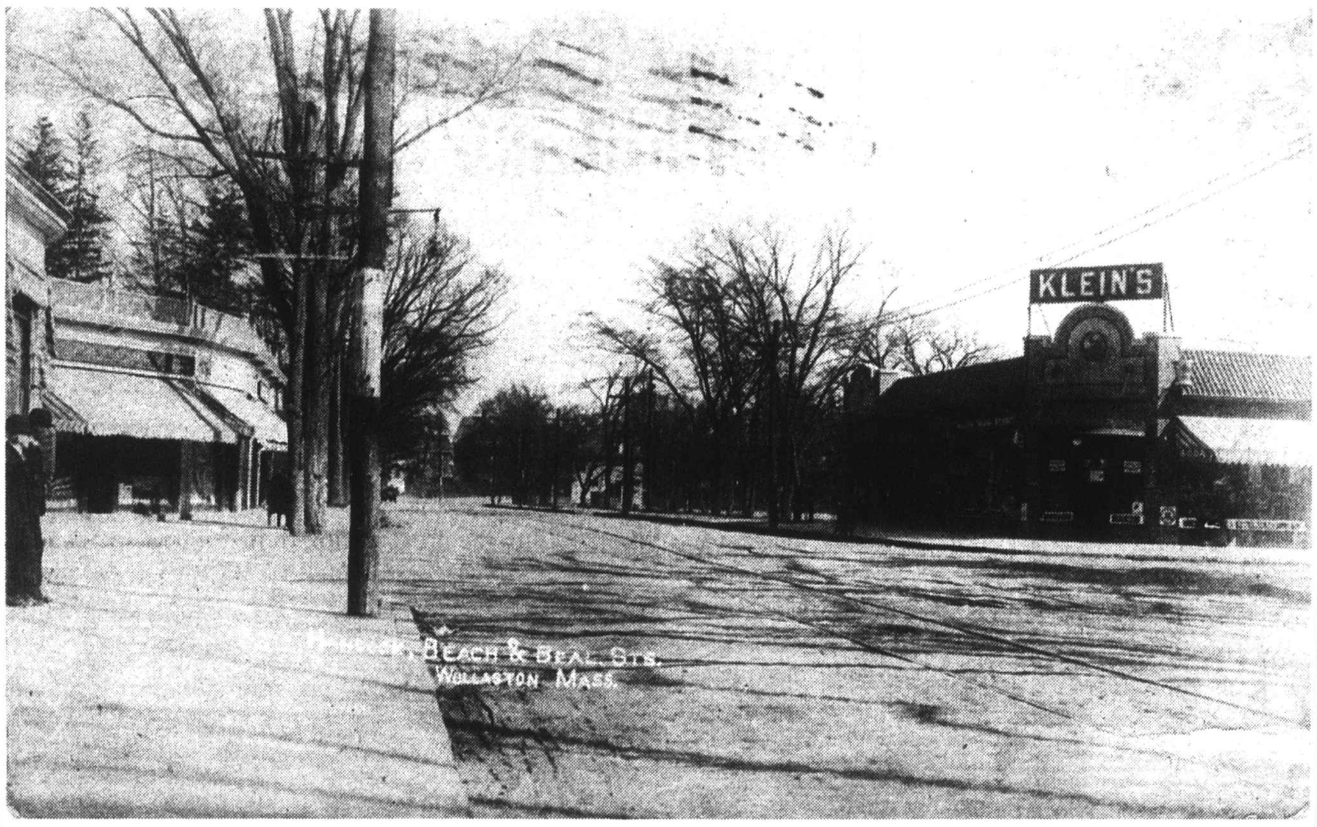
Scenes From Yesterday



FOR ALMOST 100 years this Wollaston intersection has been designated Lt. Raybern B. Melendy Square. The crossroads of Hancock Street with Beach and Beale Streets looked like this in 1916 when he and his brother who grew up in this neighborhood enlisted in the U.S. Army to join the fight in Europe. After quickly rising to the rank of lieutenant he was engaged in the heat of battle when he was killed in action in France just 10 days before the Armistice was signed on Nov. 11, 1918. These two commercial buildings that he knew as a youngster are still extant, although the one on the right has had a second floor addition. And today people from nations around the world walk freely through here thanks to the courage of brave young American heroes like Ray Melendy. His name is emblazoned on a bronze plaque just beyond the two gentlemen on the left. If you are in downtown Wollaston look for it and thank him. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Remember Our Veterans Nov. 11 - And Every Day

A veteran is a man or woman who has served in the Army, Navy, Airforce, Coast Guard or Marines. There are probably people you know that are Veterans that live here in Squantum.

For example, the grandfather we see dropping and picking up his grandson Brian, Tony Wolowicz, U.S. Airforce 1954 – 1958. Lieutenant Colonel Jason Oberton, U.S. Army, my friend Josie's dad and my soccer coach.

The gentleman everyone sees walking the causeway and picking up trash, Bob Vernie U.S. Army, Vietnam Era. Martin Bradbury, my papa, U.S. Coast Guard. And John Coughlin, my dad who served in the U.S. Army as an Airborne Ranger. These are just a few of the Veterans in our community. I know there are a lot more out there so "Thank you for your service."

Saying "Thank you for your service" is so easy and simple maybe even add a handshake to make it more personal. These veterans aren't looking for anything in return but a "Thank you" means a lot.

Veterans shouldn't just be remembered one day a year they should be remembered every day for we have our freedom not just one day a year but every day of our life. So thank a veteran whenever you can it means a lot to them.

You can also show your support by going to the Veterans Day Parade. It's on Veterans Day every year and it is a holiday so there is no school. An hour of your time is so little to give back compared to the sacrifices these men and women have made for us.

As a reminder, this year the Veterans Day Parade is Nov. 11 at 10 a.m. Please come and show your support.

'Bob The Barber' – Hair Cuts And Whole Lot More

The saying goes that "the barbershop is the poor man's country club." Substitute the word "everyone'" for "poor," and you have Bob's Barbershop in Quincy.

The shop is located in the Squantum section of Quincy and is creatively called, "Squantum Cutters."

Step outside the front door and look left across Quincy Bay, past Squaw Rock at the best view of Boston.

Bob has been there for 35 years and has been a barber for over 50 years.

After Bob opens at 6 a.m., "everyone" gathers. Some even get a haircut.

Fran takes Bob's blood pressure and steals the crossword puzzles out of the Boston and Quincy newspapers.

Tony conjectures about the upcoming mayoral and national elections and asks who wants a coffee and donuts from the Dunkin' Donuts next door.

Law has to leave early to drop the grandkids off at Saint Agatha's in Milton but not before he has one of Tony's twisted crullers.

Jerry grieves the recent loss of his wife Carol and couldn't be in a better place for consolation and support.

Richie wants to know if Bob is starting a pool for the upcoming Breeder's Cup or World Series.

Bob cuts everyone's hair: nuns, doctors, politicians, promising young ballerinas; disabled people in wheelchairs; and a customer in a motorized chair with ALS.

And if you're sick he'll go to your home. The price of Bob's haircuts are reasonable and negotiable if you're hurting or in need.

He is a confessor; jokester; listener; and sometimes doctor…having once taken the stitches out of a customer's head.

Bob has been marshal of the 4th of July Squantum Parade as well as sponsor of many youth sports.

The shop is decorated with all types of sports memorabilia-photos of Ted Williams (many…his favorite!); Joe DiMaggio; Mickey Mantle; Rocky Marciano; and two other heroes from another medium… Mother Theresa and Padre Pio.

Amongst rows of autographed baseballs, hockey sticks and road race bibs (his daughter Susie's), are pictures of Bob's family. In addition to Susie, who also works as a hair stylist at Squantum Cutters, are pictures of Debbie, Tracy, Scott, Paul and Bob. Bob was Scott's twin brother who was killed in a car accident at 21 years of age.

Bob the Barber looks too young to have grandchildren, but he has 19 and six great.

On the large counter shelf are assorted magazines, sports encyclopedias, legos and crayons for the kids…and a makeshift barber pole.

Oh…and…Bob is Italian…and you might just get a taste of Chianti if business is slow.

If you want tea and crumpets, go to the country club. If you want a great haircut and want to talk to someone…go to Bob's.

80 Percent Turnout Expected For Election

The Democrats' drive to take over the 13th Congressional District, state senate seat in the Quincy-Braintree District and at least three house seats, in addition to retain the one gained four years ago, is expected to be a major factor in bringing out the vote on the South Shore.

The 80 percent figure generally held four years ago in the list of off-year elections when there was not as strong a fight between the two major parties for local offices.

Both the Republicans and Democrats carried out strong registration drives to get every eligible voter on the voting lists.

At the Quincy city clerk's office, 440 absentee ballots have been processed to date.

In the last off-year election in 1954, 79.5 percent of Quincy voters turned out to cast their ballots.

BURKE WINS SEAT IN CONGRESS, DEMOCRATIC SWEEP INCLUDES S.S. OFFICES

The Democratic election sweep covered the South Shore, as well as the state and the nation when that party locally wrested from the Republican a seat in Congress. James A. Burke (D-Milton) defeated State Representative William W. Jenness (R-Quincy). Mr. Burke polled 88,223 votes to Rep. Jenness' 77,247.

Democratic City Councillors Charles Shea, James McIntyre and Joseph E. Brett won seats in the state legislature, replacing incumbents, Republican State Senator Charles Hedges and Republican State Representative and Quincy Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa retained their seats in the state legislature.

DCT, OKIE Concert Fundraiser Nov. 25

The family and friends of Dennis C. Thomson and John "Okie" O'Connell will host its fifth annual NQHS Scholarship Concert Fundraiser Wednesday, Nov. 25 at the Quincy Sons of Italy, Quarry Street.

Doors open at 7 p.m. and the donation at the door is $5.

Dennis and Okie were the closest of friends and both were North Quincy High School graduates Class of 2002. Dennis and Okie were phenomenal athletes who loved playing and attending sporting events especially baseball. Dennis also had an interest for football and Okie's passion was basketball.

On Oct. 30, 2004, while driving to visit friends, having time off from the Air Force life an alleged drunk driver struck Dennis' Jeep and he passed away from his injuries on Nov. 22, 2004. Dennis was 20 years old.

Okie, while attending his final year in college, attempted to stop a fight between a friend and another man. He was punched with provocation, had hit his heads on the ground and lapsed into a coma. Okie had passed no more than 24 hours later due to his injuries on Oct. 21, 2005. John O'Connell was 21 years old.

Both family and friends have established a memorial fund in their sons' names to help those North Quincy High School students who best represent the qualities that Dennis and Okie had academically, athletically and socially.

Throughout the years there have been many fundraising events to raise money for the scholarship funds, including annual basketball and golf tournaments. Though both have been successful, scholarship committee members said there was still a void during the fall and saw an opportunity for a new event.

In November 2011, the committee held its first annual DCT & OKIE concert fundraiser. This started with over 300 people going to see local acts in Quincy. The event, now in its fifth year, has grown and another great turnout is expected this year. Touring bands from the Boston area have been added to the entertainment lineup.

For those who cannot attend the event but would like to make a donation, visit the website Rally.org/DCTOKIE.

The event is a way to honor the memories of two young men who were taken far too soon and the committee appreciates any help. Support will go a long way toward the realization of a college degree for a deserving graduate of North Quincy High School.

WHAT'S COOKING with Marie & Suzie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

Crustless Zucchini, Mushroom Pie

By MARIE

There are so many variations on making quiche or vegetable pies – which are so versatile in planning a meal. As a side or part of an entree, they can be made ahead of time.

Today's recipe was given to me by my daughter Ann Marie who made it recently when I was at her home for dinner.

ZUCCHINI, MUSHROOM PIE

1/2 cup cooked zucchini
1/2 cup cooked mushrooms
4 eggs
1 cup diced bread (about a slice or so)
1 cup milk
2 tablespoons olive oil
Salt and pepper
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

First, sauté the zucchini and mushrooms and set aside.

In a pie slightly greased pie plate, place the zucchini and mushrooms.

In a bowl, beat the eggs, add the milk salt and pepper, the pieces of bread, and cheese. Mix until blended and add to the pie plate. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 25-30 minutes or until a knife comes out clear in the center.

Leftovers if any, can be heated in the microwave. Enjoy!

Elana's Pantry Everything Bagels

By SUZIE

Here is a recipe for a very healthy bagel that is loaded with protein, fiber, and nutrients and contain no grains for those who are watching their carbohydrate intake.

This is a great recipe for diabetics and for those watching their blood sugar, and weight. A regular bagel is loaded with unhealthy carbohydrates, and are basically nutrient depleted.

But, who doesn't like a warm toasty bagel in the morning with their tea? If you don't have a pastry bag, just use a ziploc baggie with the tip snipped off. The recipe comes from "Elana's Pantry" website.

"EVERYTHING BAGELS" –
These make 50 mini bagels!

1 1/2 cups almond flour
1/4 cup golden flax meal
1 tablespoon coconut flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
1/4 teaspoon sea salt
5 large eggs (Remember, don't be afraid of eggs. They used to be demonized in regards to cholesterol numbers, but have rightfully been vindicated.)
2 tablespoons apple cider vinegar
1 tablespoon each of poppy seeds, sesame seeds, and onion flakes

In a food processor, pulse almond flour, flax meal, coconut flour, baking soda, and salt. Add eggs and vinegar and pulse thoroughly until combined.

Fit a pastry bag with a 3/8 round tip and fill with batter. Pipe into a greased mini donut pan. Sprinkle with seeds and onion flakes. Bake at 350 for about 15 minutes. Let cool for 10 minutes. Enjoy!

Pot Roast With Popovers

By MARIE

On one of those recent cool days, I bought a small pot roast (3 pounds) and it's a one pot dinner so an easy clean up after.

My family likes popovers with this meal-remember when some restaurants would serve a popover while you were waiting for your dinner?

POT ROAST WITH POPOVERS

3-4 pounds beef (I used top of the round)
3 medium sized potatoes (cut in quarters)
2 large carrots (cut)
2 garlic cloves
1 small onion (sliced)
2 tablespoons tomato paste
1/2 cup Burgundy wine (optional)
salt and pepper to taste
1 cup beef stock
2 tablespoons oil

In a large pot, place the oil in the bottom. Add the onion and garlic, season the beef with salt, pepper and any favorite herb. Add all the vegetables, then the beef, and the tomato paste (mixed with a little water), then add the wine and stock.

Cook on medium heat for 2-3 hours depending on the size of the roast.

POPOVERS

2 eggs
1 cup flour
1 cup milk
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1/2 teaspoon salt

In a bowl, beat the eggs with a beater, add the flour, milk, oil and salt. Beat until smooth.

Fill 6-8 greased muffin tins half full. Bake in a 475-degree oven for 15 minutes. Reduce oven to 350 degrees and bake 25-30 minutes longer or until firm and browned,

A few minutes before serving them, prick with a fork to allow steam to escape. Serve hot.

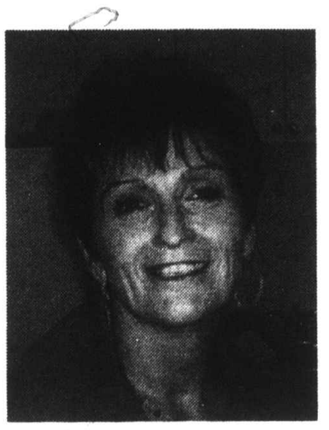
Hypertension: A Message From The Quincy Health Dept.

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS



RUTH JONES

High blood pressure is a common condition in which the continuous force of the blood against your artery walls is high enough that it may eventually cause health problems.

Blood pressure is determined both by the amount of blood your heart pumps and the amount of resistance to blood flow in your arteries. The more blood your heart pumps and the narrower your arteries, the higher your blood pressure. You can have high blood pressure (hypertension) for years without any indications.

Even without symptoms, damage to your heart and blood vessels persists. The excessive pressure on your artery walls caused by high blood pressure can damage your blood vessels, as well as organs in your body. The higher your blood pressure and the longer it goes uncontrolled, the greater the damage.

Uncontrolled high blood pressure can lead to heart attack or stroke, hardening and thickening of the arteries (atherosclerosis), aneurysm, heart failure, weakened and narrowed blood vessels in your kidneys and thickened, narrowed or torn blood vessels in the eyes.

Fortunately, high blood pressure can be easily detected, and once you are aware that you have high blood pressure, you can work with your health care provider to control it. Most people with high blood pressure have no signs or symptoms, even if blood pressure readings reach alarmingly high levels.

Some people with high blood pressure may have headaches, shortness of breath or nosebleeds, but these signs and symptoms aren't specific and usually don't occur until high blood pressure has reached a severe or life-threatening stage.

Most people have their blood pressure taken as part of a routine doctor's appointment at least every year starting at age 18. Your doctor will likely recommend more frequent readings if you've already been diagnosed with high blood pressure or other risk factors for cardiovascular disease.

If you don't visit your doctor on a regular basis, you may be able to get a free blood pressure screening at other locations in your community.

You can also find machines in some stores that will measure your blood pressure for free. Public blood pressure machines, such as those found in pharmacies, may provide beneficial information about your blood pressure, but they may have some limitations. The accuracy of these machines depends on several factors, such as a correct cuff size and proper use of the machines.

For most adults, there's no identifiable cause of high blood pressure. This type of high blood pressure, called primary (essential) hypertension, tends to develop gradually over many years. Some people have high blood pressure caused by an underlying condition. This type of high blood pressure, called secondary hypertension, tends to appear abruptly and cause higher blood pressure than does primary hypertension.

There are many risk factors associated with high blood pressure, including age, race (particularly common among blacks), family history, being overweight or obese, physically inactivity, tobacco use, too much salt (sodium) in your diet, alcohol abuse, stress, and certain chronic conditions such as kidney disease, diabetes and sleep apnea.

If you think you may have high blood pressure, make an appointment with your health care provider to have it checked. Because some medications, such as over-the-counter cold medicines, pain medications, antidepressants, birth control pills and others, can raise your blood pressure, it might be a good idea to bring a list of medications and supplements you take to your appointment. Your doctor will usually place an inflatable arm cuff around your arm and measure your blood pressure using a pressure-measuring gauge. A blood pressure reading, given in millimeters of mercury (mm Hg), has two numbers. The first, or upper, number measures the pressure in your arteries when your heart beats (systolic pressure). The second, or lower, number measures the pressure in your arteries between beats (diastolic pressure). Blood pressure measurements fall into four general categories:

- •Normal blood pressure- below 120/80 mm Hg.
- •Prehypertension- A systolic pressure ranging from 120 to 139 mm Hg or a diastolic pressure ranging from 80 to 89 mm Hg.
- •Stage 1 hypertension- A systolic pressure ranging from 140 to 159 mm Hg or a diastolic pressure ranging from 90 to 99 mm Hg.
- •Stage 2 hypertension- A systolic pressure of 160 mm Hg or higher or a diastolic pressure of 100 mm Hg or higher.

If you have any type of high blood pressure, your doctor will evaluate your medical history and conduct a physical examination. They may also recommend routine tests, such as a urine test, blood tests, a cholesterol test and an electrocardiogram.

An important way to asses if your blood pressure treatment is working, or to diagnose worsening high blood pressure, is to monitor your blood pressure at home. Home blood pressure monitors are widely available and inexpensive, and you don't need a prescription to buy one. Remember, home blood pressure monitoring is not a substitute for visits to your doctor, and home blood pressure monitors may have some imperfections.

It's never too late to make healthy lifestyle changes. Changing your lifestyle can go a long way toward controlling high blood pressure. Your doctor may recommend you eat a healthy diet with less salt, exercise regularly, quit smoking and maintain a healthy weight. But sometimes lifestyle changes aren't enough. In addition to diet and exercise, your doctor may recommend medication to lower your blood pressure. The category of medication your doctor prescribes depends on your blood pressure measurements and your other medical problems.

Sticking to lifestyle changes can be difficult, especially if you don't see or feel any symptoms of high blood pressure. If you need motivation, think about the risks and complications associated with uncontrolled high blood pressure. It may help to recruit the support of your family and friends to help keep you on the right track.

DICTIONARIES DONATION – Third graders at the Lincoln-Hancock School hold dictionaries donated by the Quincy Lodge of Elks. For the 14th year, Elks provided 750 dictionaries to all third graders in the Quincy Public Schools.The project is designed to enhance literacy and reading while helping them become good writers, active readers, and creative thinkers. A dictionary is perhaps the first and most powerful reference tool a child should own. It is a companion for solving problems that arise as a child develops his or her reading, writing, and creative thinking abilities. Attend Parade And Support Our Veterans

Next week America will be celebrating Veterans Day once again. It is a time to reflect on all put on a uniform and served this country of ours in both peace and war. It seems lately, it is mostly war. We see so many returning from war and so many others who died in the service of their country.

When the Veterans Day Parade marches down Hancock Street next Wednesday, it represents the best that America is and hopefully always will be.

Duty, honor and sacrifice should not be rare commodities. These all should be what we are and who we are.

There is a plaque hanging inside North Quincy High School that reads, "It is foolish and wrong to mourn the men who died. Rather we should thank God that such men lived." This quote is from a speech given by General George S. Patton, Jr. It is worth remembering.

Take time to honor veterans by coming out on Veterans Day for this parade to heroes.

in the Quincy High School gymnasium at 52 Coddington St. beginning at 11 a.m. Access would be through the Russell Street entrance in that case. Call the veterans services department at 617-376-1194.

Laskey began his career in the U.S. Marine Corps in June 1960. After completing basic training, his first assignment was sea duty aboard the USS Lake Champlain during the recovery operations for Commander Alan Shepherd's first space flight. He later served aboard the USS Essex during the Cuban missile blockade.

During the Vietnam War, Laskey served as a platoon sergeant for Headquarters Company, 7th Marines, at Chu Lai. In 1967, he was assigned to recruiting duties and would ultimately end that tour as the non-commissioned officer-in-charge of the Marine Corps recruiting station in Quincy. He would later serve in various capacities in military law enforcement for the Marine Corps.

Laskey retired in 1980, after 20 years of service, as the first sergeant of the Marine Corps Officers Candidate School in Quantico, Virginia.

Laskey became a member of the U.S. Marine Corps League in 1968 with Quincy's William R. Caddy Detachment and would go on to hold every office in that detachment. He then moved on to serve two terms as the Department of Massachusetts, Marine Corps League, commandant, followed by two terms as national-vice commandant for the Marine Corps League's New England Division. In 2000, he was named Massachusetts Department Marine of the Year. In 2009, he was named New England Marine of the Year.

Ultimately, Laskey would serve through the national junior and then senior vice-commandant chairs. This culminated in him serving as national commandant of the Marine Corps League from 2008 through 2010.

Laskey served for eight years as a director and vice-president of the board of the Marine Corps League Foundation. He currently serves as a member of the Past National Commandants Council. He continues to serve on many other national committees and was recently named to the board of directors of the Young Marine Program. Laskey is the recipient of many Marine Corps League awards.

His military awards include: Navy Commendation Medal; Navy Achievement Medal; Vietnam Service Medal; Vietnam Cross of Gallantry Medal; Combat Action Ribbon; Good Conduct Medal with Silver Star; and the Marine Corps Competitive Marksmanship Badges for both rifle and pistol, as well as a number of other campaign and service awards.

Retaining membership in the Marine Corps League, the Marine Corps Association, the VFW, the DAV, the American Legion and the Vietnam Veterans of America, Laskey remains and continues to serve as an outstanding and outspoken advocate for veterans and their families.

Organizations marching in the parade include the:

Quincy Cavanagh Chapter 79 DAV; William R. Caddy Detachment MCL; Second Marine Division Association; Robert I. Nickerson Post 382 AL; Vietnam Combat Veterans Combined Armed Forces Quincy Chapter; Cyril P. Morrisette Post 294 AL; George F. Bryan Post 613 VFW; Houghs Neck Post 380 AL; Quincy Post 95 AL; and the Jewish War Veterans Post 193.

Also taking part in the parade are the Quincy Police and Fire Honor Guards; Navy Operational Support Center Color Guard; Norfolk County Sheriff Department Honor Guard; the combined Quincy/North Quincy High School band; and city, state, and county officials.

Keane will serve as parade marshal. Robert Lewis, senior vice commander of the Quincy Veterans' Council, is aide to the commander. George Bouchard, past commander of the QVC, is co-chairman of the parade. Leo Reardon, past QVC commander, is officer of the day. Sergeant-at-arms is Leo Reardon, past commander of the DAV Chapter 79.

Veterans Housing Ceremony Nov. 10

NeighborWorks Southern Mass. will hold a ribbon cutting ceremony Nov. 10 to unveil its latest Quincy development project: 12 new apartments that will be made available to local veterans and their families.

The ceremony will be held Tuesday, Nov. 10 at 178 E. Howard St. in Quincy Point. The "Home Sweet Home for Veterans" event will begin at 10:45 a.m. with tours of the new veterans' apartments, followed by the ribbon-cutting ceremony at 11 a.m. The event will conclude with a luncheon at the Inn at Bay Pointe.

"We're thrilled to be able to mark Veterans Day and celebrate our 'Home Sweet Home for Veterans' campaign with the completion of these homes," said NeighborWorks Southern Mass. Executive Director Robert Corley. "This project will help fill the great need for safe, affordable homes for our local veterans."

NeighborWorks Southern Mass.'s work on veterans housing issues dates back to 1996, when the organization developed an eight-unit home for veterans in Quincy called the Sheila McIntyre House.

Since 2012, the agency has built or renovated four homes on the South Shore for veterans' and their families. The East Howard St. project marks its largest project developed specifically for veterans.

DOVE
Domestic Violence Ended

LOVE SHOULDN'T HURT!

Supporting a Friend or Family Member

Are you concerned about a family member or friend that is in an unsafe relationship? Here are some helpful things to say and do:

"I'm here for you."
Let the person know that you are there for them no matter their choices, leaving an abusive situation can be very dangerous.

"How can I help?"
What we think might be the most helpful thing may not be what the person needs; it is best to ask and offer information and options first.

"Would you like the number to a counselor or domestic violence organization?"
Offer supportive services.

"Would you like to stay with me for a few days?
Offer a safe place for this person to stay.

"I'm really worried for you."
It can be important to express to those that we care about how high risk their situation may be.

"This isn't your fault, you don't deserve this, and you are not alone."
While these statements may seem obvious to an outsider, they can be so meaningful to someone that has been degraded & isolated.

It can be frustrating and scary to support someone who stays or goes back to an abusive relationship. Abusers often try to isolate their partners from family and friends in order to have more control over them. Staying connected to this person despite not understanding their choices could save their life. Leaving an abusive relationship is one of the most dangerous times for a survivor. Never push a friend or family member to leave.

Myths and Facts about Dating Violence

If a person is really being abused, it is easy just to leave.

MYTH: There are many very complicated reasons why it's difficult for a person to leave an abusive partner. One very common reason is fear; women who leave their abusers are at a 75% greater chance of being killed by the abuser than those who stay.

DOVE is committed to partnering with diverse communities, families and individuals impacted by domestic violence.
We promote hope, healing, safety, and social change by providing a broad range of preventive and responsive services.

Haynes Retiring As United First Parish Visitor Director

By SCOTT JACKSON

Gary Haynes is retiring after 10 years of service with the United First Parish Church's History and Visitor Program, including the last four years as the director of the program.

The Rev. Rebecca Froom, the church's pastor, announced Haynes' retirement Oct. 30 during the annual wreath-laying ceremony in honor of President John Adams. Speakers at the ceremony reflected on John and Abigail Adams' legacy of supporting education, and Froom said Haynes has embodied that legacy in his role with the church, crediting him with reaching out to schools, including Quincy Public Schools and the Woodward School.

"That legacy of education is embodied today where we have students gathered here, people of all ages. It's embodied throughout the year from April to November, through having a historic visitors program," Froom said.

"Gary Haynes is the director of our program and each year thousands of people come from around the country and around the world – classes of students, groups of veterans, groups of teachers, people of all kinds come to this place where history is at your fingertips, where you can touch the tomb of someone who was once just kid in school in this town and grew up to be president.

"Education is all around us and the person who attends to this educational program with diligence is Gary Haynes… Thank you for your service, for everything you have done for our program and really for our city."

Haynes has served as director of the visitors program since 2012 and was a docent tour guide for six years prior. In honor of his service, Haynes was presented with a framed photograph of the church taken this past winter by Quincy Sun Publisher Robert Bosworth.

"Wherever your journeys take you," Froom said, "this way you will always remember the New England winter."

GARY HAYNES, director of the United First Parish Church History and Visitors Program, is retiring after 10 years with the church program. As a memento of his dedicated service to the church and community, a framed print of United First Parish Church taken during the historic winter of 2015 was presented at the conclusion of the John Adams presidential wreath-laying ceremony last Friday. From left: David Bousquin, Office and Property Manager; Kirt Switzer, Chair of Historic Preservation and Capital Projects Committee; Rev. Rebecca Froom, Minister; Gary Haynes; and three members of the congregation who are also tour guides with the History and Visitors Program: Bill Westland, Jill Goddard and Lynne Rose.

Shea Retiring As City Clerk; Succeeding Gillis As Commissioner of resignation to fellow commissioners Francis O'Brien and Peter Collins. A former city clerk, Gillis has served as a county commissioner since 1993. His term expires Jan. 1, 2017.

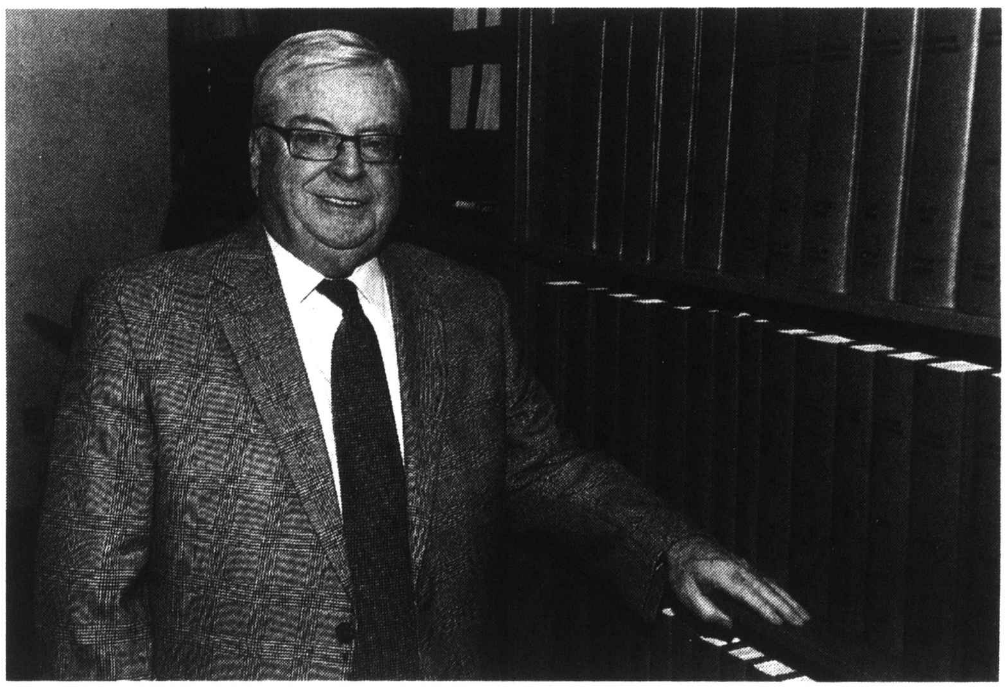
Shea has succeeded Gillis before in government. He replaced the long-time clerk in 1992 after Gillis retired to run for Norfolk County commissioner. Gillis was elected to a seat in November that year and has been re-elected five times, the last win in 2012.

Gillis tapped Shea as the city's assistant city clerk in 1991 replacing the affable Thomas Burke who retired after serving under Gillis for more than 20 years. Shea served as an assistant for 19 months until Gillis stepped down.

"I succeeded two legends – Tommy Burke and John Gillis," said the 70-year-old Shea.

Quincy's 12th city clerk has informed City Council President Joseph Finn that he intends to retire as city clerk in the first quarter of 2016 after several projects that he is involved in are completed. Among them: the rededication of the refurbished James R. McIntyre Government Center (Old City Hall) likely next month; the complete recodification of all city ordinances that is currently ongoing; and the purchase and implementation of new voting machines.



JOSEPH SHEA, who has served as city clerk for nearly 25 years, will be retiring sometime during the first quarter of next year. Shea will also fill the unexpired term of Norfolk County Commissioner John Gillis - Shea's predecessor as city clerk. Gillis, who is 90, is resigning as county commissioner effective Nov. 10. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth

Shea's decision to retire as clerk will cap a City Hall career that dates back to the early 1970s and will conclude nearly 25 years of dedicated service as Quincy's city clerk. Before becoming an assistant city clerk, he served as executive secretary for former Mayor Walter Hannon from 1972 to 1976.

Shea's departure as city clerk next year means the City Council will appoint a successor. Shea said he intends to officially notify the City Council of his retirement plans at a meeting this month.

The city clerk's job carries a three-year term after appointment from the city council. Besides serving as the council's clerk, the city clerk is the keeper of all city records and vital statistics, oversees city elections and voter registration as chairman of the Board of Registrars and also is a member of the Quincy License Board and acts as the city's shellfish warden. Shea is currently the chairman of the License Board.

"It's time," Shea told the Sun in announcing his plans to retire as clerk. "I get up and come to work every day at 7:30, quarter of eight and I've gotten into a groove over the last 25 years. I have mixed emotions about leaving. But (being a commissioner) allows me to stay in government and to do some other (volunteer) pursuits."

Shea said he will use earned personal/vacation time as city clerk – one day a week – to fulfill his new duties as county commissioner until he retires from his clerk's position.

My son is moving to NYC and renting a loft. The kitchen and bath are well defined but everything else is wide open with a few columns here and there. How can he define separate spaces when he is not allowed to make any structural changes to the space?

Great question! My answer will also be applicable to great rooms in your own home or basement rec rooms, too.

The easiest way to define spaces is with furniture placement and area rugs. If painting is permitted, different wall colors can help disconnect the rooms from one another, too.

If he is looking for something more delineated, there are several ways to put up temporary "walls" in a loft space. The first way is with furniture. Tall bookcases, armoires, high-end cabinet-style closets, even an extra-large headboard can help define one room from another. You can also separate spaces with curtains or a double-sided quilt or tapestry hanging from the ceiling or try a series of live or silk tall trees. And a double-sided electric fireplace could be enjoyed from both a dining room and living and still act like a partition between the two.

With a larger budget and help of a contractor, your son could erect a platform to define the main living space (or any designated room, really, but I suggest it be the one occupying the middle of the loft). With two or three steps up to the floor of that separated room, the space under the platform could serve as a storage room – albeit a very short one, but often an unlikely commodity in NYC apartments – for boxes of out-of-season clothes, sports equipment, holiday decorations, etc. A carpenter could also build a temporary extra-large room divider (maybe even on wheels) or half- or three-quarter, free-standing, footed walls that can easily be removed as they do not require any nails to install to the existing structure of the loft. These dividing walls can be painted, paneled, galvanized... the sky's the limit. (These walls also give you places to hang art work.)

Renovated Soccer Fields Open At Therrien Field

Mayor Thomas Koch, the City of Quincy Park Department and Quincy Youth Soccer held a ceremony recently to commemorate the opening of the newly renovated soccer fields at Therrien Field.

The Community Preservation Committee awarded $75,000 to the Park Department to perform the renovation. An irrigation system was added below the playing surface of the field, which was then sodded. The work was managed and performed by members of the Park Department.

The fields serve the older members of Quincy Youth Soccer as well as the Quincy High School Soccer teams. The fields have also been used for recreational use by Quincy adults as they continue playing the game of soccer.

The bottom field which is a full size soccer field was re-dedicated in remembrance of Michael Therrien. Michael Therrien was a staple in the youth soccer community in Quincy for most of his life. As a coach in the organization, Michael brought his passion for soccer to every practice and game. His four children, Breanne, Megan, Kevin, and Brendan were all members of Quincy Youth Soccer. Michael's wife, Marie, was also greatly involved with Quincy Youth Soccer.

CITY OFFICIALS, friends of Quincy Youth Soccer and family members of Michael Therrien and Sgt. Robert Curry take part in a recent ribbon cutting ceremony marking the opening of newly renovated soccer fields at Therrien Field.

The top field, previously known as Upper Therrien, has been re-dedicated as Sergeant Robert Curry Field in remembrance of Sergeant Robert Curry, a Quincy resident who lost his life during World War II. Robert Curry was a recipient of the Air Medal and Purple Heart. Sean Curry spoke to the crowd and expressed how honored Robert's family would be to have him remembered over seventy years later in his Quincy community.

Kevin Esdale, President of Quincy Youth Soccer, announced that QYS will collect food during their soccer jamboree Sunday, Nov. 8. All food will be donated to the Veteran's Food Pantry in Sergeant Robert Curry's name.

New Sterling Cost $49.7 Million

pursue a new school.

"We're fully anticipating that the Mass. School Building Authority is going to concur with our recommendation for this new school," Kerwin said.

The new school would cost upwards of $49.67 million, which also includes the demolition of the existing building and site landscaping. A minor renovation and addition to the current building would cost up to $53.32 million and a major renovation and addition up to $55.78 million.

"A new building on the existing Sterling site, regardless of how that building is designed, would be significantly less expensive than any kind of renovation/addition option," Dunlap said, adding the MSBA's facilities subcommittee agreed with that conclusion.

The cost estimates, he later clarified, are based on a worst-case scenario and are used to help the MSBA determine whether a new school should be built or the extant one renovated. More detailed cost estimates, and a breakdown of projected costs, won't come for another four to six months as the building's design advances from the conceptual stage.

"At this early stage, we don't even have a building to place costs on. What [the MSBA] suggests we do is give them an absolute worst-case scenario, what's the highest cost this kind of project might be," Dunlap explained. "We haven't even begun to do detailed cost estimates."

The city will receive a reimbursement of up to 75 percent of eligible costs for the project from the state.

The conceptual plan for the school presented to the School Committee Oct. 28 was largely similar to the one shown to the City Council on Oct. 19.

Under both conceptual plans, the school would have two entrances off Granite Street – one for students in grades 6-8 and the second for fifth graders – and a staff entrance on the Roberts Street side. Fifth and sixth grade academic neighborhoods would be located on the building's first floor along with administrative space and the school's cafeteria, which would also be used as a common area throughout the day. The seventh and eighth grade academic neighborhoods would be located on the second floor; the school's library and art room would be placed on that floor as well. The lower level would house the school's auditorium, gymnasium, band room and custodial space.

The two plans did have one major difference. At the Oct. 19 presentation, the new school's footprint overlapped the existing building's footprint. The plan shown Oct. 28 had the new school located further back off Granite Street and behind the current building with no overlap.

Two parking lots would be located on site, according to the plan presented to the School Committee. A visitors' lot off Granite Street would have room for about a dozen cars while the school's staff would park on the Roberts Street side. A cutout on Granite Street would serve as a dedicated drop-off/pick-up lane, enabling cars and buses to pull off the road.

School Committee member Anne Mahoney said having the drop-off/pick-up lane on Granite Street could be problematic because of the nature of the road.

"Granite Street is kind of a narrower street and it does back up and it's multi-family homes that are on that street, so a lot of times you have cars that are parked on that street," Mahoney said. "I do understand that in the city of Quincy we tend to pretend cars do not park on streets, or they're not supposed to park on streets, but they really do park on streets and that can be potentially a problem."

Mahoney also said the project team should consider where visitors going to afterschool events, like community meetings or school concerts, would park as the building's design advances, citing critiques she's heard regarding the new Quincy High School and Central Middle School.

"These are some of the things that once we build a building we think about after," Mahoney said. "These are the questions that have to be asked upfront now while we're here because once you build it, it's done."

The Sterling building committee has considered those issues, Dunlap replied, and will explore adding additional visitor parking on the Granite Street side, whether that is the appropriate side for visitor parking, and if the drop-off/pick-up lane should be moved as the design process continues.

"All those things are the kind of things we will explore as we take a detailed look at the site plan, all of which are, just as you suggest, very important to consider during the planning process," Dunlap said.

School Committee member David McCarthy, who is also on the Sterling building committee, recommended his colleagues forward questions or concerns they have or hear from residents to the project team. Overall, he said, the planning process has gone well.

"For many years it was moving slowly and now all of a sudden we're in the building schools business here and it seems to be moving quickly," McCarthy said. "That's a good thing."

Mayor Thomas Koch suggested the project team reach out to the Park Department regarding possible impacts to nearby Kincaide Park as well as the Department of Public Works to see if utility lines to the site are sufficient. A number of public meetings will be held on the proposal as the project advances, the mayor added.

Food Drive At Registry Of Deeds

The Norfolk County Register of Deeds Annual Food Drive will be held Monday, Nov. 23 through Thursday, Dec. 31.

"Here in Norfolk County some of our less fortunate neighbors continue to face economic hardship," said Norfolk County Register of Deeds William O'Donnell. "We know this because we see each month the Notice to Foreclose Mortgage recordings that take place. Furthermore, at a statewide level, Project Bread noted that 1 out of every 10 households in Massachusetts is food insecure."

Local pantry officials say food donations, especially as we head into the winter and holiday months, are critical to their operations.

Non-perishable food items can be brought directly to the Registry of Deeds, 649 High St., Dedham from Monday, Nov. 23 through Thursday, Dec. 31.

A donation bin will be set up in the Registry building lobby which is open to the public Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Suggested donations include canned goods, breakfast cereals, pasta, sauces, toiletries and paper products.

Those who wish to donate but are unable to travel to the Registry can do so by donating food supplies at their local pantries across Norfolk County.

For a list of local food pantries, please visit the Registry of Deeds website at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

Police Looking To Determine Gravestone's Origin

By SCOTT JACKSON

CARLTON

Quincy police are looking to determine where a mysterious gravestone found Monday evening in Quincy Point came from.

The gravestone was found around 5 p.m. Monday on top of mulch outside of Quincy Towers, a high-rise apartment building at 500 Washington St., according to Capt. John Dougan, with some leaves and dirt stuck to it.

The gravestone is inscribed with the name "Carlton Knight Jr." and the years "1917-1996." Using microfilm records, Dougan said detectives were able to identify someone with that name buried in a Marblehead cemetery but police in that town reported the stone on that grave was still present.

Anyone with information on the gravestone is asked to contact Quincy police at 617-479-1212.

Weymouth Woman Charged With Totaling Detective's Car

By SCOTT JACKSON

A 34-year-old Weymouth woman is due back in court Dec. 1 on charges of operating under the influence and drug possession after allegedly crashing into a Quincy detective's unmarked car Saturday morning, totaling his vehicle. The detective is expected to be OK, according to police, after being treated and released from a local hospital.

Maria Roldan pleaded not guilty Monday in Quincy District Court to charges of operating under the influence of drugs, possession of a class B substance (Suboxone); a class C substance (Klonopin); a class E substance (Seroquel); negligent operation of a motor vehicle; operating with a suspended license; and failure to stop at a red light. She was held on $1,000 cash bail.

The crash happened around 7:30 a.m. Saturday. The detective, who was driving a Ford Fusion, was stopped for a red light at the intersection of Quincy Shore Drive and Squanto Road when he was struck from behind by a 1999 Ford Explorer, according to Quincy Police Capt. John Dougan.

The Fusion was pushed into the intersection with its rear end badly damaged; Dougan said the vehicle is likely a total loss.

Roldan told officers on the scene she had been using her cellphone and did not see the Fusion, Dougan said.

The detective was taken to South Shore Hospital in Weymouth, where he was treated and released, Dougan said; the detective is expected to be OK.

now the John Quincy Adams Birthplace.

"He took enormous pride in his library and his books served as essential tools in his varied roles as student, lawyer, revolutionary, diplomat, president and grandfather. Such books laid the foundation for his understanding and ability when he drafted our state model for our national constitution, putting forth the idea that education be made available to all people despite their role in life," Cobble said.

"The Constitution was just one of the many birthday gifts that John gave us. So thank you, John, for fighting for our independence with your knowledge and your pen and for drafting a constitution calling for individual freedoms and education for all."

Cobble also said the students in attendance should take hold of their education, reflecting on a quote found in a May 1780 letter from Abigail to her son, who was with his father in Europe at the time, which said "learning is not attained by chance, it must be sought with ardor and attended to with diligence."

"John Adams was born in a time when the average household was lucky to have a Bible," Cobble reminded those in attendance. "So now is the time for all of you to take hold of your education. As Abigail would remind us in our quote for the day, don't take it for granted. You are entitled to a free education. You have great teachers and unlimited resources, so use them wisely."

Cobble reflected on another quote to John Quincy Adams, this time from his father.

PRESIDENTIAL WREATH from President Barack Obama is carried into United First Parish Church by members of the Navy Operational Support Center Quincy. The wreath, commemorating the 280th birthday of President John Adams, was later placed on the Founding Father's tomb in the crypt of the church.

"'You will never be alone with a poet in your pocket. You will never have an idle hour,'" Cobble said, quoting John Adams. "I know that many of you may not have a leather book in your pocket, but a smartphone. So use it deliberately and use it wisely."

Speakers from the city's two public high schools and the Woodward School were invited to speak at the ceremony, as they have in recent years.

Teresa McMillen, a junior at North Quincy High, called the lengthy correspondence between John and Abigail Adams a timeless gift, as is the couple's strong belief in education for everyone.

"That John and Abigail Adams wrote so often and at such lengths to each other is the timeless gift to us all. That they personally strove to educate themselves, their children, the nation and eventually women is our gift," McMillen said. "As the end of my high school education grows near, I am grateful for the opportunity not only to have studied science, math, English and history, but also to have the added joy learning the arts,

'THANK YOU, John (Adams), for fighting for our independence with your knowledge and your pen and for drafting a Constitution calling for individual freedoms and education for all," said keynote speaker Kelly Cobble, curator at the Adams National Historical Park.

AMONG THE OTHER speakers at the Presidential wreath-laying ceremony commemorating the 280th birthday anniversary of U.S. President John Adams was Douglas Adams (above), a descendant of John and Abigail Adams.

QUINCY CHORAL SOCIETY sang three songs at the John Adams 280th Birthday Anniversary celebration last Friday: "Cobham" written by William Bennings, "How Can I Keep From Singing?" written by the Rev. Joseph Lowery and a medley of "Liberty Song" and "America the Beautiful."

in both broadcasting and drama.

"I am grateful for the Adams family's sacrifices and their value of education. That we can live and learn in a country with security and liberties is not to be taken for granted."

Quincy High senior Stephen Condon said technology has made information available at students' fingertips, but the values stressed by Abigail Adams remain important.

"We live in a technological age when anything we want to know is readily available. In just a few clicks, we can know about ancient Rome or photosynthesis or how to solve a complex fraction," Condon said. "Despite the ease with which we can access education, the values and philosophy Abigail wanted are still the most crucial components with regard to education and progress.

"The skills we learn in school – how to think critically, how to work together to solve problems, how to communicate effectively, how to embrace responsibility and demonstrate respect – are what will help us solve problems of the 21st century."

Abby Rose Plourde, a senior at the Woodward School, referenced a quote from John to John Quincy that said education is required for one to be a good and useful citizen.

"I believe I represent a generation of students who are responding to this call to be good and useful citizens. I believe we want to advance our world and we can because of the great education we are all offered," Plourde said. "Woodward Schools' Latin motto is discimus ut ducamus –we learn so that we may lead – I believe that President Adams would agree."

Mayor Thomas Koch highlighted the ongoing construction work that will result in the creation of new park between City Hall and the church, which will be known as the Adams Hancock Green.

"Over decades, the church has become a bit of a rotary for traffic. What we will be doing with the park setting will be giving this place the dignity it deserves. It will create a park that is going to be second to none in the region that will help us to protect and enhance our historic legacy really started by John Adams," Koch said.

"These improvements are much long overdue. We are a very fortunate nation to have the gift of one of greatest minds we've ever seen in John Adams. That legacy of giving back to our nation continued for generation after generation after generation in the Adams family."

The Rev. Rebecca Froom, the church's pastor, delivered an invocation and benediction at the ceremony. She said the words said at the ceremony should inspire those in attendance to be a blessing to the world, like Adams was. Other speakers at the event included Douglas Adams, who is a descendent of John and Abigail; H. Kirtland Switzer, chairman of historic preservation for the church; Jim Cooke, a John Quincy Adams reenactor who read a sonnet the sixth president in honor of his father.

The Quincy Choral Society sang three songs: "Cobham" written by William Billings, "How Can I Keep From Singing?" written by the Rev. Robert Lowery and a medley of "Liberty Song" and "America the Beautiful." John Dickinson, a Founding Father of the United States, wrote "Liberty Song" in 1768.

The Navy Band Northeast, based out of Newport, R.I., performed the musical prelude.

Wreath-laying ceremonies have been held at the United First Parish Church each year on the anniversary of John and John Quincy Adams' births; a tradition started by then-President Lyndon Baines Johnson for all late American presidents. Commander Eric Vandiver of the Naval Operational Support Center Quincy represented President Barack Obama at this year's ceremony.

The wreath was provided by Clifford's Flowers of Quincy. The company has provided the wreath for the annual ceremonies since the 1970s.

4 High School Teams Qualify For State Tournament

By BILL GRIFFIN

Four teams from the city's two high schools qualified for the post-season tournament and each has interesting story to tell.

For Quincy's volleyball team, it has been a season of dreams. The Presidents, led by 12 seniors who have been playing volleyball together since middle school, rolled to a 20-1 record, clinched a share of the Patriot League Keenan Division crown, and won 18 of their matches in straight sets while compiling an impressive 61-6 (46-4 in the league) edge in games over 21 matches.

North Quincy's girls soccer team is another story of seniors. The Red Raiders boast 11 seniors, 10 of whom have been playing together since shortly after they could walk. They constructed a stonewall defense which posted 14 shutouts and allowed just six goals in 19 games while posting a 12-4-4 record. North has qualified for the tourney 16 times in the last 21 years.

North will travel to meet No. 7 seed Newton South (13-4-1) Thursday at 6 p.m. in the first round of the Division 1 South Sectionals. North is seeded No. 10 in the sectionals.

Quincy's boys' soccer team was an interesting tale of resilience. The Presidents played their best soccer against the top teams in the Patriot League, which means the top teams in the state, but were inconsistent in games they were favored to win.

It was a sign of their youth, but Quincy gained experience and showed toughness under pressure, winning two of its last three to qualify for the Division 1 South playoffs and will travel to meet No. 3 seed Braintree (14-2-4) Thursday night at 7 p.m. in the first round of the Division 1 South Sectionals. Quincy is seeded No. 14 in the sectionals

In any other year, North Quincy would have been the big volleyball story in the city. The Red Raiders went 16-6, finished third in the Patriot League with a 13-3 mark behind Quincy and Duxbury, and developed their young talent well as the season developed. Junior Izzy Flaherty, one of the best players in the league, was the key, but she had plenty of help from a platoon of juniors and sophomores who offer a bright future for North. The Red Raiders only have four seniors on the roster.

How good has the volleyball been in Quincy this fall? North and Quincy combined for a 36-7 record.

Quincy's volleyball team played out a fitting final chapter to its remarkable regular season Monday night. The Presidents staged a gallant rally from down two games and posted an unforgettable 18-25, 10-25, 25-20, 25-21, 16-14 triumph over Canton in a match whose quality of play was worthy of a sectional final and whose drama made it a privilege to watch.

This was against a quality opponent, a perennial tournament powerhouse. Coach Jacqui Niosi always schedules Canton in the season finale to give her team a good look at tournament talent and intensity. This year, Quincy not only defeated Canton (15-4), the Presidents won a match they will always remember. If this doesn't give a team a boost going into the tourney, nothing will.

"I think the turnaround came because we started believing in ourselves, we started believing we could match their intensity. We trusted each other, we talked more on the court, the bench was loud and great with its support, and we played with confidence," said Niosi. The 20-1 record is the best Quin-

Rams Oust Presidents From Playoffs

Quincy Hosts Natick Friday Night At 7 P.M.

By BILL GRIFFIN

Marshfield is a powerful football team. The Rams are defending State Division 2 champs, they are undefeated, and they are the top seed in this year's playoffs.

The message for Quincy from many last week before the Presidents faced Marshfield was simple: Don't bother to get on the bus. Well, the Presidents not only got on the bus, they gave a good account themselves in the early going before quarterback Jack Masterson took control of the game and led Marshfield to a 40-0 win over No. 8 seeded Quincy in the opening round of the Division 2 South Sectionals at Marshfield Friday night.

"They are very good. They have good players and they use them well," said Quincy coach Bill Reardon. "I was impressed with Plymouth North this year as well, but Marshfield is one of the best teams we've seen over the last few years."

Quincy played well early. Twice, the Presidents drove deep into Marshfield territory behind the running of senior tailback Jahvae Handsom-Fields. One march was stopped inches shy of the goal line. Marshfield halted the second at the Rams' 20.

Defensively, the Presidents played well early in the game. Twice, Quincy forced Masterson and Marshfield into fourth-down situations, but the Rams had the weapons to convert and build a first-period lead.

"I feel badly for the kids because they played hard. The effort was there, but we just couldn't make the big play when we needed to, especially in the first quarter," said Reardon.

Marshfield marched 66 yards for its first touchdown. Masterson converted one fourth-down situation on a quarterback sneak. Later, Quincy's defense stiffened and forced a fourth-and-goal from the 15, but Masterson connected on a scoring strike for an early 6-0 lead.

"We played good defense, but we couldn't get off the field on those two fourth-down plays," said Reardon.

SENIOR TAILBACK Jahvae Handsom-Fields rushes for some of his 117 yards on the ground for the Quincy Presidents against Marshfield last Friday night.

The Presidents answered with a 78-yard, 11-play drive mainly behind the running of Handsom-Fields. Garrett Cronin chipped in with a key run, and the Presidents drove it to the Marshfield three. On fourth down, Handsom-Fields found a hole, but was ruled down inches before the goal line.

"I honestly thought Jahvae got in, but the referee saw it differently. It was frustrating," said Reardon.

Quincy mounted another drive with Handsom-Fields leading the way again. He ripped off gains of 16 and 34 yards, and Quincy marched deep into Marshfield territory. However, an interception at the Rams' 20 stopped the drive.

"We had what we felt was a good one-on-one matchup on the outside," said Reardon. "Cody (Desmond) put the ball up high, but their kid won the battle. Give him credit. He made the play when Marshfield needed it. If there was a turning point in the game, it was the interception."

Isaiah Uzamere and Jhonta Sousa did an excellent job blocking up front to give Handsom-Fields and Cronin room to run in the early going.

"Isaiah was just tremendous and Jhonta had a great night blocking as well," said Reardon.

Sophomore defensive back Shorn Hawthorne continued his fine play, picking off an interception at his own five to stop a Marshfield threat seconds before halftime.

"He's come a long way. He's improved quickly. He's a good athlete, and he has the potential to be an excellent player," said Reardon.

Masterson (16-21, 204 yards, three touchdowns) and Marshfield established command after the interception at their 20. Marshfield built a 22-0 halftime lead and controlled the second half to put away the victory.

Handsom-Fields had 117 yards on 22 carries. A week ago against Duxbury, he ran for 205 yards and a touchdown. That's 322 yards on successive weeks against two teams who have a legitimate shot at a state championship. The best backs do run their best against the best teams.

Handsom-Fields has 1,089 yards rushing eight games. He has over 3,000 yards in his career at Quincy.

It has been a season of adjustment for the talented back. As a sophomore and junior, he ran behind one of the best lines on the South Shore. The only returning starter this year was Mike Munroe. This year's offensive line has played excellent football, especially in recent weeks. Still, it has been a different challenge for Handsom-Fields.

"I like this offensive line. They're coming together and playing good football, but that line we had for Jahvae's first two years was a great line," said Reardon. "Jahvae has been great. He is grateful for the carries, and he has that inner desire to run that all good backs have. He's been a joy to coach."

Quincy deserved a playoff shot. The Presidents have played better than their record. The losses to Milton, Whitman-Hanson and Silver Lake weren't decided until the final play of the game. Marshfield has beaten a lot of good teams over the past two years. The Rams' win over Quincy was not the only convincing margin of the first round. Scores like 50-0, 34-12, 35-14, 28-0, 35-7, and 38-17 showed up in the opening round of the south sectionals.

"Our goal at the beginning of the year was to make the playoffs," said Reardon. "Did we want to be in the playoffs with one win? No, we didn't. But we've played good games against quality teams, teams that are seeded high in the tourney. We deserved to be here.

Quincy (1-7) hosts Natick Friday night at 7 p.m. at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

Emily Bryson Wins Cross-County Championship

Freshman Is Judges' First Title Holder Since '02

Brandeis University rookie Emily Bryson of Quincy, a 2015 graduate of North Quincy High School, earned the 2015 University Athletic Association (UAA) championship Saturday on her home course at Franklin Park in Boston. She helped the Judges to a fourth-place finish at the race, while the Brandeis men took seventh overall.

Bryson won the 6-kilometer race with a time of 22:03.12, edging Chicago rookie Khia Kurtenbach (22:03.44) down the stretch by 32-hundredths of a second. The race's third finisher was also a freshman, Ellie Degen of Washington University (22:07.76).

"I've raced here before, and I saw [her] in front of me, so I knew I had a shot," Bryson said after the race. "I thought maybe she was out of gas, so I gave it everything I had, and it was enough. I'm really happy, but I'm still processing. I really didn't expect it. I'm just glad the team did well."

EMILY BRYSON

Bryson is the Judges' first UAA Women's Cross Country champion since 2002, when Mariko Tansey Holbrook '03 claimed the title. She is the fifth individual to take the title and the seventh crown for the Judges – Jean Olds Cann '92 and Theresa Patten '94 each won back-to-back titles. Bryson also took home UAA Rookie of the Year honors, making her the first person to win that award formally presented since 2000 – and the UAA Championship in the same year.

Brandeis had one other All-UAA performance, as junior Maddie Dolins (Highland Park, Ill./Highland Park) was 12th overall with a time of 22:28.82. It was Dolins' second All-Association cross country honor.

As a team, the Judges, ranked 21st in Division III, finished in fourth place, up from eighth a year ago. It marked just the second time since 2010 they finished in the top half of the conference, to go with a third-place finish in 2013.

The team champion was Washington University, ranked fifth in Division III. The Bears claimed their second-straight UAA crown with 35 points, placing five runners in the top 14. No. 25 Rochester was a surprise second-place finisher with 83 points. No. 10 Chicago was third with 91, followed by No. 21 Brandeis. No. 14 Emory was the fifth-place finished with 107, followed by Case Western Reserve (136), No. 35 Carnegie Mellon (144) and NYU (229).

Amy Cronin Runs NYC Marathon For Martin Richard Foundation

Amy Cronin of Quincy was among 22 runners representing the Martin Richard Foundation who ran in Sunday's TCS New York City Marathon as members of Team MR8.

To date, Team MR8 has raised above $60,000 while training for the 2015 NYC Marathon, over $10,000 more than the original goal.

The runners ran the marathon in honor of eight-year-old Martin Richard, the youngest victim of the 2013 Boston Marathon bombings.

Named for Martin's initials and his sports number, Team MR8 was formed immediately after the announcement of the Martin Richard Foundation in January 2014 as a means for marathon runners to raise needed funds to advance the charity's mission to honor Martin's message "No more hurting people, peace" by investing in education, athletics and community. The response was overwhelming and the inaugural Team MR8 was 102 runners strong and raised more than $1.25 million for the Foundation. Since then, Team MR8 has run in Chicago and New York 2014 and Boston 2015 along with countless half marathons, road races and even triathlons.

45th Quincy Tennis Tournament Champions Crowned

The 45th Annual Quincy Tennis Championship crowned the best resident players champions in a highly competive 15 days of tennis. The unique event is conducted each fall by the Quincy Recreation Department and is sponsored by the Quincy Credit Union.

This year's event saw a mix of familiar names in the Quincy tennis community and some tournament newcomers bring home the hardware on the municipal courts located at Quincy High School. The tournament has events for both men and women, and boys and girls and is believed to be the longest running municipal tournament in New England. It has been recognized by the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

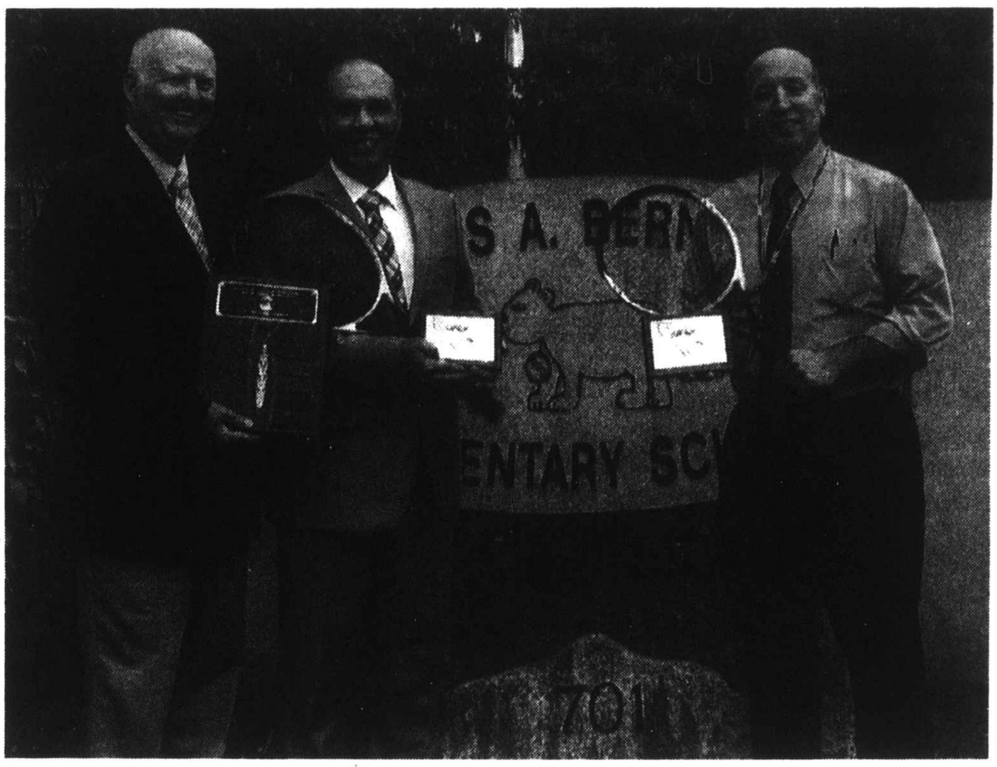
Lydia Chan, a 14 year old eighth grade student at Central Middle School, proved that youth would be served as the rising young tennis star won three championships. She won the Women's Singles, teamed with Lilianna Leung, to win the Women's Doubles and she then won her third straight Girls 16 and Under championship.

While Lydia is the face of the new generation of Quincy tennis, Aileen Eleey is the representative of the tournament veterans. Eleey returned to tournament play to recapture her championship in the Mixed Doubles that she has now won nine times starting in 1995. While the name Peter Eleey, Aileen's husband, is on the "McAuliffe Bowl" five times this year's Peter Eleey will be her son who joined her in defeating two time defending champion Robert Yee and his sister Julia Yee, 6-2,3-6, 7-5 in what may have been the event's best match. Aileen had joined with Ron Abell to win three times, the last in 2012.

Robert Yee was not denied his share of championships as he recaptured the "Shine Buckley Bowl" in Men's Singles for the third time after a one year absence. He also teamed with partner Paul Fortey to win the Men's Doubles. In his first two wins he had teamed with his dad also named Robert.

It was the battle of the Bernazzani Elementary School that decided the City Employee event. Principal Peter Dionne defeated Assistant Principal Philip Dana in a three set match. This was Dionne fourth time as the winner of this division.

Recreation Director Barry Welch joined the Park and Recreation Board in thanking the Quincy Credit Union for their sponsorship of the event. "This is the 20th year of continuous sponsorship and the generosity of the Quincy Credit Union has allowed thousands of Quincy families to participate in this great tradition of finding out annually the best tennis players among our residents. As we see from these years' winners this is an event for all ages and unites families and promotes healthy life styles. We are a better community because of their continued support."



BERNAZZANI SCHOOL Principal Peter Dionne, middle, defeated Assistant Principal Philip Diana, right, in the championship of the City Employees Division. Recreation Director Barry Welch presented the awards in front of the elementary school.

Welch also thanked tournament directors John Franceschini and Michelle Hanly who both have over 30 years of involvement in running the event. John a past champion does a great job with the seeding necessary to have such a great tournament year after year. Michelle was assisted by recreation staff members Ed Grennon and Sean Lerkvikarn in overseeing the 117 matches at the Russell Park tennis courts.

The Henry "The Master" McAuliffe Bowl is presented to the champions in the Men's Double division. The team of Robert Yee and Paul Fortey defeated Jin Zeng and Jirwat Anektanasap in a tightly contested three set match, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4. Yee and Fortey advanced to the finals over Suresh Valivarthi and Vishal Trivedi, 6-3, 6-1. Zeng and Anektanasap, who were semifinalists last year, advanced to the finals with a victory over the brother-brother duo of Justin and Peyton McGaffigan, 6-0, 6-2.

The premier event and largest draw in the tournament saw Robert Yee claim the Lionel "Shine" Buckley Bowl as champion of the Men's Singles division. Yee, who also took home the Men's Doubles championship, defeated Kevin Paterno in the final, 6-2, 6-2. Yee advanced to the final with a victory over Patrick Conway, 6-1, 6-1. Paterno advanced to his second consecutive finals appearance in this event by defeating Shane Lerkvikarn, 6-4, 4-6, 6-2.

In the Women's Singles division, Lydia Chan took home the championship with an impressive victory over Kalima Bukenya, 6-0, 6-0. In her semi-final match, Chan defeated Tien Le, 6-1, 6-1. Bukenya, who was a semi-finalist last year, earned her spot in the finals with a victory over Wendy Zhou, 6-0, 6-0.

Shane Lerkvikarn had an impressive victory in the championship of the Boys 16 and Under Singles division. Lerkvikarn, who made his second consecutive finals appearance, was able to take home his first championship with a victory over Peyton McGaffigan, 6-0, 6-1. In the semi-finals McGaffigan defeated Adam Tiacoxolal, 6-1, 6-2, while Lerkvikarn advanced past Tony Duong, 6-0, 6-0.

In the Girls 16 and Under Singles division, Lydia Chan took home her second championship of the tournament with her victory over Megi Maci, 6-2, 6-0. Chan advanced to the finals by defeating Tien Le, 6-1, 6-0. Maci earned her spot in the final with an impressive victory over Whitney Tang, 6-0, 6-0.

In the Mixed Doubles division the championship had the mother-son team of Aileen and Peter Eleey facing off against the brother-sister team of Robert and Julia Yee, to see who would take home the William F. Ryan Bowl. In a tremendous match that went three sets, Aileen and Peter Eleey defeated the defending champions Robert and Julia Yee, 6-2, 3-6, 7-5. Aileen and Peter Eleey advanced to the championship by defeating father-daughter team of Job and Lydia Chan, 6-1, 6-2.

The Women's Doubles champions were the team of Lydia Chan and Lilianna Leung, who defeated Vivian Tran and Tien Le, 6-3, 6-1. Chan and Leung advanced to the championship with a hard fought victory over Michelle Bell and Janet Bargar, 6-3, 6-3. Tran and Le earned their second straight finals appearance with a victory over Kathy McAndrew and Mary Linsky, 6-4, 6-3.

In the Men's 35 and Over Singles, Vishal Trivedi took home the championship with a victory over tournament veteran Job Chan, 6-4, 6-1. Trivedi advanced to the championship after a hard fought victory over Kadirvel Subramanian in the semi-finals, 6-3, 4-6, 6-4. Chan earned his spot in the finals with a victory over Suresh Valivarthi, 6-0, 7-6.

Job Chan defended his Men's 50 and Over title and claim to the Richard Meade Bowl with a victory over Shuwan Xue, 6-4, 7-6(7-3). This was a rematch of last year's championship match, which Chan won in three sets. In the semi-finals Chan defeated Tri Tran, 6-4, 5-7, 6-4, while Xue defeated Sangchai Lerkvikarn, 7-6, 6-4.

In a competitive Men's B Singles division, Suresh Valivarthi emerged from the field to win the championship over Alex Gradovski, 6-4, 6-2. In the semi-finals Valivarthi moved past Elliot Columb, 6-1, 6-0, while Gradovski earned his spot in the final with a 6-2, 6-1 victory over Benjamin Yee.

The City Employees division championship was a matchup between Bernazzani Elementary School faculty, with Principal Peter Dionne facing off against Assistant Principal Philip Diana. Dionne emerged as the champion after an exciting match that went three sets, defeating Diana 6-0, 3-6, 6-1.

Each Champion and Finalist receives a plaque and the name of the Champion is engraved each year on a silver bowl for each event. The bowls with the names of all champions remain on permanent display year round in the main office of the Recreation Department.

ginning of this campaign. We said we're going to talk about records. We're going to answer every question. We're going to talk about everything we've done for parks, for schools, for public safety, for seniors. The people of Quincy responded to that message.

"A number of people have already asked me tonight, what are you going to do over the next four years? Well we're going to do the same thing we've been doing. We're going to tackle our challenges head on and deal with the issues that we face as a community. We're going to keep investing in Quincy, and make this city the best city anywhere in the country."

In the race for three at-large spots on the City Council, incumbent Joseph Finn topped the field with 10,385 votes to win his eighth two-year term. School Committee member Noel DiBona finished second with 9,493 votes, slightly ahead of Liang's total of 9,487. Incumbent Michael McFarland lost his bid for a sixth term after finishing in fourth place with 8,611 votes and School Committee member David McCarthy finished fifth with 7,781. McCarthy will be leaving the committee after finishing his third four-year term.

DiBona, who is midway through his first two-year term on the school board, thanked his supporters and said he would continue to sacrifice his time to improve the city.

"What an experience this has been," DiBona told Quincy Access Television. "I want to thank all the voters in the city of Quincy. Without the voters and the people behind you that believe in you as a person, this is not possible…it's been a big strain on my entire family. I've sacrificed many, many hours for this great city and I will continue to do that."

DiBona will have to vacate his seat on the School Committee and it will be filled by a joint vote of both the council and school board.

Liang could not be reached for comment Tuesday before The Sun went to press.

Newcomer Ian Cain was elected to the open Ward 3 City Council seat, which is being vacated by Kevin Coughlin. Cain defeated Karl Roos 1,968 votes to 1,544.

"It was a lot of work, a lot of money, a lot of time and effort," Cain said on QATV. "I commend every single person who puts themselves out there, because this has been unbelievable experience the past seven months for me personally."

The four incumbent ward councillors facing challengers this year were each re-elected. In Ward 1, Margaret Laforest won a fourth term by defeating John McCone 2,945 to 1,589. Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall won a third term, besting James Connors 2,088 to 783. Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes was elected to a third term over Gina Ostis, 2,327 to 1,157. Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee defeated William Harris 2,243 to 1,535 en route to his sixth term.

Incumbent Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci was unopposed Tuesday and will begin his fourth term on the council in January. Palmucci was the only councillor to face a challenger in the last municipal election two years ago.

Three candidates were on the ballot in the school race. Incumbents Paul Bregoli and Kathryn Hubley finished first and second with 12,364 and 12,250 votes, respectively; each won a second four-year term.

DeAmicis, a freshman at Suffolk University and 2015 Quincy High graduate, was third with 8,341 votes. DeAmicis said he never imagined himself winning a seat on the committee when first decided to run because he was facing two incumbents and longtime educator Frank Santoro, who withdrew from the race in August.

"It's been one amazing experience for me to be on this campaign with all my supporters and volunteers. I never really imagined this was going to happen," DeAmicis told QATV. "This was a learning experience for me."

Emily Lebo, a former member of the committee, had launched a write-in campaign in October; 4,357 write-in votes were cast Tuesday in the school race. Lebo would have been the first successful write-in candidate had she won and could emerge as a contender for the seat DiBona is vacating.

In total, 22,455 of the city's 54,668 went to the polls Tuesday, a turnout of 41 percent.

VOICE FOR HEALTH
by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman

A LONG-STANDING CONCERN

The deleterious effects that prolonged sitting at work can have on health have recently received much attention. Now, new research suggests that prolonged standing at work may pose its own problems. The study involving both men and women found that prolonged standing can cause fatigue, leg cramps, and backache. In the long run, this sort of muscle fatigue can lead to more serious joint problems and back pain. It was also noted that the fatigue produced by prolonged standing at work was not readily perceived by the workers themselves, causing researchers to think that many workers with standing-related fatigue problems will not recognize symptoms until they are well advanced. Regular visits to the chiropractor may help avert serious trouble.

Are you seeking treatment for work related stress and strain? At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, you will only receive the finest quality care through the use of modern chiropractic equipment and technology. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we have a genuine concern for your well-being! Call us at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We offer computerized spinal scans.

P.S. According to the study mentioned above, younger workers (age 18-30) were just as likely to show signs of long-term fatigue as older workers (age 50 and over).

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Tuesday, October 27, 2015, Quincy Police Drug Control Unit Detectives O'Brien, Duran, Powers, Cassidy, Glennon and Keenan were working in plain clothes, operating unmarked non traditional vehicles. At approximately 7:00 p.m., Detective Cassidy observed a vehicle parked on the side of the road in front of a Common Street address. The vehicle was occupied by a male who was talking on his phone. The Detective queried the vehicle which was registered to a female from Braintree. This vehicle had 10 recent queries on the registration from outside Police Departments. (This means that other Officers considered this vehicle's occupants suspicious). After approximately five minutes, the vehicle began to drive away with Detective Cassidy following as he notified the other detectives. The vehicle travelled to the Shea Rink parking lot, then turned around and went back to the same spot on Common Street. The driver shut the vehicles lights off and remained inside the vehicle. Detective Powers drove past the vehicle and observed the driver looking back down Common Street. Within three minutes, a male came out of the apartment building and jumped into the passenger seat. Detective Duran parked his car and approached the suspect vehicle on foot. After about one minute, the passenger got out. The Detectives believed that a drug deal just occurred. Detective Duran rapidly walked toward the vehicle. When the passenger saw the Detective approaching, he quickly jumped back inside the vehicle and shut the door. Detective Duran ran up to the window and identified himself as Police Officer with his badge displayed. The two occupants looked directly at Detective Duran and then drove off at a high rate of speed.Detective Keenan activated his blue lights but the vehicle did not stop. Driving with the headlights off in the dark, the suspect vehicle drove through a red light at Common and Copeland Street at approximately 60 MPH. The vehicle never applied its brakes as it drove through the red light. Officer Dabilis, who was on patrol, observed the suspect vehicle travel through the intersection too, so he put his blue lights and siren on to stop the vehicle. Detective Keenan advised the Officer that the occupants were also wanted by them.

Officer Dabilis was able to get the vehicle to stop on West Street. Detective Keenan approached the driver and Officer Dabilis approached the passenger's side of the vehicle. The driver was removed from the vehicle and placed under arrest for "Operating a motor vehicle to endanger." Officer Dabilis removed the passenger from the vehicle and both occupants were given their Miranda rights and then separated. Detective Powers searched the vehicle and found a plastic corner bag that contained cocaine in the driver's side cup holder. There was also a rolled up dollar bill with the word "cocaine' written on it. The driver told Detectives that he met the passenger on Common Street to purchase a bag of cocaine for $30.00. When asked why he fled in the car, the driver said he panicked upon seeing the Detective. In addition to "Operating a Motor Vehicle to Endanger," the driver, an 18 year old Braintree resident, was charged with "Possession of Class B, Conspiracy to Violate the Controlled Substance Laws, Reckless Operation of a MV, Headlight violation, Red light violation and Speeding." The passenger, an 18 year old Quincy resident, was charged with, "Distribution of Class B and Conspiracy to Violate the Controlled Substance Laws." Nice Work!

BEWARE THE FAKE KIDNAPPERS! Phone scammers continue to scam because it is profitable. The FTC reports that people have been receiving calls from scammers claiming, "I've kidnapped your relative," and then naming a brother, sister, child or parent to lend credibility. "Send ransom money immediately by wire transfer or prepaid card or something bad will happen."

It's a lie! They didn't kidnap anyone, but they hope you'll panic and rush to pay ransom before checking the story. Dozens of people told the FTC they got calls like this and paid anywhere from $100 to $2,000.00 by wire transfer to the kidnappers. To stop you from checking out the story, scammers order you to stay on the phone until the money is sent. There's pressure to pay quickly, and the caller says not to contact anyone. The scammers demand payment by wire transfer or prepaid cards and they do this because it's difficult to trace or recover money sent that way. The FBI calls this scam "virtual kidnapping." Scammers scour the internet and social media sites, grabbing information about where people live, work, or travel, and names of friends and family. They use the details to pick a target and make their calls sound credible. To cut down on the information that scammers can find, consider examining your networking pages and encourage your family to do the same to see if you are giving out personal information. As always, never post your Social Security number or account numbers online, and only share your phone number with your friends and contacts.

If you get a call like this, remember that it's fake, no matter how scary it sounds. Even if it feels real, never wire money or pay by prepaid card to anyone who asks you to. Many times the scammer is in another country. If you are composed, ask some simple questions to challenge whether the scammer really knows your relative, such as, "What is the tattoo on the calf?" If you're worried about the call, get off the phone and get in touch with the relative or friend in question. You can avoid the embarrassment and the loss of money by taking a moment to assess the situation. As always, contact the Police department for help and to let us know so that we can reach out to others. (excerpts from FTC) cy has posted during her 10-year tenure as head coach.

Not only did Quincy trail 2-0 in games, the Presidents were down 14-12 in the final game and faced two match points. They never gave in. Anxhela Hoti blocked a smash for a point. 14-13. Nicole Jorgensen drilled a kill off a Maggie Parker pass. 14-14. Jorgensen set up Sarah Gibbons for a smash. 15-14. Alicia Walker made a perfect feed for her 37th assist of the match and Jorgensen nearly broke the floor with her 18th kill to seal a classic victory.

"We not only played with intensity, we kept our poise against a very good team," said Niosi.

Quincy's main strength was shown well in the comeback. It is balance. It is a team without a weakness, without a soft spot to attack. Gibbons, Hoti (13 kills, four blocks), Parker and Jorgensen all play with touch and power, block well and move as a unit on the front line. Walker and Danielle Parry are accurate and intelligent setters.

Libero Jessie Lei (33 digs) gets to everything. Everything. Tien Le and sophomore Shannon Foley (18 digs and a strong, accurate serve) play terrific defense.

"When we are unselfish, we play great defense. The defense is the key for us," said Niosi.

The win likely clinched the top seed in the Division 1 Central-Southeast sectional. Tourney play will likely begin this weekend.

"The key for us is to carry over the intensity from this match into the tournament," said Niosi.

North Quincy girls soccer --- Junior keeper Shannan Kennedy has been the backbone of North's unyielding defense. She has 28 career shutouts and broke the school record midway through her junior year. She is rock-solid in her fundamentals, she makes all the saves she should make, and is that rare goalie who can steal a tie or a win with an exceptional save.

"Courage. That is the word I'd use to describe her," said coach Paul Bregoli. "She is fearless. She plays the angles, she is excellent on high balls and she reads the play very well."

There is much more than the keeper to a terrific defense. The fullback line of Kerin Coleman, Molly Kate Cannon and Julia O'Donnell has been exceptional. Center halfback Marissa McGue rules the middle of the field and drops back to help the defenders by gaining possession and turning defense into offense.

"This is the best defensive team I've had since 1998," said Bregoli. "Marissa is just unbelievable. She's all over the field. She goes all-out on every play. Her effort is amazing."

There have been signature games. North beat Quincy twice, tied Duxbury and Scituate on the road, and earned a 1-1 tie with defending State Division 2 champ Hingham. The Red Raiders finished second in the Fisher Division behind Scituate.

If there has been a question, it has been the offense. Senior Molly Donahue has had a fine year on the outside wing with seven goals. Hailey Houlihan finished strongly with seven goals in the last 12 matches, including the equalizer against Hingham. McGue had six goals and six assists, including two game-winners against Quincy.

"The big question going into the tournament is can we put the ball in the back of the net. Marissa has some big goals for us and Hailey finished well," said Bregoli. "I'd like to see us get back to our brand of soccer which is possession soccer. That would be a big boost for the offense."

Quincy boys soccer – The Presidents (9-8-1) clinched their ride to the tourney with a 4-0 win over Whitman-Hanson in the final game of the season. Sophomore Kevin O'Shea had a pair of goals while Hashim Hamdi and Enes Ekren scored singletons. Paulo Soares had three assists as Quincy earned its third tourney bid in the last six years.

This is a team no one wants to play in the tourney. They are hot. They have delivered in big matches. They also have played their best soccer against the best teams. The win over W-H reversed a two-goal defeat earlier in the season. Quincy also has quality victories over tournament-caliber teams like Hingham (3-1), Scituate (3-0), Hanover (1-0) and Plymouth North (5-0)

"The Whitman and the Hingham matches were our best," said coach Mark Spendlove "We played well against the good teams. This is the first year since I've been here that nobody has dominated us in a match, and the Patriot League is very tough. We were a little inconsistent against teams we should beat, but that's to be expected with a young team."

It was a good blend of veterans and young players. Senior keeper Rob Smith had six shutouts. Senior captain Aidan Smyth, senior Ben Morse, junior captain Connor Porter and senior Ahmad Hamdi were solid on defense. Junior captain Tristan McCormack had a fine year setting the pace and controlling the flow at center halfback and junior Benito Carvahlo led the team with eight goals.

"Aidan was outstanding all season and Tristan was steady at an important position," said Spendlove.

Spendlove also blended in young players to create enviable depth for the Presidents. O'Shea was second on the team with six goals. Sophomore Leandro Batista, freshman Owen Smyth and sophomore Kenny Ramos all developed into quality varsity players. Batista scored the winning goal in the second North game to keep alive Quincy's tournament hopes.

"They gave us the kind of depth I've haven't had before at Quincy," said Spendlove. "We need to match our opponent's intensity in the tourney. We have the ability to compete with good teams. We've proven that. If our work ethic is good, we can play with anyone."

North volleyball – Flaherty is a special player. Through 22 matches, she had 209 kills and 180 digs. These are most unusual numbers. 209 kills and 180 digs. Toss in 27 aces and 38 blocks. From the same player? Most volleyball players put away points or save them. They do one or the other. A precious few do both. Flaherty does both. She is skilled and powerful at the net, and her ability to fly through the air or hit the floor to save what look to be certain kill-shots is remarkable

"Izzy is one of the best players in the state," said Quincy coach Jacquí Niosi.

After the first match against Quincy, North coach Kerry Ginty said the key to the season was the development of the players around Flaherty. They have developed just fine. There is balance at the net. There is more than one player who can pout away a point.

Junior Remy Aucoin (93 kills and 39 blocks), sophomore Julia Klincewicz (77 kills, 34 blocks), junior Rebecca Thorne (64 kills, 34 blocks) and senior Trina Liang (49 kills) form an imposing front line and complement well Flaherty's skills.

Thorne (64 aces), Liang (49 aces) and Aucoin (36 aces) have also served well for North.

"They are a young team, and they brought their players along well. You could see the development and the improvement in our second game against them this year," said Niosi.

The Red Raiders have done a good job keeping points alive led by Sarah Tsan (92 digs) and sophomore Sharon Yang (73 digs). Liang added 72 digs. Junior Samantha Caldwell had an excellent year setting up the big hitters with 192 assists. She also had 59 digs. Junior Kaleigh Manton (98 assists) and senior Katie Sautter (69 assists) have also passed the ball well for the Red Raiders.

"They're a scrappy team, and they don't give up on a point," said Niosi.

Helping Veterans, Active Duty Military

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

On Veterans Day, the nation honors the men and women who risk their lives to protect our freedom. Social Security honors veterans and active duty members of the military every day by giving them the respect they deserve. A vital part of that is administering the Social Security disability program.

Social Security Online Services
★ Convenient ★ Secure ★

For those who return home with injuries, Social Security is a resource they can turn to. If you know any wounded veterans, please let them know about Social Security's Wounded Warriors website. You can find it at www.socialsecurity.gov/woundedwarriors.

The Wounded Warriors website answers many commonly asked questions, and shares other useful information about disability benefits, including how veterans can receive expedited processing of disability claims. Benefits available through Social Security are different than those from the Department of Veterans Affairs and require a separate application.

The expedited process is used for military service members who become disabled while on active military service on or after October 1, 2001, regardless of where the disability occurs.

Even active duty military who continue to receive pay while in a hospital or on medical leave should consider applying for disability benefits if they're unable to work due to a disabling condition. Active duty status and receipt of military pay doesn't necessarily prevent payment of Social Security disability benefits. Although a person can't receive Social Security disability benefits while engaging in substantial work for pay or profit, receipt of military payments should never stop someone from applying for disability benefits from Social Security.

Social Security is proud to support the veterans and active duty members of the military. Let these heroes know they can count on us when they need to take advantage of their earned benefits.

NQ Football Bows To Medway

By BILL GRIFFIN

Medway scored 14 unanswered points in the second half to break open a close game and drop North Quincy, 34-12 in a non-league contest at Medway Friday night.

North moved the ball consistently well all night, and the Red Raiders were within 20-12 at the half thanks to touchdown runs by quarterback Joey Fallon and tailback Aidan Brown.

Fallon had a terrific night throwing the ball. He went 13-16 for 187 yards. His favorite target was Tom Whooley who had nine catches for 98 yards.

"Joey has really developed into a good quarterback," said coach Mark Nutley. "He threw the ball well, made some nice reads and had some good runs to go with his passing."

Brown had 104 yards on 17 carries and boosted his season's total to 985 yards in eight games. This is quite an accomplishment for a player who moved to running back for the first time in his senior year.

"He's been consistent for us all year," said Nutley. "We were right there with them at halftime, but they broke a big play early in the second half. They ran the sweep well against us, and we couldn't finish our drives in the second half."

After the Mustangs jumped to a 14-0 lead in the first half, North answered with as 70-yard drive. The key play was a 25-yard pass connection from Fallon to Tom Koch which brought the ball to the one. Fallon snuck in for the score to bring North within, 14-6.

After Medway upped the lead to 20-6, North struck right before halftime. Koch recovered a fumble at North's 24 to stop a Medway drive. Fallon found Whooley for important completions on the march which brought the ball to the Medway 24.

Brown ran a sweep off the edge behind good blocks from Conor Pound and Chris Donaghey, burst clear up the middle, and raced home for the score to draw North within 20-12 at intermission before Medway took control in the second half.

North (1-7) is at Hingham Friday night at 7 p.m.

AN INTEGRATED CARE Learning Consortium held at Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton recently drew more than 40 local educators, human service providers , and mental health and substance abuse treatment professionals to discuss ways to better coordinate behavioral health services in the area. Consortium Addresses Mental Health, Substance Abuse Issues In The Community

Hosted By BID Hospital-Milton; S.S. Mental Health

Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton, in partnership with South Shore Mental Health, recently hosted an Integrated Care Learning Consortium. More than 40 community professionals, including representatives from local school districts, social service agencies and healthcare providers, met to collaborate and share strategies on how to create a seamless and integrated system of healthcare to best serve behavioral health patients suffering from mental health and/or substance abuse problems.

"In treating the patient in a coordinated manner, where health care professionals consider all health conditions at the same time, we can help to reduce stigma toward people with behavioral health issues," said BID-Milton's Chief Medical Officer and Vice President of Healthcare Quality Ashley Yeats, MD. "We can better coordinate care in a manner that reduces symptoms and, ultimately, we can reduce the amount of time individuals spend in emergency departments for treatment of these conditions."

The Integrated Care Learning Consortium was funded through a CHART 2 (Community Hospital Acceleration, Rehabilitation and Transformation) $2 million grant awarded to the hospital from the Health Policy Commission earlier this year to establish a regionalized process for more effectively managing behavioral health patients.

Attendees at the consortium had the opportunity to network with other regional providers and share information on behavioral health best practices and resources. Participants also benefitted from hearing from Iyah Romm, policy director for care delivery, innovation and investment for the Health Policy Commission, on what is being done at the state level to combat the behavioral health crisis.

"The hospital is a part of the system of care, but only one piece of it," said BID-Milton President and Chief Executive Officer Peter Healy. "We recognize the importance of partnering with our community, from all disciplines and perspectives, to ensure we have the ability to provide the most comprehensive care to behavioral health patients, not only while our patients are here in the hospital, but also when they return home."

"South Shore Mental Health is pleased to work with BID-Milton and other community providers to strengthen the programs and services available to people facing mental health challenges. Our agency continues to build collaborations, programs and services to further meet community needs," said Sherry Ellis, vice president of Crisis and Rehabilitation Services at South Shore Mental Health.

According to Lisa Braude, Ph.D, Chart 2 project manager at the hospital, the Integrated Care Learning Consortium will be held on an ongoing basis to help improve the quality of care for behavioral health patients and to develop appropriate alternative treatment settings for some patients other than a hospital's emergency department.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your ruling planet, Mars, allows you to assume a sense of command that can help you turn a chaotic workplace situation into one that's orderly, productive and, yes, even friendly.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Getting a relationship that's been stuck in a rut up and running again depends on how far you want to run with it. Be honest with yourself as you consider which decision to make.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Be wary of rumors that seem to be coming from everywhere this week. Waiting for the facts before you act means never having to say you're sorry you followed the wrong lead.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A difficult personal matter might prompt you to turn to a trusted friend to help you sort through a maze of emotional conflicts. The weekend should bring some welcome news.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Some of the new people coming into the Lion's life could play pivotal roles in future personal and professional matters. Meanwhile, an old friend might have an important message.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A delay in getting things moving on schedule can be a blessing in disguise. Use this extra time to do more research so you can buttress any of the weaker points with solid facts.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might need to get involved in a personal matter before it becomes a serious problem. Also, be wary of someone offering to mediate, unless you can be sure of his or her motives.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Taking sides in a workplace or domestic dispute could prolong the problem. Stay out and stay cool. Then you can be friends with both parties when things settle down.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A friendship has the potential to become something more, and with this week's aspects favoring romance, you might feel that this possibility is worth exploring.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The new job you want might require you to relocate. If so, keep an open mind and weigh all the positives and negatives before making your decision.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A new relationship seems to be everything you could have hoped for. Congratulations. Meanwhile, it's not too early to get some feedback on that new project you're working on.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You might have decided to get out of the fast-moving current and just float around hither and yon for a while. But you might find that the new opportunity is too tempting to turn down.

BORN THIS WEEK: You believe in bringing out the best in people with kind deeds, loving words and recognition of their "special" selves.

4thAnnual Best Chef Raises Over $150,000 For QCAP

Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP) raised more than $150,000 in their fourth annual Best Chef competition held recently at Granite Links Golf Club in Quincy.

The event, which coincided with QCAP's 50th anniversary, brought back past Best Chef winners for a special Tournament of Champions event. Chef Ming Cao, Executive Chef of the Fuji Restaurant Group came away victorious with his dish of chicken and rutabaga won-tons over grilled teriyaki chicken and macaroni.

"The chefs and their restaurants not only put on an amazing show but they also generously donated their time and culinary creations for our guests," said Beth Ann Strollo, QCAP's Chief Executive Officer. "We could not be more grateful to them, our judges' panel, and all of our sponsors and donors who helped us reach our special 50th anniversary goal."

Massachusetts Gov. Charlie Baker and Quincy Mayor Thomas P. Koch made a guest appearance at the event. Together they helped kick-off the night's festivities, offering their congratulations to QCAP and praising the chefs for their contributions to the event and the community.

Chef Cao squared off against some of the area's most talented chefs including 2012 champion Chef Paul Wahlberg of Alma Nove & Wahlburgers, 2013 winner Chef David Todisco of the Tavern at Quarry Hills, last year's winner, Chef Tony DeRienzo of Abby Park and Novara, and new to the Best Chef competition, Chef Bobby Sisson of Townshend Restaurant.

The challenge was to use typical ingredients distributed at QCAP's Emergency Food Center, the organization's food pantry, to create a gourmet dish. This year's menu – which was kept secret from the chefs until they were unveiled at the event - included rutabaga, chicken thighs, maple syrup, canned white beans in tomato sauce, elbow pasta, and dried cherries. The chefs were further handicapped by their cooking equipment, which included only a convection oven and a handful of portable burners, and the clock, ticking away 30 minutes to cook.

The dishes were rated on taste, plating, and how well they used the secret ingredients. The panel of judges included Chazy Dowaliby, editor, Patriot Ledger; Kerry Byrne, food writer, Boston Herald, ColdHardFootballFacts.com, and SportsIllustrated.com; Barbara Isola, Quincy School Committee member and host of "Into the Frying Pan"; and Chef Marty McGovern, 2014 People's Choice Winner, and manager of the Neighborhood Club of Quincy. Danielle Vollmar of WCVB Channel 5 served as the night's emcee.

The chefs were paired with a celebrity chef, who helped to rush ingredients for their chefs from the Mobile Pantry. Donning the celebrity chef aprons were QCAP friends and supporters from the Rotary Club of Quincy: Dolly Di Pesa, Ed Keohane, Joan Keohane, George Montilio, and Marianne Peak.

The more than 300 guests weighed in on their own favorite chefs as part of the "People's Choice" competition, which featured serving stations around the Granite Links ballroom with dishes that reflected the flavors and styles of the chefs' respective restaurants. With his Braised Pork Belly dish, Chef David Todisco took home the People's Choice title.

Assisting at the People's Choice stations were students from the Quincy High School Culinary Arts Program, led by instructor Patrick Noe. The unique partnership between QCAP's Best Chef and the Culinary Arts Program has led to job opportunities for the students within the restaurants participating in the event.

The night also featured raffles and live and silent auctions, including a personal dining experience courtesy of Chef Paul Wahlberg; a one week stay at the beautiful Costa Linda Beach Resort in Aruba; Putnam Club seats to the New England Patriots; Notre Dame v. Boston College football tickets at Fenway Park; a family excursion package to the Great Wolf Lodge; autographed memorabilia; sporting and entertainment event tickets; fine art; and golf, restaurant, and spa gift certificates.

Event proceeds will benefit QCAP programs, which serve more than 20,000 unduplicated individuals every year. In addition to the Emergency Food Center, services include adult education and workforce development, financial education, including money management and credit repair counseling, job coaching and placement, Head Start, quality and affordable early education and care, family engagement activities, heating assistance and weatherization, homebuyer education, mortgage foreclosure counseling, affordable housing, homelessness prevention, and housing services.

Downtown Roadwork Will Continue Into December

Resumes In The Spring

By SCOTT JACKSON

Roadwork underway in Quincy Center as part of the project to link City Hall to the United First Parish Church will continue into December and resume again in the spring of 2016.

Once the $8 million project – being overseen by the Massachusetts Department of Transportation and funded largely through a federal earmark – is completed, the portion of Hancock Street between City Hall and the church will close to traffic, allowing for construction of a new public park, the Adams Hancock Green, linking the two historic buildings.

The closure of Hancock Street is expected to happen in May or June of next year, according to Tom Russo of Woodard & Curran, who is the liaison for the Quincy Center project. The closure had been scheduled for this year, but was pushed back because Verizon duct banks underground needed to moved first to allow for Hancock Street to be lowered six inches.

FOREGROUND OF THIS PHOTO shows the approximate location of a new raised crosswalk where Hancock Street and Temple Street meet in Quincy Center that will connect an expanded sidewalk (far left) to the new Adams Hancock Green public park. Northbound traffic will travel in one lane from Maple Street (left) heading toward the crosswalk and then split into two lanes after the crosswalk on Temple Street. One lane of traffic will travel southbound from Washington Street to Temple Street, and then split into two lanes at the new crosswalk. The two southbound lanes will then widen to three lanes approaching the intersection of Hancock and Granite Streets (right background).

THREE-ALARM FIRE Nov. 4 gutted a mixed-use building at 307-311 Newport Ave. in Wollaston. Eleven fire trucks from Quincy and Boston responded to the fire – eight engines and three ladders. One Quincy firefighter was treated and released at a local hospital for smoke inhalation and heat exhaustion and was able to return to work for his next scheduled shift. Several people living inside the building were left homeless, but none of the residents were injured.

3-Alarm Fire Guts Newport Avenue Building

By SCOTT JACKSON

A three-alarm fire on Newport Avenue in Wollaston gutted a mixed-use building featuring apartments and storefronts, leaving several people homeless.

A basement fire was reported at 307-311 Newport Ave. shortly before 10 a.m. on Nov. 4, according to Deputy Fire Chief Paul Griffith. The first firefighters on scene had to force their way into the basement where they found smoke but no fire, Griffith said. They then worked their way upstairs where they found the fire in a kitchen area that had spread into the walls and other void spaces.

Firefighters were able to bring the fire under control by about 1 p.m., though a fire watch was posted overnight and into the following day as they continued to chase small pockets of fire that popped up.

Griffith said the fire was very labor intensive and access to the building was difficult because there was less

Energy Revolution Author To Speak At Library Nov. 18

Using technologies like solar panels, wind turbines, and electric cars, the world can get all its energy from renewable sources--not at some point in the future but today.

So says Mara Prentiss, a Harvard physics professor who will be speaking on the topic at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Wednesday, Nov. 18 at 7 p.m.

Her talk is cosponsored by the library and Quincy Climate Action Network,

Prentiss, the author of the new book Energy Revolution, will argue that the transition to renewables is not only technically feasible but also economically advantageous. She notes midwestern US states are already using wind turbines to supply a big chunk of their electric power, with Iowa getting more than 40 percent of its power from wind in peak months.

In addition to renewable energy production, Prentiss will also discuss grid and storage technologies that can assure a constant flow of electricity even when the electrons come from intermittent sources like wind and solar.

To get our energy by burning fossil fuels is inherently inefficient, Prentiss says. Because of a physics principle called Carnot's Theorem, devices that use heat to generate energy, including gasoline engines and coal- or gas-fired power plants, peak out at 50 percent efficiency, she says, no matter how ingenious their design, with the rest of the energy in their fuel given off as waste heat. Motors like the ones in electric cars, by contrast, have efficiencies ranging from 90 to 98 percent.

Besides, burning fossil fuels, whether it's in cars or power plants, "creates a whole lot of problems," Prentiss says. "In the US, we focus on climate change, but in the developing world, air quality is a bigger issue. In places like New Delhi and Beijing the air is often so polluted it is hard to breathe."

Nevertheless, she says, "I'm not trying to tell people what to do. I'm just explaining choices of which they may not be aware."

THE DIAMOND TRADITION

The tradition of a man giving his intended bride a diamond is one that spans the centuries. The Egyptians incorporated diamonds into their jewelry, but it was not until 1477 that the gemstone became part of the wedding ritual. In that year, Archduke Maximilian of Austria had a ring set with a diamond for Mary of Burgundy. Today, at least 75 percent of brides joyously receive engagement rings glittering with diamonds as symbols of enduring love. As emotional as the experience can be, consumers are advised to seek the help of a reputable jeweler, who can educate them about the "Four C's" of diamond buying—Cut, Clarity, Carat, and Color. Informed consumers ultimately enjoy the best value.

The diamond collection at Rogers Jewelry contains virtually any shape and size imaginable. We maintain, along with three other jewelers, a permanent presence in the diamond centers of the world. This established relationship affords us the ability to bring you all the qualities, sizes, and shapes at value prices. If we don't have it in stock we will get it, usually within 72 hours with no obligation on the customer's part. For more information, please call 617-773-3636. A Few More Holes To Fill

The ballots have been counted and the winners have celebrated their Election Night victories.

But there's still some additional changes coming to the city's political landscape.

DiBONA

The most obvious is who will succeed Noel DiBona and fill out his unexpired term on the School Committee. DiBona was among three who won council at-large seats last week.

DiBona will resign his School Committee seat when he is sworn in as a councillor at-large along with the mayor, other city councillors and school committee members in January. DiBona's school committee term has two more years remaining on it.

After he resigns his school seat, the city council and School Committee will meet to fill the unexpired term. Whomever is chosen can opt to run for a four-year term in November of 2017.

LEBO

ROOS

A few names have been mentioned as possible successors include former School Committeewoman Emily Lebo, outgoing School Committeeman David McCarthy and former School Committee candidate and Ward 3 candidate Karl Roos.

Lebo may have the inside track on the appointment. She waged an intensive write-in campaign in this year's city election for a school committee seat but came up short finishing fourth behind incumbents Paul Bregoli and Kathryn Hubley and record-setting political newcomer James DeAmicis who at age 19 became the youngest Quincy resident elected to local office.

Lebo told the Sun she is definitely interested in being appointed to fill the school committee seat that will be vacated by DiBona. It's ironic to note that it was DiBona who unseated Lebo two years ago and thus if she's appointed she would be filling the seat that she lost to DiBona in 2013.

"I known that position will be voted on by the new City Council and School Committee once they are sworn in (Jan. 4), and I would be honored to be appointed," Lebo said.

"Since I have worked in education for the past 25 years, I know I have the right background and experience needed to handle the responsibilities and duties facing the school committee. I want our schools to be the very best they can be and would love to again have the opportunity to work toward that goal," she added.

McCarthy and Roos may also be interested in the school seat appointment.

Son Beams

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

McCarthy – who came up short in a bid for a council at-large seat last week – is finishing 12 years on the School Committee. He certainly has the experience to serve the board..

Roos could also make a pitch for the appointment. He has been as close as you can get to winning a school committee seat losing a recount to Barbara Isola in 2009. Roos was a one-vote winner on Election Night but after a 15-hour recount of 24,857 ballots Isola took the seat by a margin of 11 votes.

So those are three possible names and there could be others.

And any resident is eligible to be nominated for the seat. All they need to do is show up at the joint convention whenever that is scheduled.

One thing we do know: the joint convention will include three seat holders who will just be starting their terms. They are Councillor at-Large-elect Nina Liang, Ward 3 Councillor-elect Ian Cain and School Committee member-elect James DeAmicis. Those three votes could be a deciding factor on who ultimately gets the open school seat appointment.

THERE ARE TWO other votes the new City Council and the new School Committee will make fresh out of the gate: who will lead those two governing bodies for the next year.

Both the council and the school committee will be electing new leaders in January.

The new city council president and new school committee vice chairperson will succeed Joseph Finn and Kathryn Hubley who have served in those two positions respectively the last two years.

HUGHES

Insiders say that the new council president could be Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes who was re-elected to a third term last Tuesday. Hughes also serves as chairperson of the Massachusetts Republican Party. Besides Hughes, there are four other current councillors who have not served as council president yet: Ward 1's Margaret Laforest, Ward 2's Brad Croall, Ward 4's Brian Palmucci and Ward 6's Brian McNamee.

BREGOLI

As for the school committee vice chairmanship, observers believe Paul Bregoli will step into that role. Bregoli was re-elected to a four-year term last week. He appears to be the logical choice since he is the only committee person returning in January who has not served as school board vice chairperson. Anne Mahoney, Barbara Isola and Hubley have all served in that capacity.

KOCH

THERE WERE PLENTY of surprises Election Night – one of them the margin of victory for incumbent Mayor Thomas Koch over former Mayor William Phelan. In what many considered a tight race, Koch prevailed by 2,810 votes – the biggest margin of any of his previous three contested races.

Koch polled 12,425 votes (55.97 percent) and won five out of six wards losing only Ward 1 to Phelan by 144 votes (2,421 to 2,277). Phelan polled 9,615 votes or 43.31 percent.

Koch's biggest victory came in Ward 6 where he won by 1,228 votes (2,607 to 1,379). In all Koch bested Phelan in 27 out of 31 precincts. Phelan's best showing was in Ward 1 where he won Precincts 2, 4 and 5. He also took Ward 5 Precinct 1. But the rest of the city went to Koch.

Koch's victory means he'll serve the first four-year mayoral term in Quincy history. And if he completes this term he will tie Jim Sheets for the longest serving Plan A mayor with 12 years.

We know there's a long way to go until Election Year 2019 – the next time the mayor's term will be on the ballot. But right now, it seems like the only one who can stop Tom Koch from being the mayor is Tom Koch.

He'll have a decision to make in four years – seek another 4-year term or go in some other direction. Koch will be 56 in 2019 – still a young age politically and if he serves until 2023 he'll be 60. So age really doesn't appear to be a factor.

And one can make the argument that perhaps Koch's been through the most difficult stretch of his tenure as mayor. After the departure of master developer StreetWorks, the downtown is on the upswing with one building well on its way and another set to start soon. And a third is in the works.

In four years, the downtown should look much different than it does today. More progress would be more feathers in Koch's political cap. Of course not everyone is a fan of the mayor's but right now - based on four contested races - there are more Koch supporters than detractors in Quincy.

Koch has always said he takes one term at a time before he makes a decision about running for re-election. So it will be a while before we know what his plans are for 2019.

If he opts not to run for a sixth term, the floodgates could open with a myriad of hopefuls. One name mentioned as a possible mayoral contender if there's an open seat is Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti. Another is Koch's brother-in-law and former city councillor and current state Sen. John Keenan – although many think he will someday run for Congress.

CONGRATULATIONS to all the winners in the Nov. 3rd city election. It was an historic night as voters elected two Asian-Americans and one African-American to the City Council – Noel DiBona, Nina Liang and Ian Cain respectively; and the youngest resident to win a local race: 19-year-old James DeAmicis who won a seat on the School Committee.

We also want to acknowledge two candidates who came up short at the ballot box – Councillor Michael McFarland and School Committeeman David McCarthy who both bowed in the at-large race. McFarland and McCarthy have served the city well and we wish both of them good luck in the future.

Moments in time

THE HISTORY CHANNEL.

- On Nov. 28, 1582, William Shakespeare, 18, and Anne Hathaway, 26, pay a 40-pound bond for their marriage license in Stratford-upon-Avon. Six months later, Anne gives birth to their daughter, Susanna, and two years later, to twins.
- On Nov. 27, 1703, an unusual freak storm finally dissipates over England after wreaking havoc for two weeks. Packing hurricane-strength winds, the storm killed between 10,000 and 30,000 people, and sank hundreds of Royal Navy ships.
- On Nov. 29, 1929, American explorer Richard Byrd and three companions make the first flight over the South Pole. In 1996, a diary of Byrd's was found that seemed to suggest his plane had turned back 150 miles short of its goal because of an oil leak.
- On Nov. 23, 1936, the first issue of Life magazine is published, featuring a cover photo of the Fort Peck Dam. When it folded during the Great Depression, publisher Henry Luce bought the name and re-launched Life as a picture-based periodical.
- On Nov. 26, 1941, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signs a bill officially establishing the fourth Thursday in November as Thanksgiving Day. In 1789, President George Washington had proclaimed a holiday of national thanksgiving for the U.S. Constitution.
- On Nov. 24, 1971, a hijacker calling himself D.B. Cooper -- wearing only wraparound sunglasses, a thin suit and a raincoat -- parachutes from an airplane into a thunderstorm with 100-mph winds and temperatures well below zero over Washington state. Despite a massive search, no trace of Cooper or the $200,000 in ransom money he carried was ever found.
- On Nov. 25, 1990, after a howling wind- and rainstorm on Thanksgiving Day, Washington state's historic floating Lacey V. Murrow Memorial Bridge breaks apart and sinks to the bottom of Lake Washington. The bridge had been made of 22 floating pontoons.

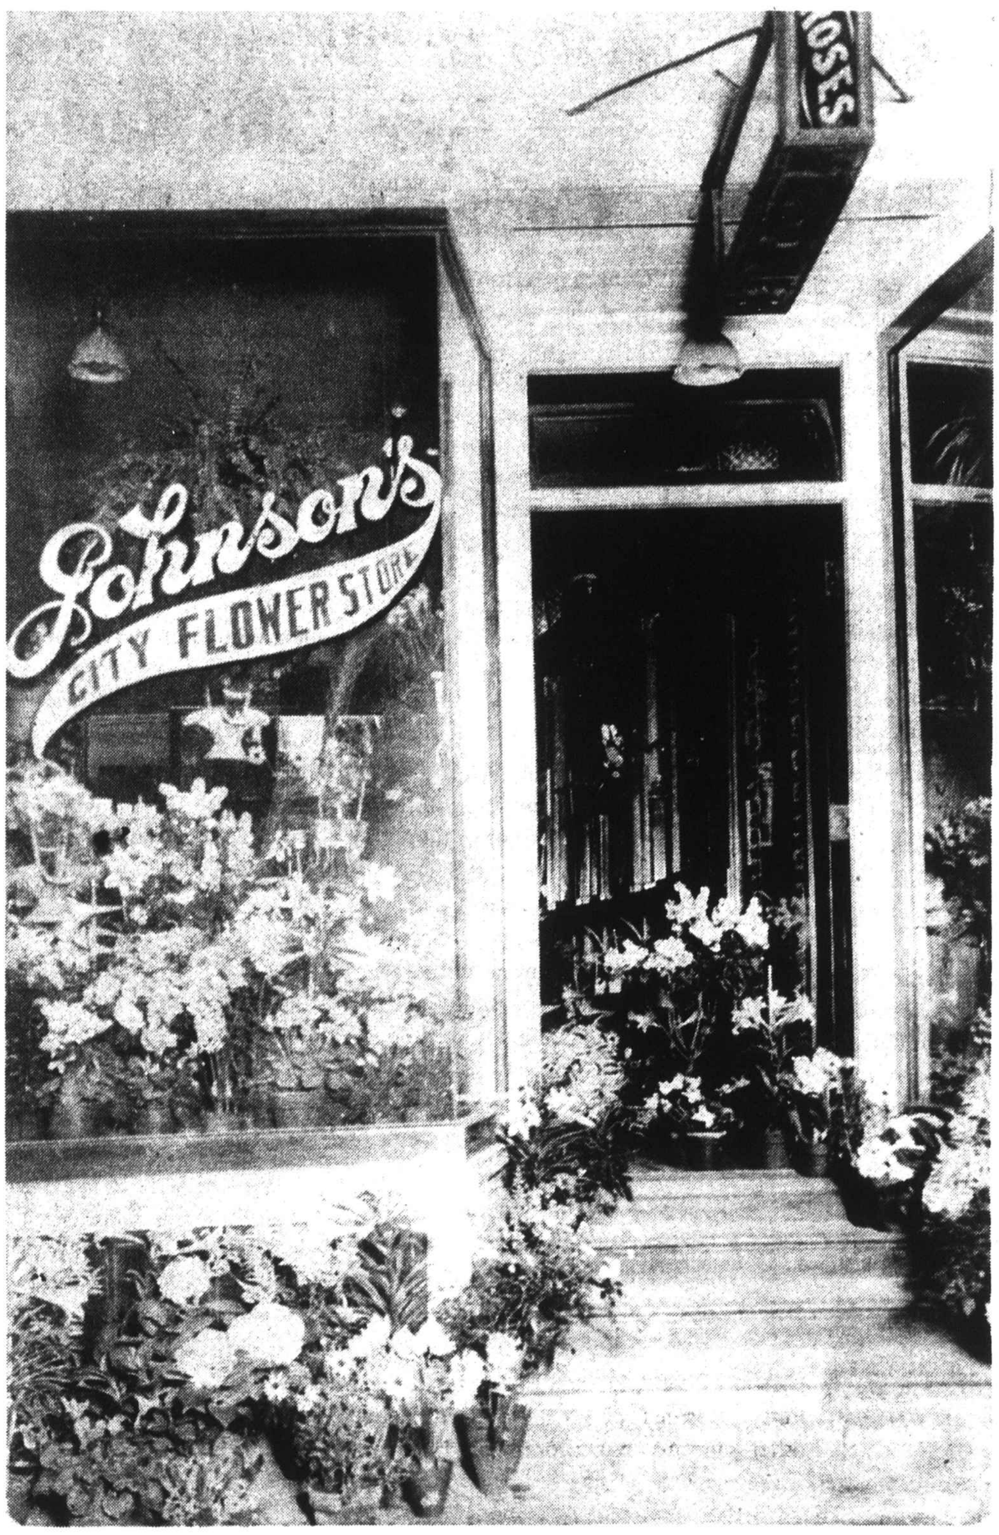
Scenes From Yesterday



THIS IS A 1911 real photo postcard view of the entrance to Johnson's Flower Shop that was at 1363 Hancock St. in Quincy Square. Carl Johnson and later his son operated this store for many years next to Heffernan's Shoe Store in the old wooden Central Building. In 1920 the Central Building was attached to the old Town Hall building next door and together they became a much larger Central Building with a common façade. In 1950, new owners changed the name to the Burgin & Platner Building. Today it is owned by Quincy Center LLC, and this postcard view is now the entryway to the shop of a MetroPCS Communications dealer. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Three Minutes Or Less: A Message From Quincy Fire

By MIKE SLADE
Fire Prevention Officer
Quincy Fire Department

The Quincy Fire Department has responded to 683 fires this year.

Most of the fires that we respond to are knocked down before becoming fully involved due to the fast and aggressive response of the Quincy Fire Department. Most of these fires, thankfully, do not make the evening news.

On average, the Quincy Fire Department will be on scene within three minutes of the initial emergency call to 911. There are two main factors that enable the Quincy Fire Department to respond to a call and be on scene so quickly.

Reason 1: The Quincy Fire Department dispatch center is manned 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, 365 days of the year by firefighter operators who monitor every call to 911. Before a caller concludes their call, Quincy Firefighters are already dispatched and on their way to the emergency.

Reason 2: All of the Quincy Fire Department's eight firehouses are strategically located throughout the city so as to provide a three minute or less response to each and every citizen within the city of Quincy.

Quincy Fire Department Statistics

JANUARY 1, 2015 -NOVEMBER 5, 2015

Total Calls:	9,091
Fires:	683
Rescue/Emergency Medical Calls:	5,387
Emergency Service Calls:	720
Good Intent Calls:	433
False Alarm Calls:	1,196
Hazardous Condition Calls:	654
Other:	18

To help keep Quincy citizens safe, the Quincy Fire Department recommends the following:

1.) Have working smoke detectors on each floor of your home. Smoke detectors should be placed on the ceiling at the base of each stairway, and outside of each bedroom. A small fire can become a fully involved fire in less than two minutes. If you hear the smoke alarms going off, please get out of your house as quickly as possible. Have a meeting place for your family outside of your home. Do not investigate the source of the detectors going off. Please allow the fire department to do this.

2.) Have working carbon monoxide detectors on each floor of your home. Carbon monoxide has been called the silent assassin. It has no taste, no color, and no smell. It can kill you very quickly.

3.) Keep combustible materials away from your hot water heater and your home heating furnace. Quincy Fire continues to respond to many fires that were started due to combustibles lit on fire from the home heating unit(s).

4.) Make sure that the vents to your dryer and home heating units are clean and unobstructed. During snow storms, remember to check and make sure that these vents are not clogged from snow. During last year's record breaking snow fall, Quincy Fire responded to numerous carbon monoxide emergencies mainly due to snowed in dryer vents and home heating forced ventilation vents.

If you should have any questions or concerns whatsoever, please do not hesitate to call the Quincy Fire Prevention Bureau at 617-376-1015.

Girl Scouts: Thank Our Veterans

Dear Editor,

The Girl Scout Troop 78281 wanted to invite everyone to the Veterans Day Parade which all the troops will be marching in on Nov. 11 at 10:30 a.m.

First, we would like to ask if the people of Quincy will allow the Girl Scouts to go before the Boy Scouts because they always go first. More importantly, we would like to thank all the Veterans because they are not always in their uniforms so we want all veterans to know we appreciate them.

Lastly, not only are current/serving veterans are important so if your parents or grandparents served you should thank them once in awhile.

Thank you for reading our letter.

Sincerely,
Girl Scout Troop #78281

Voters Oust Plan E, Bring Back Plan A

Quincy will return to the Plan A form of government in 1958 as a result of Tuesday's election when the voters discarded Plan E and ousted three of seven city councillors.

Plan A won over Plan E, 14,378 to 12,851, as Councillors David J. Crowley, Alfred G. Helfrich and Frank E. MacDonald lost their seats to Thomas S. Burgin, James R. McIntyre and Charles L. Shea.

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa and Councillors David S. McIntosh, Carl W. Anderson and Edna B. Austin retained their seats as 65.2 percent of the voters went to the polls.

McIntyre finished third in the election with 14,187 votes. McIntyre, 25, and still a law school student, is the youngest man elected to the council in 25 years. He was wounded during the Korean War in which he served as a Marine Corps officer.

Shea, 28, won election to the council on his second try. A Boston College graduate he finished fifth polling 12,116.

The seventh and final seat on the council was won by incumbent Edna B. Austin who polled 12,058 votes, edging out 10-year council veteran Crowley by 102 votes. Crowley received 11,956 votes and was considering asking for a recount.

Interfaith Social Services To Honor NECN's Ally Donnelly At Dec. 4 Gala

ALLY DONNELLY

Hingham resident Ally Donnelly is familiar to most area residents from her work at the TV station NECN. But what most people don't know is how much she does behind the camera to help South Shore residents who are struggling to provide basic necessities for their families.

A local organization, Interfaith Social Services, has decided to honor her contributions to the region by selecting Donnelly as their Community Hero of the Year. Each year at their Feed the Hungry Gala Interfaith presents the award to an individual who inspires others through selfless service.

"Ally's passionate investigative reporting and dedication to serving South Shore residents in need made her an obvious choice for the Community Hero of the Year award," said Interfaith's executive director Rick Doane.

"As a reporter, Ally covers issues and stories about people who are struggling, or who can't speak for themselves. Outside of her office hours, Ally chairs Interfaith's Feed the Hungry Gala Committee. She has participated in the Pan Mass Challenge in honor of children struggling with cancer.

"She engages local businesses to join her in supporting families in need. Ally organizes clothing and Halloween costume drives for local children, prepares bake sales and participates in Walkathons. She embodies Interfaith's moto of "neighbors helping neighbors. We are lucky to have someone as dedicated as Ally living here in our community," Doane said.

In 2013, South Shore Living profiled Donnelly as one of the most influential women in the South Shore region. A part of the NECN team for over 10 years, she has won three local Emmy Awards, two regional Edward R. Murrow Awards and two Gabriel Awards in her career as a journalist, along with two Associated Press awards and a Freddie Award. During this time, she wrote and produced NECN's award-winning documentary "The Long Journey Home."

A graduate of Marquette University, Donnelly began her career as a Public Affairs Officer for Boston Children's Hospital and later become editor of WHERE Boston Magazine. She and her husband Patrick are the parents of two daughters, Izzie and Lucy, both of whom organize a bake sale each spring to benefit Interfaith Social Services.

Donnelly will receive the Community Hero of the Year Award at Interfaith's Feed the Hungry Gala on Dec. 4 at Granite Links in Quincy. Interfaith's gala is one of the premiere social events for Greater Boston and Massachusetts' South Shore region.

The gala features carnival-style games, door prizes, entertainment and an amazing variety of live and silent auction packages. Chefs from top Boston area restaurants host a Dine Around experience for guests while local wine and spirits distributors showcase their products.

Many surprises and fun giveaways are being planned for this year's event. All proceeds support Interfaith's programs for local families in need of food, mental health counseling, homelessness prevention, budget counseling and emergency assistance. To purchase tickets, or for more information about the event, visit www.FeedHungryGala.org.

Past Community of the Year award recipients include: Jennifer Reale, Cindy Lee, Ed Kelley, Paula Lombardo, Beverly Tangvik, Thomas F. Williams. Esq., Kris Larsen, Matti Lang, Jan Stewart, Mary Ann Walsh, Robert F. Taylor, Margaret Davidson and Andrew Scheele.

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell recently attended the Father Bill's & MainSpring of Quincy and Brockton's annual Workforce Development Celebration.

"It was truly an honor to be part of this celebration," O'Donnell said. "I want to recognize the generous citizens of Norfolk County who have dropped off business appropriate clothing to the Registry so it could be used for the Suits for Success program. Since 2009, more than 3,000 items of clothing have been donated through us."

On Father Bill's and MainSpring's role, O'Donnell said, "They've done a great job in not just providing this clothing, but in creating an opportunity for people to make a good initial impression as they reenter the workforce."

The core mission of Father Bill's & MainSpring is the elimination of homelessness in Southern Massachusetts. This is done by providing emergency and permanent housing and helping people obtain skills and jobs so they can achieve self-sufficiency.

Further information about Father Bill's & MainSpring, can be obtained by contacting the Development Office, 422 Washington Street, Quincy, by calling 617-376-2255 or by email info@helpfbms.org.

WHAT'S COOKING with Marie & Suzie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

Cornflake Crusted Fish

By MARIE

I notice that sometimes cooking fish can be bland unless it is seasoned properly.

Last week, I found a great way to make a fish entree that turned out to be very tasty. I breaded the fish with corn flakes and the flavor was super.

Plus I used a marsala sauce and mushrooms for the topping - another great flavor as you will note if you try this recipe.

2-3 slices haddock or other favorite
1-2 cups corn flakes (mashed)
1 egg with milk for coating
3 tablespoons vegetable oil
salt and pepper

Season the fish with the salt and pepper. In a bowl, mix the egg and milk together. Place the fish in the egg mixture and then the corn flakes.

In the hot oil, sauté the fish, drain on paper towel and set aside.

Marsala Mushrooms
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 cup sliced mushrooms
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
1/4 cup Marsala wine
1 teaspoon flour

In the oil, saute the mushrooms, add the garlic powder, the wine and the flour, stirring until sauce thickens a bit.

Serve the sauce over the fish for a delicious treat.

Mashed Extra Sweet Potatoes

By SUZIE

Why wait for Thanksgiving to enjoy sweet potatoes? This healthy version of your favorite November treat can satisfy you and your family year round.

Rich in fiber, Vitamin A, B vitamins and minerals, sweet potatoes can be a high fiber side dish or meal. I even bake sweet potato "rings" by slicing them (well scrubbed skin ON) and baking on a cookie sheet lined with parchment paper, brushed with olive or coconut oil, and seasoned with sea salt. I eat this with my eggs for breakfast instead of bread. But this recipe is sweet and creamy, and a wholesome addition to your meals.

I add maple syrup as well because it contains some minerals and B Vitamins that you might want right now.

Ginger and cinnamon are anti-inflammatory spices, a great way to stay healthy as the months get colder.

Coconut milk makes this dish taste incredibly delicious and is far easier to digest than cows milk. (I use Native Forest canned organic coconut milk and make sure I always have it in my cupboard.)

Ingredients
3 medium organic sweet potatoes
3/4 cup coconut milk
1 tablespoon Kerrygold Butter
2 teaspoons fresh ginger-minced or buy the already minced kind in a jar from the GINGER PEOPLE (easy and great quality)
1 teaspoon sea salt (I like Redmonds Real Salt)
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 tablespoon organic maple syrup (I get a big jug at Costco)

Preparation

1) Pre-heat oven to 425 degrees. Place clean sweet potatoes in oven and bake for 45 minutes.

2) Remove potatoes from oven when soft enough to be pierced with a fork, and allow to cool.

3) Peel potatoes (skin should come off quite easily), and place in large bowl, discard skins.

4) Mash thoroughly with masher

5) Add all remaining ingredient and blend to desired consistency.

Cranberry, Apple Pie

By MARIE

On a recent trip to Martha's Vineyard, my son-in-law Jonathan took us to a farm he had heard about in Edgartown. He and my daughter Rita went to Morning Glory Farm.

It was an amazing place with every kind of food ever-and in the back room, a large kitchen where the chefs were busy baking home made pies.

We bought a cranberry, apple pie that was still warm and the most delicious combination.

I was telling my niece Ann about the pie-and she found a recipe in one of her mother's cookbooks for the pie. What a surprise it was to be able to bake this wonderful dessert.

CRANBERRY, APPLE PIE

1 1/2 cups sugar
1/3 cup flour
3 cups sliced pared apples (about 3 apples)
2 cups fresh cranberries
2 tablespoons butter
Pastry dough

Heat oven to 425 degrees. Stir flour and sugar together.

Place the pastry dough in a pie plate. Alternate layers of apples, cranberry and sugar mixture. Dot with butter.

Cover with top crust, and seal, and flute. Cut slits on the top and bake for 40-50 minutes or until crust is nicely browned.

The FBA Awards recognize the importance of family businesses in the state and the critical role these companies play in providing significant employment opportunities, revenue generation, as well as economic development and growth in their communities, the state, and the region.

Dependable Cleaners received the Endurance Award for overcoming past adversity. The honorees were chosen from a variety of successful companies from across Massachusetts, and represent small, midsize and large companies (employees and revenue) as well as first generation businesses.

Dry Cleaners Collecting Winter Coats For Needy

Three local dry cleaners are helping provide warm coats to those in need this winter.

Collection bins for donated coats are set up at the Dependable Cleaners in Milton and West Quincy as well as We Care Cleaners in Quincy. The public is invited to donate new and/or gently worn winter coats.

The dry cleaners are supporting the First Congregational Church of Milton which has coordinated the coat drives for several years now. This year's goal is to collect more than 500 coats.

Coats are collected, sorted and distributed to local charities. Cradles to Crayons receives the children's coats. Dressy coats are delivered to Interfaith Social Services for their Career Closet, which helps people re-entering the work force.

City Mission utilizes men's and women's warm coats with those in need in Boston.

The boxes will remain the three dry cleaners through the end of January, but since cold weather usually begins before the first of the year, any coats donated now will be put to immediate use.

Downtown DiBona's First Priority

School Committeeman Wins Councillor At-Large Seat

By SCOTT JACKSON

The redevelopment of Quincy Center will be Noel DiBona's first priority as he begins a two-year term as an at-large city councillor in January.

The 40-year-old DiBona, a member of the School Committee for the past two years, won one of three at-large seats on the City Council in the Nov. 3 election. DiBona finished second in a five-candidate field and will be joined by incumbent Joseph Finn and newcomer Nina Liang as the at-large councillors in January.

DiBona, the owner of Russ DiBona & Son Landscaping, said his background as a small business owner will be beneficial as the redevelopment of the downtown progresses.

"It is our future of the city of Quincy," DiBona said of the downtown. "I feel as a small business owner I can bring so much to the table here, complementing what we can bring in there like for instance store fronts, restaurants. We're going to have to build attraction to the city.

"Those apartments and condominiums, you're not going to get families moving in there. It's not going to happen. Families are going to go to single families. You're going to need young professionals...that maybe work in Boston. We have to cater to the South Shore towns.

"Those young professionals that are 25 to 35, those are the kind of people we need to bring here to Quincy. If they're working in Boston, they're right here. They're six miles off from Boston. They work in Boston but they can have their main attraction be Quincy and they have enough time to visit mom and dad in these towns.

"We need to bring those South Shore young professionals here as well as bringing other young professionals from all other areas of the state...they want to be able to get to Boston as well, but they want to be able to have an attraction in Quincy. Maybe they don't want to live totally in Boston, but they want to live where they can get to Boston in the morning."

DiBona said he supports Mayor Thomas Koch's vision for Quincy Center and will be able to work with the mayor and his fellow councillors to make the plan succeed.

"The mayor has a vision and I like his vision," DiBona said. "I'm going to complement his vision, work with him, work with the other councillors on making it succeed so all of Quincy will benefit from it."

Another priority DiBona identified is the MBTA, including improving Red Line service and restoring ferry service in the city, whether it is at the Fore River Shipyard or elsewhere.

"Another priority would be the MBTA trains. Working collaboratively, working together, with the MBTA, with the governor, with the mayor on getting that in order. It's vital because we're going to have a revitalization of the downtown. We're going to have an Adams Green," DiBona said.

"We're doing good with the buses, but there also has to be a ferry service, which I've talked about in the past. It doesn't necessarily have to be out of Fore River but it could be out of Marina Bay. Not only is it going to be for us to gateway into Boston, but it's also going to be for the tourists to come to Quincy. When people come to Boston for a historical city, we've got to find and harness getting people to come to Quincy.

"We have to look outside the box now," DiBona continued. "What I mean by going outside that box is we've got to start thinking about other ways of driving revenue into the city without taxing the homeowners every year.

"I ran for this seat not as a politician, but as a citizen of this city. I'm a homeowner and I want to represent the people...sometimes when I make decisions I'm going to make decisions based on let's step outside myself, let's step into the shoes of a homeowner, let's step into the shoes of a senior, let's step into the shoes of a parent and let's make decisions based on that and not based on your own personal agendas."

DiBona said he decided to run for an at-large seat midway through a four-year school board term because he can bring more to the city and the school system. The relationships he developed while on the committee, he added, will carry on.

"I felt that I could bring so much more to the city as an at-large councillor," DiBona said. "I think it's a strength for more to be on the School Committee because now I have a relationship with all of the principals throughout the school system, have a lot of relationships with a lot of the families, the superintendent.

"I didn't use this as a platform and I don't want to use it as a platform, but I have a child that has autism spectrum disorder. Now he's in the Quincy Public Schools. I want to make sure that I'm a voice for a lot of other children, a lot of other parents that are in a similar situation.

"The downtown development is going to help us with funding for the schools every year and I felt that I could be a bigger voice at the council level to help the school system more."

DiBona plans to remain involved with the school system as an at-large councillor.

"Fantastic. Love it," he responded when asked to sum up his experience on the committee. "Not giving it up, because I'm going to be very involved still with the schools. At-large is about being involved throughout the city. I'm going to still be in those schools helping out. I feel that it is my duty to do that and I have a child in the Quincy Public Schools so I'm going to be right there.

"I feel I just bring so much now to the table as both. You're going to get an all-in-one. I feel that's important. The biggest reason why I was taking the charge up to go to the at-large is because of the downtown. I felt that we need a strong voice for this, we need to get it in order, and I have the vision for Quincy. That's the reason I ran."

DiBona said he viewed himself as the underdog in the at-large race, going up against a field that included two incumbents and a long-time member of the School Committee.

"I think I was the underdog of them all. I had a lot of factors working against me,

DCT, OKIE Concert Fundraiser Nov. 25

The family and friends of Dennis C. Thomson and John "Okie" O'Connell will host its fifth annual NQHS Scholarship Concert Fundraiser Wednesday, Nov. 25 at the Quincy Sons of Italy, Quarry Street.

Doors open at 7 p.m. and the donation at the door is $5.

Dennis and Okie were the closest of friends and both were North Quincy High School graduates Class of 2002. Dennis and Okie were phenomenal athletes who loved playing and attending sporting events especially baseball. Dennis also had an interest for football and Okie's passion was basketball.

On Oct. 30, 2004, while driving to visit friends, having time off from the Air Force life an alleged drunk driver struck Dennis' Jeep and he passed away from his injuries on Nov. 22, 2004. Dennis was 20 years old.

Okie, while attending his final year in college, attempted to stop a fight between a friend and another man. He was punched with provocation, had hit his heads on the ground and lapsed into a coma. Okie had passed no more than 24 hours later due to his injuries on Oct. 21, 2005. John O'Connell was 21 years old.

Both family and friends have established a memorial fund in their sons' names to help those North Quincy High School students who best represent the qualities that Dennis and Okie had academically, athletically and socially.

Throughout the years there have been many fundraising events to raise money for the scholarship funds, including annual basketball and golf tournaments. Though both have been successful, scholarship committee members said there was still a void during the fall and saw an opportunity for a new event.

In November 2011, the committee held its first annual DCT & OKIE concert fundraiser. This started with over 300 people going to see local acts in Quincy. The event, now in its fifth year, has grown and another great turnout is expected this year. Touring bands from the Boston area have been added to the entertainment lineup.

For those who cannot attend the event but would like to make a donation, visit the website Rally.org/DCTOKIE.

The event is a way to honor the memories of two young men who were taken far too soon and the committee appreciates any help. Support will go a long way toward the realization of a college degree for a deserving graduate of North Quincy High School.

Dr. Heidi O'Connor Named ICU Medical Director At Beth-Israel Deaconess-Milton

Dr. HEIDI O'CONNOR

Heidi O'Connor, MD, a board-certified critical care, pulmonary and sleep medicine specialist, has been appointed medical director of the Intensive Care Unit (ICU) and chief of Pulmonary and Sleep Medicine at Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton (BID-Milton).

As medical director of the ICU, Dr. O'Connor, along with other critical care specialist physicians, will work closely with primary care physicians, cardiologists and surgeons in caring for critically ill or injured patients. She will also lead the ICU's multidisciplinary care team of nurses, respiratory therapists, pharmacists, social workers and other professionals, as well as direct daily rounding on patients to develop and monitor care plans.

In addition to providing care in the ICU, Dr. O'Connor will also evaluate and treat pulmonary and sleep disorder patients on an outpatient basis in the hospital's Center for Specialty Care.

"We are delighted Dr. O'Connor has joined BID-Milton's Medical Staff," said Ashley Yeats, MD, chief medical officer and vice president of healthcare quality at the hospital. "Employing a critical care specialist-led team approach to care will enable us to integrate best practice care into our ICU and enhance the coordination of patient care with Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center for those critically ill patients who may need the advanced resources of a leading academic medical center."

According to Dr. Yeats, studies have shown that ICUs staffed by critical care specialists have better patient outcomes. Last year, fewer than half of U.S. hospitals' ICUs were staffed by critical care specialists.

Dr. O'Connor is a graduate of the University of Massachusetts Medical School. She completed her medical residency training at Tufts New England Medical Center, and a pulmonary critical care fellowship at Tufts Medical Center.

Outpatient pulmonary and sleep medicine appointments are available with Dr. O'Connor by calling 617-313-1445.

Raising Awareness About Diabetes

A Message From The Quincy Health Department

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

National Diabetes Month is observed every November to draw attention to diabetes and its effects on millions of Americans.

Nearly 30 million children and adults in the United States have diabetes, which breaks down to one in every 11 Americans. Another 86 million Americans have prediabetes, a condition in which blood glucose levels are higher than normal, but are not high enough for a diagnosis of diabetes.

The American Diabetes Association estimates that the total national cost of diagnosed diabetes in the United States is $245 billion.

Diabetes is a disease in which blood glucose levels are above normal. Most of the food we eat is converted into glucose, or sugar, for our bodies to use for energy. The pancreas, an organ that lies near the stomach, makes a hormone called insulin to help glucose get into the cells of our bodies. When you have diabetes, your body either doesn't make enough insulin or can't use its own insulin as effectively as it should. This causes sugar to build up in your blood. Diabetes can cause serious health complications including heart disease, blindness, kidney failure, and lower-extremity amputations. It is the seventh leading cause of death in the United States.

RUTH JONES

Diabetes can present with symptoms such as: frequent urination, excessive thirst, unexplained weight loss, extreme hunger, sudden vision changes, tingling or numbness in hands or feet, feeling very tired much of the time, very dry skin, sores that are slow to heal, more infections than usual. Nausea, vomiting, or stomach pains may accompany some of these symptoms in the abrupt onset Type 1 diabetes. Often, people may experience no symptoms at all so diagnosis may be delayed.

Type 1 diabetes, which was previously called insulin-dependent diabetes mellitus (IDDM) or juvenile-onset diabetes, accounts for approximately 5% of all diagnosed cases of diabetes.

Type 2 diabetes, which was formerly called non-insulin-dependent diabetes mellitus (NIDDM) or adult-onset diabetes, accounts for about 90% to 95% of all diagnosed cases of diabetes.

Gestational diabetes is a type of diabetes that happens only in pregnant women. If not treated, it can cause problems for both mothers and babies. Gestational diabetes develops in 2% to 10% of all pregnancies but usually disappears when a pregnancy is over.

Other specific types of diabetes resulting from specific genetic syndromes, surgery, drugs, malnutrition, infections, and other disorders may account for 1% to 5% of all diagnosed cases of diabetes.

Risk factors for type 2 diabetes include older age, obesity, family history of diabetes, prior history of gestational diabetes, impaired glucose tolerance, physical inactivity, and race/ethnicity. African Americans, Hispanic/Latino Americans, American Indians, and some Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders are at exceptionally high risk for type 2 diabetes.

Risk factors are less specified for type 1 diabetes than for type 2 diabetes, but autoimmune, genetic, and environmental factors are believed to be involved in the development of this type of diabetes.

Gestational diabetes occurs more frequently in African Americans, Hispanic/Latino Americans, American Indians, and those with a family history of diabetes. Obesity is also associated with higher risk. Women who have had gestational diabetes have a 35% to 60% chance of developing diabetes in the next 10–20 years.

If you have diabetes, you devote a great deal of time and effort in keeping it under control. That's beneficial because it can cause numerous complications that can affect nearly every organ in your body. Heart Disease, stroke, kidney disease (Diabetic Nephropathy), nerve damage (Diabetic Neuropathy), eye damage (Diabetic Retinopathy), gastroparesis, erectile dysfunction, skin problems, infections, and dental problems are all issues that can be the result of poorly controlled blood sugars.

Healthy eating, physical activity, and insulin injections are the basic therapies for type 1 diabetes. The amount of insulin taken must be balanced with food intake and daily activities. Blood glucose levels must be closely examined through frequent blood glucose monitoring.

Healthy eating, physical activity, and blood glucose testing are the basic therapies for type 2 diabetes. In addition, some people with type 2 diabetes require oral medication, insulin, or both to control their blood glucose levels. It is extremely important for people with diabetes to take responsibility for their day-to-day care, and keep blood glucose levels from becoming too low or too high. Diabetics should see a health care provider who will monitor their diabetes control and help them learn to manage their diabetes.

In addition, people with diabetes may see endocrinologists, who may specialize in diabetes care; ophthalmologists for eye examinations; podiatrists for routine foot care; and dietitians and diabetes educators who teach the skills necessary for successful daily diabetes management.

Diabetes is a serious disease. If you are experiencing any of the symptoms of diabetes, call your healthcare provider for a screening. If you have already been diagnosed with diabetes, careful management of diabetes can reduce your risk of serious, even life-threatening complications.

Following your diabetes treatment plan takes round-the-clock commitment, but the benefits are unquestionably worth the effort.

Squantum Girl Scouts Pay Tribute To Local Veterans

By: ABIGAIL B. COUGHLIN

Kindness, joy, and thankfulness was spread in front of Squantum Elementary School when the Squantum Girl Scout Troops led by their leaders, Jen Bergin, Christina Feeney, and Trina Ruggiero worked hard for our Veterans to display our thanks.

On Thursday, Nov. 5, the Girl Scout Junior Troop #68301 (Lea Bergin, Abigail Coughlin, Caitlin Feeney, Ella Gates, Ava Knops, Christine Loney, Cara MacDonald, Molly McGovern, Bridget Capone, Maureen O'Brien, Julia Ryan, and Marybeth Smith) and Brownie Troop #66025 (Kaelyn Ayer, Eleanor Bergin, Regina Caraballo, Grace Hottleman, Kate Kennedy, Maeve Kerins, Grace McMenamin, Anna Ruggiero, Maeghan Smith, Delaney Wood, and Emma McGovern) planted 400 flags in front of Squantum Elementary School to honor the Veterans for Veterans Day.

Over the past two months both troops have been learning about veterans and what they can do to help. They learned the history of the song the Star Spangled Banner (also known as the National Anthem), how to fold a flag, and how to thank a veteran in a respectful and kind way.

When you go home today look at a flag and tell a friend or family member what you see. I see 13 original colonies that turned into 50 beautiful states all protected by our brave veterans!

Thank you veterans for your service!

Editor's Note: Abigail Coughlin is a special correspondent for The Quincy Sun and a member of Girl Scout Junior Troop #68301.

President Signs Lynch's Wounded Warriors Federal Leave Act Into Law

President Barack Obama has signed into law Cong. Stephen F. Lynch's Wounded Warriors Federal Leave Act of 2015 into law.

Cong Lynch, who represents Quincy in the U.S. House of Representatives, introduced and successfully pushed the bipartisan legislation through Congress last month with the help of Committee on Oversight and Government Reform Chairman Jason Chaffetz, Ranking Member Elijah E. Cummings, and Senator Jon Tester (D-Mont.).

"I am very pleased that President Obama signed H.R. 313, the Wounded Warriors Federal Leave Act into law. This law will provide medical leave for returning disabled veterans who now work as federal employees, enabling them to receive treatment while transitioning into civilian life," Cong. Lynch said.

"As we approach Veterans Day, Congress has demonstrated the gratitude and deep appreciation for the hardship and sacrifices of our veterans and, in particular our wounded warriors, in service to our country. I thank Chairman Chaffetz and Ranking Member Cummings as well as Senator Tester for their collaboration on this bipartisan effort to support our wounded warriors," Lynch added.

H.R. 313, the Wounded Warriors Federal Leave Act of 2015, provides federal employees, who are also disabled veterans, with 104 hours of "Wounded Warrior leave" during their first year in the federal workforce so that they may seek medical treatment for their service-connected disabilities without being forced to take unpaid leave or forego their appointments altogether.

The Wounded Warriors Federal Leave Act of 2015 passed the House of Representatives unanimously Sept. 28 and passed the Senate unanimously Oct. 26, 2015.

Sen. Tester and Sen. Jerry Moran (R-Kan.) introduced S. 242, the Senate companion bill, on Jan. 22. Cong. Lynch first introduced the legislation in the 113th Congress.

Ian Cain's passion for politics and government began when he was a student at the Wollaston Elementary School and it continued with him through college and then business.

Now, Cain is preparing to serve on the City Council as the representative for Ward 3.

Cain, 33, defeated Karl Roos on Nov. 3 in the race to replace longtime Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, who earlier this year announced he would not seek an eighth term. Cain received 1,968 votes (55.96 percent) to Roos's 1,544 votes (43.90 percent) on Nov. 3. Cain also topped the field in the Sept. 24 preliminary election with 1,099 votes, finishing ahead of Roos (858) and Sandra Verhault (696).

"I'd always had an interest in politics and government and public service since I was in elementary school," Cain said in an interview the day after the election. "I carried that through to when I studied political science at Boston College. I worked for Stephen Lynch, got a job at the State House when he was a state senator and then we ran his first campaign for Congress and I got to work in his office there during the rest of college.

"For years I had this thought in the back of my mind that never went away – how am I going to become more involved in community, because I had taken part in many of the communities I had been involved in, whether it's my undergrad or working for the church when I was younger and lived in Quincy or volunteering at CCD, etc. But I had to explain why I wanted to do it. So I took all the time to do that because after college I went into finance and I worked for a commercial real estate firm and I ended up working for a private equity firm that was focused on developing power plants in the Middle East, North Africa and East Asia. After that experience I went to business school and after business school that thought never left. So I came back to Quincy and started to re-explore."

After learning that Coughlin would not seek another term on the council, Cain decided to run because it "would be a good place to learn from the ground up."

"City politics and the ward seat are the bread and butter. It's the place where you get to understand all the constituent issues that matter so personally to them, because it has to do with their homes and their property and the value therein," Cain said. "The open seat was a good chance and I thought if I was going to try this was the best time to do it."

Cain, who works for a software and technology company in Cambridge, announced he would run for the seat in May. He spent the next seven months campaigning, meeting residents throughout the ward, which stretches from Montclair to Hospital Hill.

"It was busy. It was eye opening because when you're having conversations with folks at the doors people don't refrain from sharing their opinions, which is great. That's the position you want to be in. You want to be able to become that trusted representative for your neighbors and for the constituents," Cain said.

"I realized how hard people compete for these positions too because you're sacrificing time. I was commuting back and forth from Cambridge during the day and then coming home at night knocking on doors and then spending Saturdays and Sundays door knocking for about eight hours. So it's a lot of time. It's a lot of money; you have to raise money too, so that was interesting.

"I give everyone a lot of credit who puts themselves out there because it takes a lot of guts, too, to put yourself out as a candidate because you're exposing yourself and your family to ridicule and comment."

Cain's father, John, previously ran for the Ward 3 seat unsuccessfully in 1999, 2001, 2003 and 2011.

"I've got to give it to my dad. My dad is a great man. He put his heart into it. He really wanted it when he first went out there and kept on going at it," Ian Cain said.

"It was very rewarding to hear people when I was knocking on doors this time around to hear how well received he was. It wasn't so much a personal thing why people didn't want to elect him or vote for him, it was that Kevin Coughlin did a good job so there was no reason to vote against Kevin."

He called it bittersweet to win the seat his father had sought before.

"It's bittersweet, let's put it that way, because I know that my dad had tried," Cain said. "This was something that I had always independently wanted to pursue and it just so happened that this is the seat that was open and he had gone for that before. It was a little coincidental."

Cain made history Nov. 3 becoming the first African-American to win a City Council seat in Quincy's history. Cain called that significant milestone.

"It's a significant milestone. There are three minorities that were elected to the City Council this time around all in one swoop when it had been predominantly a white member body," he said, referring to at-large winners Noel DiBona and Nina Liang, who are both of Asian descent.

"Obviously that's speaks to dynamics have changed and sort of progression in Quincy. It's sort of a perception or a mentality that this is something that people aren't so close minded to if they might have been in the past."

One area Cain plans to focus on is capital improvement, particularly streets and sidewalks.

"That was definitely the number one issue that folks talked about at the door. I think there is a lot of room for improvement in terms of communicating how and when streets will be redeveloped because I think currently – because I think whatever the system might be, because it's not that clear – streets are kind of done in a not so orderly fashion," Cain said.

"I would of course have to work with the mayoral administration to help develop what could be a capital improvement plan where we could hopefully assign rating to different streets but then also on the other side publicize the ratings of

'WE SHOULD ALWAYS be grateful to those men and women who have fought to protect this flag and protect this nation,' said Mayor Thomas Koch at Sunday's Veterans Day observance at the Flags for Veterans Island. The island is decorated with some 392 flags - each representing a veteran who served or is still serving in the U.S. armed forces.

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

In 1921, the USA first laid to rest an 'unknown' American soldier, following the example of both France and England, who had buried an 'unknown soldier' in a place of honor at the end of World War I. This Arlington site became known as the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, now called the Tomb of the Unknowns.

It wasn't until 1926 that Congress passed a resolution declaring Nov.11th as Armistice Day, and not until 1938, under the administration of FDR, that it became a national holiday, recognizing the war-ending truce made at the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month.

Recognition of the deceased and offering of thanks to the living who have served their country is now more commonly known as Veterans Day.

On Sunday, the Sons of the American Legion, Morrisette Post Squadron 294 hosted a ceremony to honor veterans at the Flags for Veterans Island, Fort Square, School and Pleasant Streets, where the impressive display of flags has grown to 392.

In his opening remarks, Commander Paul Moody said, "Veterans Day is a day to honor all veterans. The flags on this island represent those who have served, those who are still serving and those who have paid the ultimate sacrifice to our country. Always remember, if there were no veterans, there would be no America. Freedom is not free."

The day's events marked the 5th anniversary of the island and the 9th remembrance ceremony. In acknowledging the large crowd of attendees, Mayor Koch said, "What makes this event is the names that are associated with each of these flags and their position here on this island.... for the labor of love by Paul [Moody] and the Sons of the Morrisette Post, American Legion, thank you for what you do.

"There is so much that each of us loves about this flag, this is the symbol that reminds us that we are all in this together. This binds us all together...whatever our faith background--black, white, Spanish, Asian, German-American [gesturing to himself], this is the symbol that reminds us we are all Americans, and we should always be grateful to those men and women who have fought to protect this flag and protect this nation so that we can live as we do today.

"God Bless our servicemen and women protecting this nation all across the world," the mayor added.

Recently re-elected Ward 5 councillor Kirsten Hughes, chairperson of the City Council's Veterans Committee, acknowledged the support of many elected officials to the veterans.

"I have had the opportunity to go across the state, and no one does as much for their veterans as we do in Quincy...that's our citizens, that's our government and of course our wonderful veterans who are so humble to each other."

Present were Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall, Brian Palmucci from Ward 4, newly elected at-Large Councillor and School Committee member Noel DiBona, (also a Junior Vice-Commander and the event's cameraman), School Committe member Dave McCarthy and representing the city's State House delegration Rep. Bruce Ayers, Rep. Tackey Chan and Sen. John Keenan.

In his remarks, John (Jake) Comer of Quincy, Past American Legion National Commander said, "I've said this before...it's people like this that come together and keep our flag free...although the Supreme Court has decided that our flag can be desecrated, burned, destroyed, it's people like Paul Moody and all the members who come here each year and tell them 'No, that's not gonna happen.'"

In expressing how honored he was to be part of the day's proactive ceremony,

ACIDIC DRINKS AND ENAMEL EROSION

The first sign you might have that the enamel on your teeth is beginning to erode is the pain felt after drinking or eating a hot or cold liquid or food. This pain is due to exposure of the sensitive "dentin" layer that makes up the majority of the tooth beneath the outer layer of enamel. According to a recent study of 3,773 people, evidence of dental erosion was found in 79 percent of the study's participants. Further analysis of the participants' dietary habits showed that those with moderate and severe dental erosion also consumed more fruit juices and soft drinks than the others. The chief culprit is the high acid content of these drinks, which etches tooth enamel.

Are you experiencing discomfort when exposing your teeth to cold or hot? You can expect us to give you gentle, comforting care using the most up-to-date techniques and equipment. Veterans Day Parade, Ceremonies Wednesday

James Laskey – Past National Commander U.S. Marine Corps League - Keynote Speaker

By SCOTT JACKSON

James Laskey, a past national commander of the United States Marine Corps League, was the guest speaker for Quincy's Veterans Day observance Wednesday.

The city's observance of Veterans Day was set to begin at 10:30 a.m. with a parade starting at the intersection of Quincy Avenue and Scammell Street and running north along Hancock Street until the Adams Academy.

The observance was scheduled to be held (weather permitting) at the Doughboy Statue on the grounds of the Adams Academy at 8 Adams St. Mayor Thomas Koch; City Council President Joseph Finn; Quincy Veterans' Council Commander Richard Keane; and George Nicholson, the parade chairman and Quincy's director of veterans services, also addressed the crowd. The Rev. John Swanson will deliver the invocation and benediction, Robert Lafleur will sound "Taps," and Moe Morad will sing the national anthem.

In the event of inclement weather, the observance will held in the Quincy High School gymnasium at 52 Coddington St. beginning at 11 a.m. Access would be through the Russell Street entrance in that case. Call the veterans services department at 617-376-1194.

Laskey began his career in the U.S. Marine Corps in June 1960. After completing basic training, his first assignment was sea duty aboard the USS Lake Champlain during the recovery operations for Commander Alan Shepherd's first space flight. He later served aboard the USS Essex during the Cuban missile blockade.

During the Vietnam War, Laskey served as a platoon sergeant for Headquarters Company, 7th Marines, at Chu Lai. In 1967, he was assigned to recruiting duties and would ultimately end that tour as the non-commissioned officer-in-charge of the Marine Corps recruiting station in Quincy. He would later serve in various capacities in military law enforcement for the Marine Corps.

Laskey retired in 1980, after 20 years of service, as the first sergeant of the Marine Corps Officers Candidate School in Quantico, Virginia.

Laskey became a member of the U.S. Marine Corps League in 1968 with Quincy's William R. Caddy Detachment and would go on to hold every office in that detachment. He then moved on to serve two terms as the Department of Massachusetts, Marine Corps League, commandant, followed by two terms as national-vice commandant for the Marine Corps League's New England Division. In 2000, he was named Massachusetts Department Marine of the Year. In 2009, he was named New England Marine of the Year.

Ultimately, Laskey would serve through the national junior and then senior vice-commandant chairs. This culminated in him serving as national commandant of the Marine Corps League from 2008 through 2010.

Laskey served for eight years as a director and vice-president of the board of the Marine Corps League Foundation. He currently serves as a member of the Past National Commandants Council. He continues to serve on many other national committees and was recently named to the board of directors of the Young Marine Program. Laskey is the recipient of many Marine Corps League awards.

His military awards include: Navy Commendation Medal; Navy Achievement Medal; Vietnam Service Medal; Vietnam Cross of Gallantry Medal; Combat Action Ribbon; Good Conduct Medal with Silver Star; and the Marine Corps Competitive Marksmanship Badges for both rifle and pistol, as well as a number of other campaign and service awards.

Retaining membership in the Marine Corps League, the Marine Corps Association, the VFW, the DAV, the American Legion and the Vietnam Veterans of America, Laskey remains and continues to serve as an outstanding and outspoken advocate for veterans and their families.

Organizations marching in the parade include the:

JAMES LASKEY

Also taking part in the parade were the Quincy Police and Fire Honor Guards; Navy Operational Support Center Color Guard; Norfolk County Sheriff Department Honor Guard; the combined Quincy/North Quincy High School band; and city, state, and county officials.

Keane will serve as parade marshal. Robert Lewis, senior vice commander of the Quincy Veterans' Council, is aide to the commander. George Bouchard, past commander of the QVC, is co-chairman of the parade. Leo Reardon, past QVC commander, is officer of the day. Sergeant-at-arms is Leo Reardon, past commander of the DAV Chapter 79.

Real Estate Sales Volume Up; Foreclosures Notices Also Rise

Latest real estate figures for Norfolk County still shows a favorable real estate market, but one with concerns nevertheless, according to a report released by Register of Deeds William O'Donnell.

"Overall real estate activity for October 2015 continued to be strong with the number of deeds being recorded increasing 6 percent, with 1,587 being transacted as compared to 1,502 in October 2014. The total volume of commercial and residential sales also increased by 6 percent," O'Donnell noted.

"However, what we need to watch closely though is the average sale price of commercial and residential property which for October was $596,261, a 6 percent reduction compared to the October 2014 figure. Last August, we saw a 2 percent reduction in the average sale price so we need to figure out whether this is a market aberration or not," O'Donnell said.

The Register's report shows the mortgage market continues to be red hot in Norfolk County. The number of mortgages recorded for the month of October was 2,541, an 11 percent increase from the previous year. Dollar wise, total mortgage borrowing increased by a whopping 182 percent to $3.4 billion. This number, however, was greatly impacted by an $811 million mortgage taken out against a property in Braintree and Quincy.

Another piece of good news, O'Donnell pointed out, was a 53 percent reduction in the number of foreclosure deeds recorded, with only 14 filings taking place in October as compared to 30 in October 2014. However, that news was tempered by an increase in the number of Notice to Foreclose Mortgages recorded.

A total of 101 Notice to Foreclose Mortgages were recorded last month versus 71 in October 2014.

"Notice to Foreclose Mortgage is the first step in the foreclosure process," O'Donnell said. "This increase is a clear indication that the economic expansion we have seen in eastern Massachusetts has not lifted all boats. Some of our neighbors are still hurting," he said.

The Registry of Deeds office has partnered with Quincy Community Action Programs at (617) 479-8181 x-376 and Neighbor Works Southern Mass at (508) 598-0950.

"This will ensure homeowners who have received a Notice to Foreclose Mortgage from a lender are getting the help they need," O'Donnell said. "Another option for homeowners is to call the Massachusetts Attorney General's HomeCorps program at (617) 573-5333."

On another consumer front, Homestead recordings increased 9 percent in October compared to one year ago. Homestead recordings provide limited protection against the forced sale of an individual's primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000.

"Norfolk County continues to experience a thriving real estate market," O'Donnell said. "However, there are still some questions to grapple with: Will the average real estate price continue to fall slightly or has the market correction concluded? Will low inventory adversely impact the market? Will a rumored Federal Reserve rate increase cause a slowdown? As a newscaster might say, stay tuned for further details."

Downtown Roadwork Will Continue Into December

Work on the transportation improvement project began on the portion of Hancock Street north of the church and then moved to the intersection of Hancock, Washington and Temple Streets.

In recent weeks, work shifted to the portion of Hancock Street south of the church between Temple and Granite Streets. That portion of the road was repaved in late October and contractor A. R. Belli is now widening the sidewalk on the eastern (even number) side of the road from 15 feet to 33 feet. That work will conclude by Thanksgiving, Russo said, and new planters and lights will be installed in the widened sidewalk by then.

Once the portion of Hancock Street closes, traffic will flow in two directions on Temple Street and Washington Street around the church.

One lane of traffic will travel northbound on Hancock Street between Maple Street and a new raised crosswalk at the corner where Temple and Hancock Streets meet; that lane will split into two on Temple Street towards Washington Street.

One lane of traffic will flow in the opposite direction southbound on Temple Street from Washington Street to the new raised crosswalk. That will be split into three lanes approaching the intersection with Granite Street.

Work remains to be done in front of the Granite Trust Building at 1400 Hancock Street and at the intersection of Granite and Hancock Streets. Sidewalks in those areas will also be extended with new planters and streetlights. The improvements will extend down Hancock Street adjacent to the new West of Chestnut development.

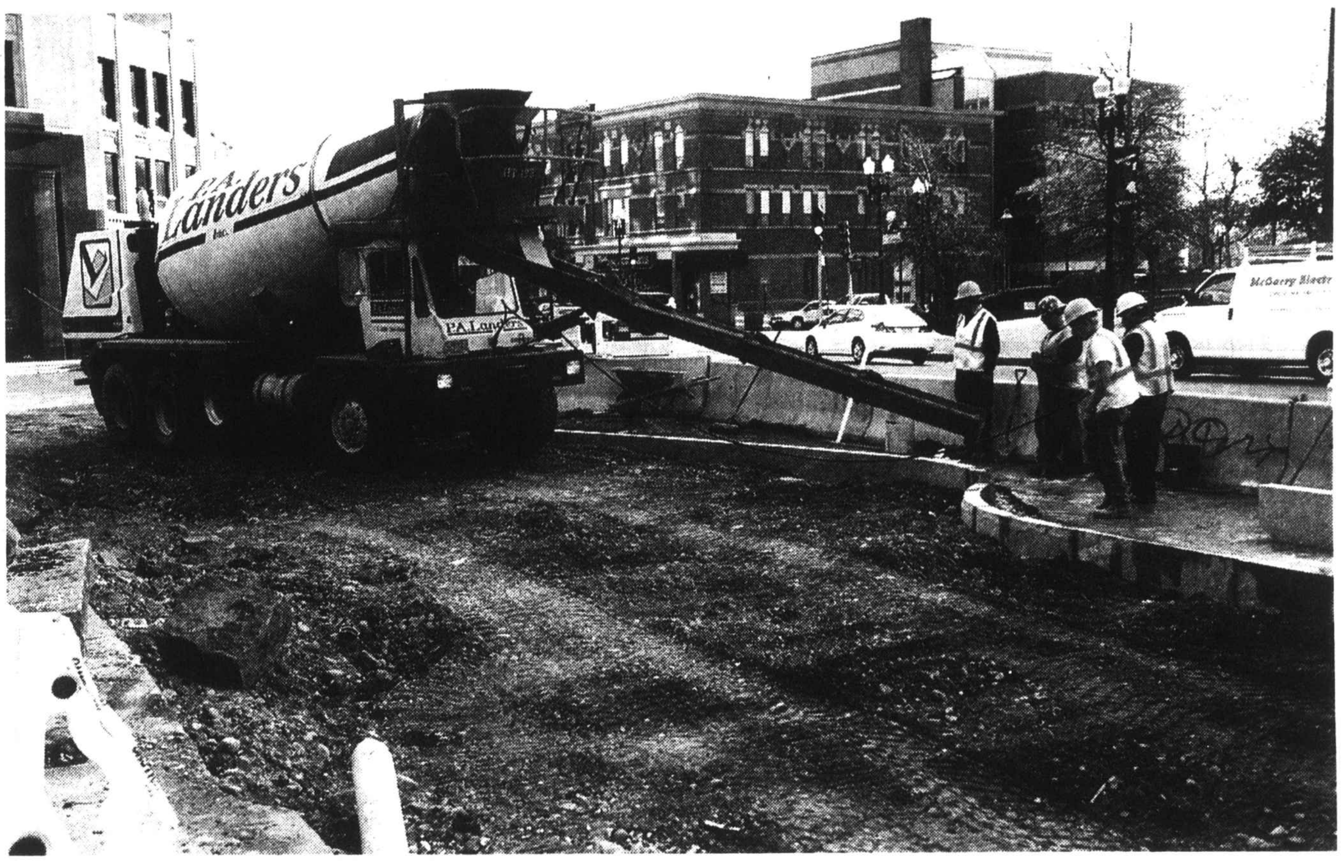
The plan is to continue with roadwork as long as weather permits before stopping in December then start up again in early spring.

"As long as the weather holds up, they'll keep going. If the weather is good they'll probably keep working through December just before Christmas," Russo said. "Then they'll be back in March."

Overall, Russo said the work has gone well considering the age of the infrastructure being replaced.

Utility work is also ongoing on Chestnut Street, Russo noted. The city is in the process of installing larger drain lines there to support the West of Chestnut project and future developments in Quincy Center.

Businesses in the vicinity of the infrastructure work being undertaken in Quincy Center receive weekly emails from Russo on the project. The city has also posted that information on its website, quincyma.gov.



WORKERS began pouring concrete for widened sidewalks in the 1300 block of Hancock Street on Nov. 6. The sidewalks on the even-numbered side of the road between Maple and Temple Streets are being extended out to 33 feet from 15 feet. A bump in will provide four or five parking spaces. There will be one lane of traffic northbound on Hancock Street from Maple Street and Temple Street. Southbound traffic on Hancock Street from Temple Street will widen to three lanes near Granite Street.

Ask Barbara Graceffa:
Secretary Of The Interior

BARBARA GRACEFFA

Others call me a penny pincher but I'm a proud "smart shopper." Are certain times of the year better to purchase items for my home? Vera

Yes, my bargain-hunting kindred spirit! In March 2013, HGTV Magazine published an article on just this topic and I share it with my students each semester.

In January, you'll find sales on rugs, linens, and storage supplies. In March and September, buy china, dinnerware, and kitchenware, but hold off until April, May, November, or December for good deals on cookware. When it comes to new furniture, shop sales in January and July, while October is the month to purchase outdoor furniture on clearance. If you need a new mattress, shop the summer holiday weekends of Memorial Day, Independence Day, and Labor Day. You'll find savings in April and May on vacuums and May for refrigerators.

HGTV Magazine recommends some of my favorite shopping venues, too: TJ Maxx, HomeGoods, IKEA, Target, Pier One, World Market (shop online for this one; I love their store in San Francisco!), and thrift or consignment stores; Etsy and other craft vendors for quilts, art, and home accessories; and Craig's List and Freecycle.com for free or bargain-priced used items.

Where do you get your inspiration? Brady

Just about everywhere. I am constantly looking at décor in front of me: on HGTV shows, of course, but on all TV shows, I find my mind wondering off the story line to see the room décor in the background. I recently returned from vacation and found inspiration in hotel settings, restaurants, and store displays. I cannot forget online sources as I am addicted to Pinterest! You can always find new ideas in books, magazines, furniture stores, and decorating columns and classes, too.

I also have an arts and crafts background, so I often see things with a different eye. I have a knack for transforming objects into furniture, art, or accessories. I recently used a guitar as an art canvas and gifted it to a guitar-playing friend. It's not only the uniqueness of the décor items but also the stories behind the pieces that are fun to share … and inspire me to look for my next project!

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Sunday, November 1, 2015, at approximately 6:10 p.m., Officer Jeffrey Bossart met with a 36 year old female victim of domestic violence in the lobby of the Quincy Police Station. She stated that her 35 year old boyfriend assaulted her this morning. The victim said that she is Cape Verdean and has been vacationing in the United States for the past month.

She stated that she and her boyfriend of about one year barely talked to each other this past week and tension was high. When she awoke this morning, she said good morning to her boyfriend while both were still in bed. He did not answer her and after a few minutes of silence, the victim became upset and started yelling at her boyfriend that if he did not want her here she would return to Cape Verde. The victim added that she originally planned on leaving on November 2nd but her boyfriend did not want her to leave, so she pushed her flight back until November 30th. Her boyfriend angrily said, "Do you think because we're in the U.S. I won't beat you?" The victim replied, "Yes" and the boyfriend responded, "I know how to beat you and not leave a mark."

Suddenly the boyfriend sat up in bed and punched her in the left side of the face. The victim tried to defend herself but her boyfriend continued to hit her and then wrapped his arm around her neck, cutting off her ability to breathe. The victim said she struggled and they both fell off the bed onto the floor. The boyfriend then got on top of the victim's chest with both knees and pushed her down as he punched her again. The boyfriend then yelled out, "I'll kill you. I'll take a knife and cut you up and then bury your pieces in the basement." He then got off the victim and warned her, "If you go to the police, I'll kill you. If you make a police report and I get sent back to Cape Verde, then I will kill you back there."

He then left the room and moments later exited the house. Officer Bossart asked the victim if her boyfriend hit her in the past and she confirmed that she was beaten by him last April. Once the boyfriend left, the boyfriend's sister came into the room and asked what happened. After telling her, the sister retorted, "If there's no blood or marks they can't do anything about it." The victim called her cousin to pick her up.

Upon seeing the physical damage, the cousin brought her to Boston Medical Center for her injuries. The victim showed Officer Bossart her discharge papers which indicated that she suffered "Blunt Trauma." She was still wearing her BMC medical ID bracelet on her wrist. The Officer provided the victim with Abuse Law Materials and explained the process, including obtaining an Emergency 209A Restraining Order to her. The victim said that she would stay at her cousins because she was afraid to return to where her boyfriend was and secondly, because he did not know where the cousin lived. The victim declared that she did not want an emergency restraining order tonight but would go to the Quincy District Courthouse the next day to obtain a restraining order.

At approximately 7:25 p.m., Officers Bossart and Dabilis arrived at the boyfriend's address and located him. Although he did not speak English, his sister interpreted for him. He said that there was a disagreement but it never became physical. He stated that they were arguing about not talking to each other and her threats to return to Cape Verde. It then turned to jealously because the victim claimed that he was conversing with his ex-girlfriend, who is the mother of his child back in Cape Verde. The boyfriend was told that he was under arrest and placed in handcuffs.

Prior to being transported, his sister came out and said that she heard the argument but did not see anything. In defense of her brother, she said that the victim was saying that because they are in the United States, the Police will listen to women and she will have her boyfriend arrested. She added that the victim said that she was threatening to make up a story to get him arrested because she was jealous that he was still talking to his ex-girlfriend. The sister added that the victim threatened to beat herself up and say the injuries were from her boyfriend. She said that she did not observe any signs that the argument this morning was physical.

Based on the account of the victim and the medical reports, the suspect, a 35 year old Quincy resident, was charged with the following: Assault and Battery on a Family/Household Member, Strangulation/Suffocation, Intimidation of a Witness and Threats to Commit a Crime. Nice Work!

SCAM: FREE PHONES FOR VETERANS? The offer may be made at a veteran's hospital or at the local train station. It may come from people in a booth or someone who walks up to you with a clipboard. The offer is for free phones and cell service for veterans, all thanks to a government program. "Free" might end up costing you a lot of money. The FTC reports that this can be a scam. Months after signing up, the veteran can get notices saying they need to provide personal information and documents to prove they meet the income requirements — something the people pitching the program never mentioned. Many veterans find that their incomes are too high to qualify for the program, and face losing service or paying for something they thought would be free.

Here are the facts: there is a government program called Lifeline that offers free or discounted phone service. It's supported by the Universal Service Fund, which is a fund all telephone companies and other telecommunications providers pay into (a cost you might see passed on to you in the form of a "Universal Service" line charge on your phone bill). This program is based on income, not whether you're a veteran. If you don't meet the income requirements, you don't qualify. Don't get fooled by this offer! To learn more about the Lifeline program, check out the FCC's Lifeline: Affordable Telephone Service for Income-Eligible Subscribers. To determine if you are eligible for this program, go to lifelinesupport.org and use the pre-screening tool from the Universal Service Administrative Company (USAC) to see if you might qualify for a free phone. The site also lets you search for Lifeline providers in your state. Even if you don't qualify, try checking with your phone service provider to see if they offer any discounts for veterans. Quincy Catholic Academy Candy Drive Supports Cape Cod Cares For Troops

Quincy Catholic Academy (QCA) recently sponsored a candy drive where students and families donated Halloween candy for Cape Cod Cares for Our Troops Organization.

Spearheaded by QCA's Fifth Grader Kate Billard, many bags of candy were brought in daily by students and their families. Students also made thank-you cards for soldiers to be delivered with the candy in honor of Veterans Day.

"A huge thank you to Kate and her family for once again organizing this candy drive," said Principal Cathy Cameron said. "Kate has been running this drive for the past few years, and we are so proud of her. The handmade cards by our students are truly heartwarming. It is a wonderful way to show our soldiers we appreciate them."

Based in Brewster, Cape Cod Cares for Our Troops is a non-profit organization started in 2005 by 12-year-old Dylan DeSilva. Dylan wanted to find a way to honor our troops for their service, dedication and sacrifices to our country.

With the help of his family and friends he sends care packages to our Troops in Iraq and Afghanistan on a weekly basis. At the request of our Troops, Dylan also sends items to schools, orphanages, medical and dental clinics in both Iraq and Afghanistan.

Established in 2010, Quincy Catholic Academy (QCA) located in Quincy, Massachusetts is a Roman Catholic School enrolling students in Pre-Kindergarten (starting at age 3) through Grade Eight.

Salvation Army Seeking Volunteer Bell Ringers

The Salvation Army is getting ready to kick off its annual Red Kettle Campaign, and their looking for volunteer bell ringers.

The Red Kettle Campaign is one of the biggest fundraisers for The Salvation Army and it is set to start on Nov. 23rd in the Quincy, Braintree, and Weymouth area.

The majority of shifts start at 10 a.m. and go through 6 p.m. There are also some evening shifts.

There are 16 locations throughout the area, times 8 hours a day, that's over 4,000 hours that is needed to be covered by bell ringers.

The money raised at the Red Kettles each year is critical in funding The Salvation Army emergency assistance programs year round.

It takes a lot of community support to help cover over 4,000 hours of Bell Ringing. Many groups such as churches, businesses, and service clubs as well as individual volunteers have helped to cover some of those 4,000 hours and many more volunteers and groups are still needed.

"Giving of your time to volunteer to ring a bell at one of our kettle locations is a great way to connect and give back to our community" said Captain Timothy Ross.

Volunteers of all ages and groups are welcome to assist with the program and can contact Captain Timothy Ross at The Salvation Army office at 617-472-2345 or via email at Timothy.Ross@use.salvationarmy.org to sign up.

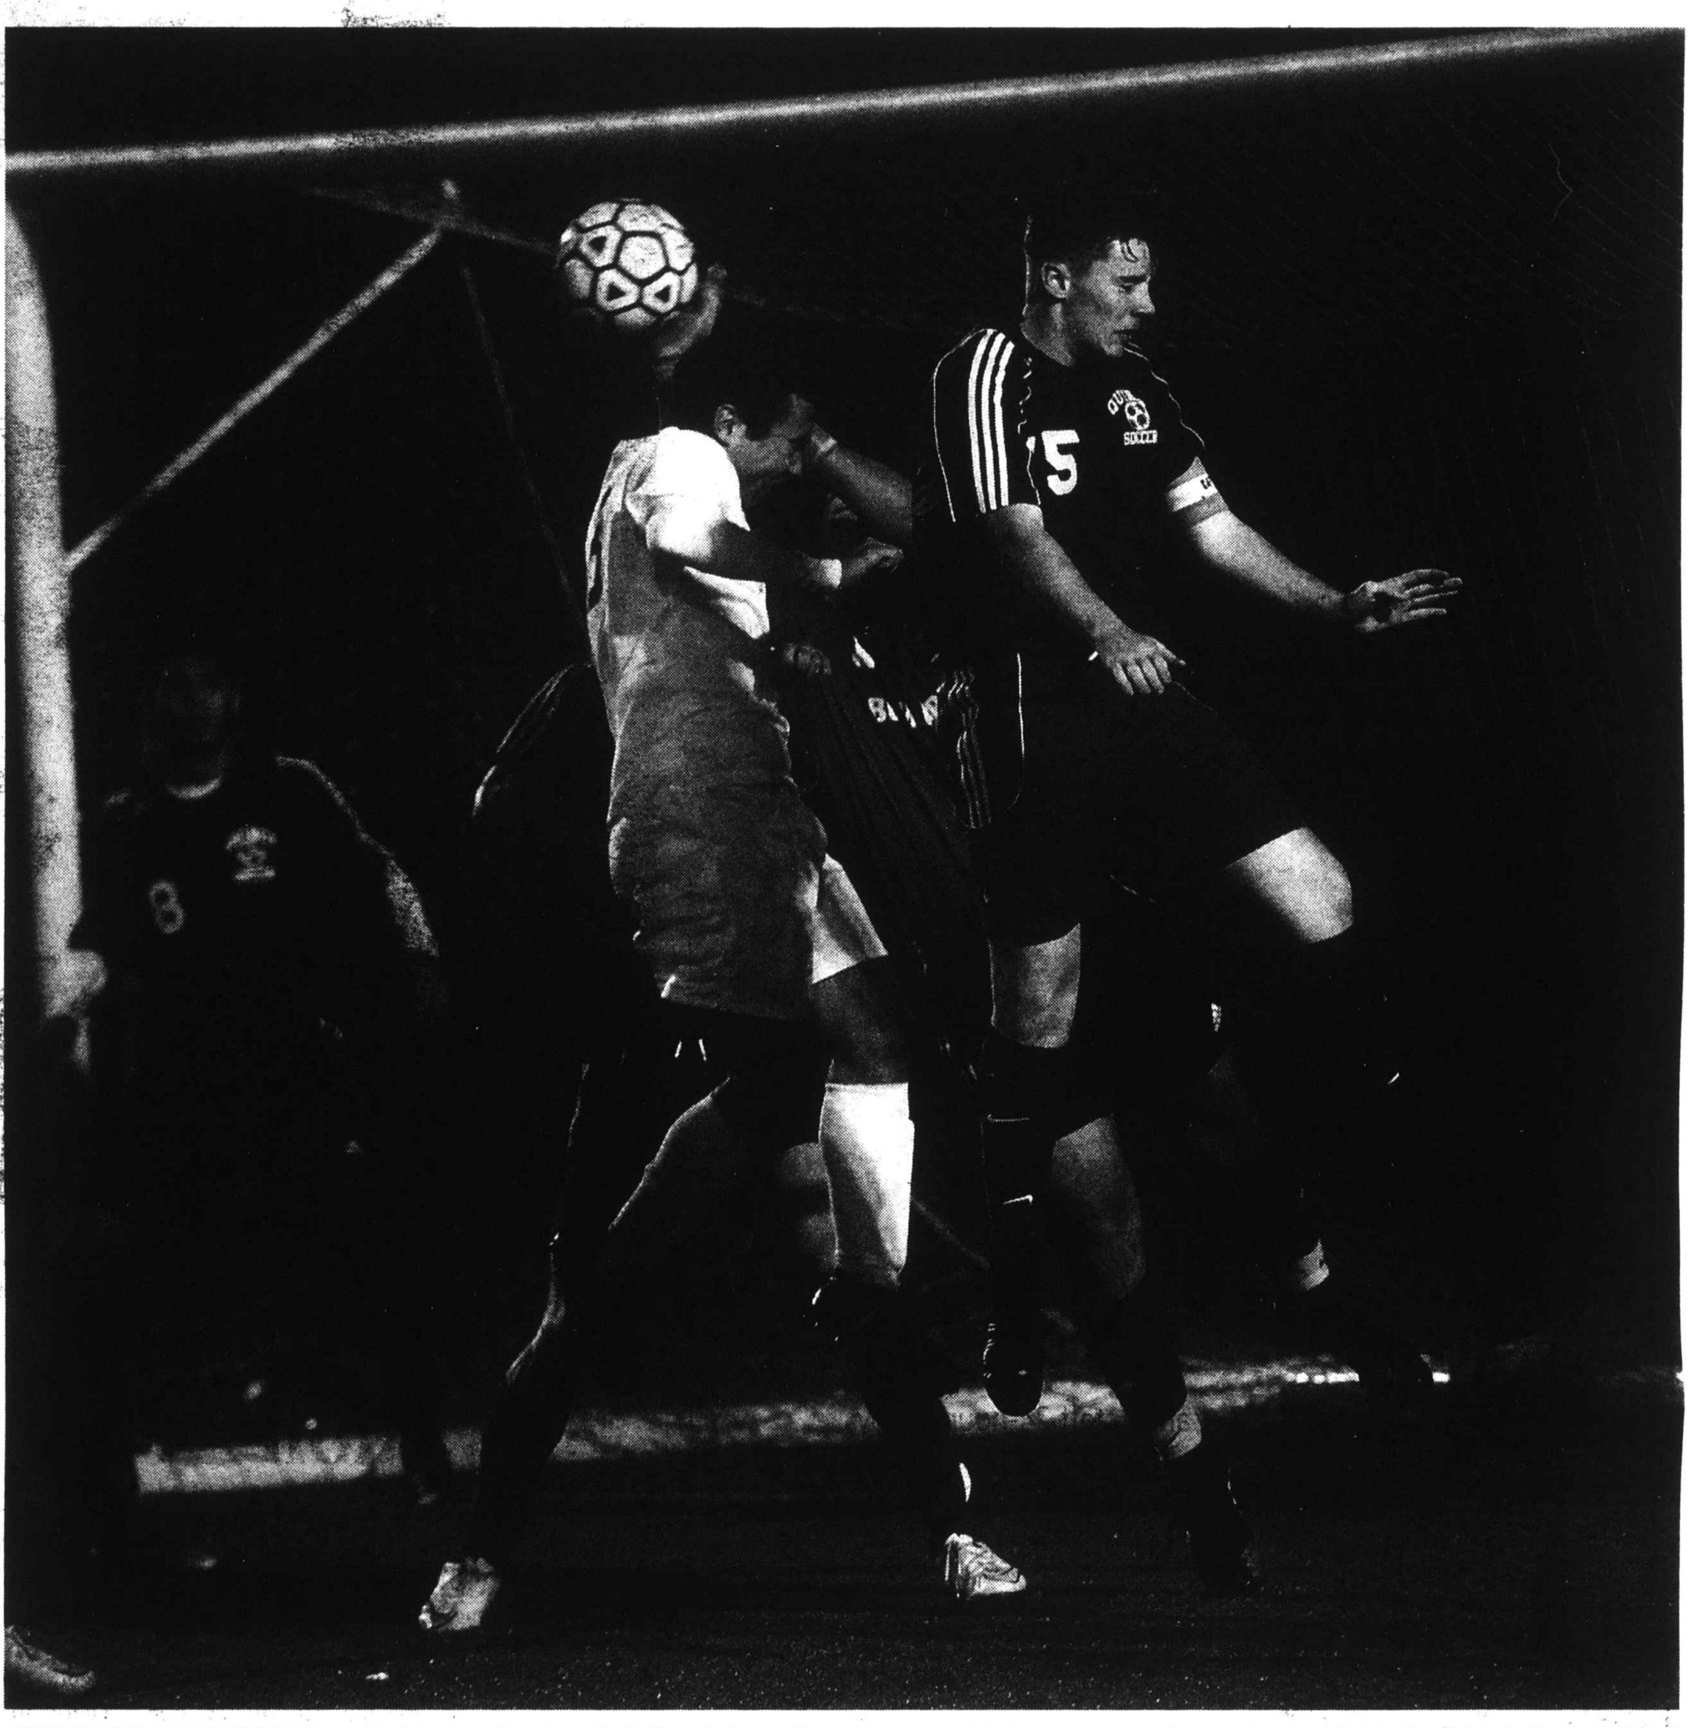
Quincy Bows To Braintree But Reach Season Goal

By JOE REARDON



QUINCY GOALKEEPER Robert Smith gets a hand on the ball to deflect a Braintree corner kick as teammate Connor Porter (right) also defends the Presidents' net. The Wamps defeated Quincy 5-1 in the first round of the MIAA Division 1 South Sectional tournament last Thursday night on Braintree's home field.

Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Bosworth

In hindsight where everyone is an expert, there were at least a couple of scenarios during the regular season that possibly could have changed the face of the Div. 1 South tournament pairings, making it possible for Quincy to avoid Braintree altogether in the playoffs. A couple of calls that went the Presidents' way or some blown calls altogether surely would have made for a different outcome.

The tournament pairings are what they are, however, and Quincy went directly into the belly of the beast last Thursday night against the No. 3 seeded Wamps and were thoroughly manhandled by a deeper, faster club, 5-1 on Braintree's home field. The No. 14 seeded Presidents finished up a very productive season at 9-9-1 while Braintree improved to 15-2-4.

Despite the lopsided loss to a well disciplined Braintree team, Quincy's autumn was a success all around.

Mark Spendlove's squad came into the season with the goal of making it to the tournament so the Presidents can't be too disappointed with a loss against the Braintree juggernaut. "We knew they were a power house," shrugged Spendlove. "They're strong and physical. They're a quality outfit. Sometimes in life you come up against someone who is bigger and better. Getting here (tournament) was an achievement."

Quincy did have its chances and managed to put a modest amount of pressure on Braintree goalkeeper Ben Burke. Derek Andrade broke in early only to have his shot scooped up by Burke and Paulo Soares' free kick with 28:07 left in the half was turned away by the Wamps' standout keeper. Soares had a strong game up top for the Presidents along with Hashim Hamdi who went right at the Braintree defenders.

Stefan Jameson gave the Wamps a 1-0 lead with 22:05 to go in the half when he picked up a loose ball off a corner and stuffed it past Quincy goalkeeper Robert Smith in a scramble in front of the net.

RUNNING OUT OF SPACE

Nearly half of Americans aged 60 years and older suffer from "spinal stenosis." This narrowing of the spaces between the spine's vertebrae is a common cause of back pain. As the bones of the spinal column undergo degenerative changes (such as osteoarthritis), bony overgrowths appear, ligaments harden, discs shrink and distort, and joints break down. As a consequence of these changes, the canals in the spine, through which the spinal cord runs and from which the nerves exit, narrow. When stenosis occurs in the lower (lumbar) spine, cramping may be felt in the legs and weakness in the extremities is possible. To relieve pressure on compressed nerves, chiropractic treatment may focus on aligning misplaced vertebrae and restoring joint integrity.

Our goal is to markedly improve your life. Pain relief is usually the first step. Restoring your human potential and optimizing your health are next. How long has it been since you were pain free? At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we can diagnose your type of ache and treat its underlying causes. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans.

P.S. Spinal stenosis may be caused by herniated discs, which may bulge into the spinal canal, thereby narrowing it.

No matter when or where this ended, it would be difficult. No matter the opponent, the tournament round, or the setting, it would not be easy to walk away from this team, this group of friends.

A tournament loss for a senior team always carries a sense of finality. It is not merely the end of a season, it is the end of a fine time together. For a club as good and as close as North Quincy's girls soccer team, the farewell is especially painful.

Katie Summers had a goal and two assists and No. 7 seed Newton South opened up a close game with a pair of second half goals to end North's season with a 3-0 victory in the first round of the Division 1 South Sectionals at Newton last week.

"There were a lot tears when it was over. These kids love each other," said coach Paul Bregoli of his No. 10 seeded team of 11 seniors who went 12-5-4 on the season. "They left everything out on the field. It was certainly not for a lack of effort. We just ran into a team that was better than us on the night we played."

Newton South used its team speed to create and capitalize on chances against North who had given just six goals in 19 of its 20 games this season. The Lions scored when a North clearing shot deflected off a referee and remained in the scoring area in the first half. South scored 3:30 into the second half and then added a late goal for the 3-0 final.

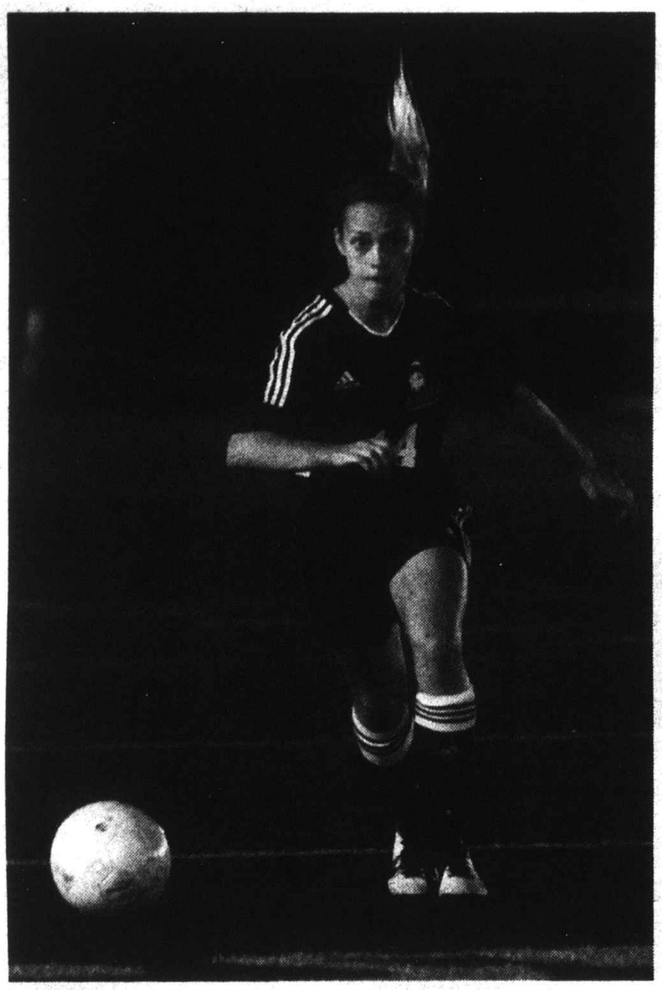
North had its opportunities. Mandy Hazelton boomed a corner and a direct kick in the first half which just missed connecting for scoring chances. In the second half, Newton South goalie Syd Green went airborne to stop a drive from Annie Doherty off another Hazelton corner.

On the ensuing corner, Hazelton put another beauty in front. Doherty went high for the deflection, but her shot hit directly off the post and bounced away from the goal.

"We ran into a track team. Newton South could really run and they took advantage of it. We had good chances, but they are an excellent team," said Bregoli.

This senior group qualified for the tournament four times and won 45 games in its time at North. However, long after the numbers have faded away, their closeness and their character will be remembered. They were a special group, the perfect companions for Bregoli's 200th career win this season as a head coach.

"I've had three or four groups in 21 years that have set themselves apart, and this was one of them," said Bregoli.



NORTH QUINCY girls soccer bowed to Newton South 3-0 in the first round of the Div. 1 South Sectional tournament Nov. 5. Here Red Raiders midfielder Kara Carchedi starts the attack up midfield in the second half.

It is worth having a look at each of them.

Hailey Houlihan: She was North's hottest scorer down the stretch, scoring seven goals in her last 12 games. She made a great run to any open patch in the scoring area. She shot without much good fortune all season, or her scoring total would have been higher.

"She hit so many crossbars and posts," said Bregoli. "She had a great year. She hits the ball hard with either foot, and she has a strong header as well."

Molly Kate Cannon: The two-time Patriot League All Star marked the top scorer on every team North faced for three years. Every game, she went up against the best. One of them – count 'em – scored a goal. One.

"I think Molly Kate was the best defender in the Patriot League," said Breegoli. "She had great tenacity. She would not stop running. She frustrated one girl to the point to where the girl actually cried."

Annie Doherty: She raised her game in her senior year. She had two goals on the season and nearly had two more in the tournament game. She also has a nickname. She has it for a reason.

"We call her Bulldog because she is such a tough player. She strikes the ball well, and I thought she was the most improved player on the team this year," said Bregoli.

Julia O'Donnell: North has had a tradition of great sweepers over Bregoli's 21 years. O'Donnell, a Patriot League All Star, belongs with the best.

Shannan Kennedy: The Red Raiders' goalie had 14 shutouts this year and North gave up about a goal every month. It was no accident O'Donnell patrolled the center of the scoring area in this era of stinginess.

"She covered for so many mistakes," said Bregoli. "She had more speed than almost any sweeper I've had."

Marissa McGue: She was the heart and soul of it all. It will be easy to remember the skills and the numbers. It will be easy to remember the way she gave North control of the precious middle of the field in every match for four years. It will be easy to remember that she was a two-time Patriot League All Star and an EMass All Star her senior season. It will be easy to remember the eight game-winning goals, including two against Quincy in her senior year. But all that is only part of the story.

"I think I had one girl in 21 years who played as hard as Marissa. She went all out, every game, no matter the situation. In the tournament game, she played so hard, she cramped up for 10 or 15 minutes," said Bregoli. "She was also a great leader, always positive, always encouraging."

Kara Carchedi: Name a position and she played it. She played midfield, outside backer, forward, stopper. Offense, defense and in the middle. She loved the game and she played all of it.

"She was the most versatile player on the team. I to penetrate Braintree's defense and Carvalho very nearly tied it with 12:32 left when he redirected a pass in the box, but Burke was there to scoop up the shot.

Spendlove believed Quincy may have had more success putting pressure on Burke if the forwards were able to get behind Braintree's defenders, but the Wamps never gave the Presidents much of a chance at putting together anything steady offensively in their end.

Braintree continued to pepper the Quincy net and made it 2-0 with just under 12 minutes remaining in the half. The goal was nearly identical to the first one as Brian Carney blasted home a shot off a corner kick that Smith had no shot at. The backbreaker came in the final two minutes when Marco Carnes crossed a perfect pass to Ryan Mangan who hammered it in for an easy tally and a 3-0 Wamp lead heading into halftime.

Braintree put the contest out of reach just 1:56 into the second half on Carney's second goal of the evening to make it 4-0.

Smith had his fair share of highlight reel saves, the best coming with 37:53 left when he stretched to rob Vikendios Zahopoulos' free kicks.

Burke was at the very top of his game between the posts for Braintree and nowhere was that move evident when he denied Soares' blast from the right side with 22:42 left in what was the Presidents' best chance of the night.

Quincy avoided the shutout when Kevin O'Shea blasted a shot on frame to the high corner to make it a 4-1 contest with 12:31 remaining. O'Shea had another bid just minutes later, but goalkeeper James Fahey, who replaced Burke in the final 20 minutes, rushed out to knock the ball away before O'Shea could set up a shot. Aidan Smyth just missed with 8:31 left on a free kick that sailed just over the Braintree crossbar.

Carnes added one more tally for the Wamps on a blast from 15 yards out to finish things at 5-1 with 6:38 remaining on the scoreboard.

The most emotional moment of the evening for Quincy came with just under five minutes left when Smith was replaced by Brendan Corbett. "Four years they've played together and they've invested a lot of themselves," Spendlove said of the seniors. "That's what we've tried to create here. Our aim at the start of the year was to get back here and we accomplished that."

think as a freshman she even played goal," said Bregoli. "She has a great love for the game."

Molly Donahue: She had a breakout year on the wing, scoring eight goals and adding three assists. She has a nice touch around the net, and she sends a strong cross into the middle.

"Molly is like a lot of the seniors. She's more than a soccer player. She is a student and a leader in school. She is in the National Honor Society," said Bregoli.

Emily Anglehart: She had a good, heavy shot around the net and was perhaps the best header on the team.

"She was a tough kid who always played hard," said Bregoli. "She had a choice whether to come to North. She said after the final match how glad she was about the decision she made to play soccer here."

Ali Coleman: No player wanted to play soccer more. She came back from ACL surgery for her senior year. She battled hamstring and quad injuries to the same leg as her injured knee. On the eve of the tournament, she was doing physical therapy to get ready for the game.

"She was a great passer, and she saw the field well. She is a courageous kid," said Bregoli. "She has a strong leg. If it weren't for the injuries, she would have taken the corners and direct kicks for us."

Charlotte Chretian: She started the season just right by scoring North's first goal against Fontbonne.

"She's a smart player and she got the most out of her ability. She had three goals for us, and she was a leader," said Bregoli.

Shaina Donovan: She came out for soccer for the first time her senior year. She had two assists which is an accomplishment for a senior who is on varsity for her first year

"I've been trying to get to come out for four years. She's a good athlete, and she played well for us," said Bregoli.

Keeper Shannan Kennedy is a junior, but she was the cornerstone of the team. She was voted a Patriot League All Star, and she has the school record for shutouts with 28. North could not have a better building block for next year.

"The thing you learn is you lose more than a game in the tournament, you lose the kids. With these seniors, losing the kids is much more difficult than losing a game," said Bregoli.

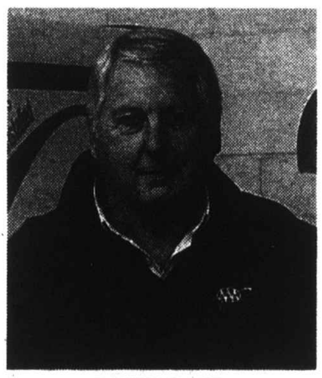
Replacing Tires, Hatchbacks, Gift Ideas For Car Enthusiast

Ask John Paul: AAA New England's Car Doctor

I have a 2012 Nissan Altima and I just bought three new tires, the fourth had been replaced when I hit a pothole last winter and has about 10,000 miles on it. The tire dealer put the new pair on the front and the other new tire on the right rear. The tire dealer said that would be fine, but I am not confident and comfortable with that. Should I replace the fourth tire as well?

Many vehicles with all-wheel-drive systems recommend replacing all four tires at one time. In these vehicles having tires with different wear can cause damage to the center differential or transfer case. Since your car is front-wheel-drive and the tire is the same model with only about 20 percent wear, I believe the tire dealer did the right thing.



JOHN PAUL

Is the Acura ILX a good buy for the price? In other words, would you buy this sporty car or is there another car similar to it at a better value or better quality?

The ILX is a good car and Honda/Acura has a history of building some of the best cars on the planet and you certainly can't go wrong buying one. If you are looking for upscale compact cars there are in my opinion better choices. The best driving experience comes from competitors from Europe. The Audi A4 also offers a good value and perhaps the best interior of any car in this price range. Others to look at are the BMW 2 and the Cadillac ATS,

I have a 2010 Chevy Cobalt and my power steering keeps going out on me when I am driving down the road. Can you help me?

The Cobalt uses an electric power steering system and computer controls and may be the subject of a recall. The repair generally requires replacement of the electric power steering assist motor and reprogramming the car's computer. Return to the GM dealer and have them check the car's VIN number to see if it is included in the recall.

I'm considering one of three hatchback cars and I hope you can help me with my decision. The Honda FIT, Chevrolet Sonic and Scion IM are all possible contenders. Which one would you pick or is there something I missed?

In my opinion the Honda FIT is the best of the three cars you have looked at. It offers great use of space, outstanding fuel economy and Honda's reputation for quality. One other car that is worth a look is the slightly bigger Kia Soul. I found the Soul to be surprisingly good.

I was recently at a repair shop and they wanted to replace the power steering and brake fluid in my car. I did little research online and found mixed reviews about doing this type of maintenance. What do you think?

If the fluids are dirty, contaminated or replacement is recommended in the vehicle owner's manual it is a good idea to have the fluids replaced. If this service is being performed as a preventative maintenance measure it can't hurt but may an unnecessary expense.

I have a car enthusiast in the family and his birthday is coming up in December, do you have some suggestions for a gift?

Here are a few items that should appeal to anyone who owns a car. A digital tire gauge allows easy and accurate tire pressure monitoring. For emergencies the Flashlight and Powerbank 5000 by Secur is an emergency rechargeable flashlight, power-supply for cell phones, emergency glass breaker and seatbelt cutting tool. For the DIY'er a Cordless LED work-light can be a great addition to a garage or toolbox. For the serious DIY'er a good repair manual or subscription to a repair database such as AllData.com is invaluable. There are some great "coffee-table" books such as "Art of the Hot Rod" by Ken Gross, Motion Performance by Marty Schorr or the latest book by Tom Cotter the Barn Find Road Trip. I had Tom on my radio program, to hear this interview and others go to www.johnfpaul.podomatic.com

I have a Pontiac minivan that has a rejection sticker on it. My van needs more work than its actual value in order for it to pass the Massachusetts inspection here. It is not a safety rejection, but has to do with emissions. The problem is the check engine light will not go out. Like I mentioned the amount I would have to invest in my van is more than the actual value. I'm in school and do not make enough money at my job to invest this much money or to buy another vehicle. I need my van to

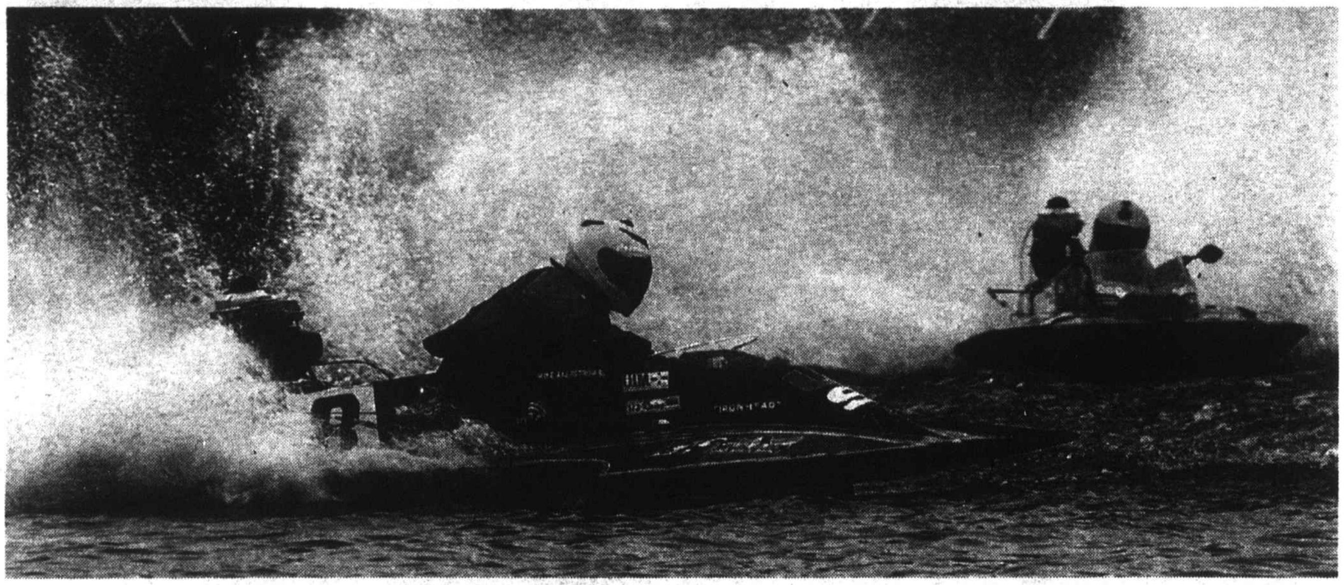
A-Team Competes At World Hydroplane Championships

Quincy-Based Team Managed By Squantum's Billy Allen



MIKE ACKERSTROM battling for the lead with Luke Hugman of Great Britain.

The World Outboard Hydroplane Championship took place recently at The Holmes Pierrepont National Watersports Center in Nottingham, England.

Among the teams competing in the 400cc class was the U.S. A-Team which is based in Quincy and is owned and managed by Squantum's Billy Allen, a 10-time U.S. National Champion and two-time World Bronze Medal winner. The organization and preparation which all takes place in Quincy involves the set-up, testing and shipping of the three boats and all related equipment to the venue in a 20' shipping container.

The team involves American Powerboat Association (APBA) members from across the United States who are recruited throughout the year as drivers and mechanics by the team manager. The team was once again the only American representation and had also travelled the furthest to race in the highly competitive contest. This year's U.S. A-Team consisted of three drivers along with two mechanics for each boat.

When the qualifying came to a close, the three U.S. entries had all made the cut to the 14 boat feature final with the #8 boat driven by Westford Massachusetts' Mike Akerstrom posting the second fastest qualifying time and just missing the coved pole position by one hundredth of a second. Akerstrom was followed by Concord, California's Tony Lombardo in 7th and Northlake, Illinois, Todd Anderson in 9th.

In the feature final, four heats are run with the drivers best three heats scored toward the final outcome.

After suffering a series of bad starts in two of the four final heats, Akerstrom overcame his bad luck and clawed his way through the rough water to an impressive 5th overall finishing position, the best finish of the American entries.

"We really had all our eggs in one basket," said the team manager after the slow starts thwarted Akerstrom's chances for an overall top three podium position. "Mike was in our fastest boat and I thought he had the speed for a top three finish, but he started slow and couldn't get to the corner with the leaders," Allen said.

Lombardo finished in the seventh spot with Anderson in 9th placing all three U.S. A-Team entries in the world-wide top ten.

The Gold Medal was once again won by defending world champion Rasmus Haugasmagi from Estonia followed by Poland's Cezary Strumnik with the Silver and Miroslav Bazinski from Slovakia with the Bronze.

The team manager was quick to credit the help he received locally and was looking forwards to putting together a team for the 2016 effort.

"We are lucky to be based in Quincy," said Allen. "People here are really behind us and we want to thank everyone who helped. Weather you came to our spring fundraiser, bought a t-shirt or just followed the team as fellow Americans on social media, the United Stated simply would not be represented at this world championship without you".

Race fans fast boat enthusiasts can follow the team's action at www.ateamboatracing.com or on www.southshoreoutboard.com.

At the recent crosstown rivalry soccer games, QHS Boys Soccer held a dedication ceremony honoring 1st Lt. Alfred Schofield.

Alfred Schofield graduated Quincy High school in 1964 and was a four-year soccer player and captain of the 1963 boys team. This 1963 team was the first to record a winning season.

Upon graduation from Quincy High, Al enlisted in the US Army (Infantry Division) where he rose to the position of first lieutenant and platoon leader.

On Sept. 16th, 1968 while serving in Vietnam, a convoy that Lt. Schofield's unit was protecting was ambushed. In the subsequent action Lt. Schofield, with complete disregard for his own safety and despite heavy enemy fire, bravely went to the aid of several fallen comrades.

After helping treat and comfort some of his wounded comrades, Lieutenant Schofield was fatally wounded by an enemy rocket while helping some of them to the rear. He was just 21 years of age.

For his brave actions that day Lt. Schofield was posthumously awarded the Silver Star.

In April of this year the Vietnam Veterans Association dedicated a square at the corner of Adams Street and Alrick Road in honor of Lieutenant Schofield. The

Presidents Come Up Big Against Natick, 28-14

Quincy Win 28-14; Visit Wellesley Friday Night

By BILL GRIFFIN

It was the sweet sound of success.

The Quincy bus waited in the parking lot after the Natick game. It rocked and rolled and shook with noise, shouts and chants.

This was from a team that had lost seven straight and was coming off a 40-point defeat to Marshfield in the playoffs. Many teams would have slipped quietly away, gone to sleep and not awoken until Thanksgiving.

But Quincy did not. Quincy played hard. The Presidents played excellent football in running up a 21-point lead in the first half, and then made all the big plays in the deciding moments of the game to stop Natick, 28-14 in a non-league contest played at at Veterans Stadium Friday night.

"Boy, it feels good to finally get one," said coach Bill Reardon. "I feel great for the kids. Tuesday practices after a loss are tough. What did I tell them after Marshfield? I just told them I was proud of them, and the way they competed. I told them to just keep competing, and that's what they did."

Begin with the offensive line. Tight end Mike McNelly, tackles Bernie VanTassell and Jhonta Sousa, guards Mike Munroe, Ryan Ahola, and Isaiah Uzamere and center Declan Mayo earn the game ball. Munroe, Uzamere and Mayo were exceptional, but the entire group tore open huge holes especially in the first half. Quincy had 185 yards on the ground at the half and 283 for the game. Without the blocking, none of this happens.

"I've liked the way the offensive line has played for the last four or five games," said Reardon. "All but Mike are first-year starters. It took some time, but they are coming together and playing good football. Unfortunately, it coincided with a rash of injuries we've had on defense, so it didn't show up in wins. But they have played well."

Time and again, the line put senior tailback Jahvae Handsom-Fields cleanly in the secondary. When Handsom-Fields gets through the first wave of tacklers untouched, it is showtime. He ran past, around and through defenders. He had six gains over 10 yards, including a 38-yarder on a draw play in the first half off a great fake by quarterback Cody Desmond.

He finished with 203 yards on 28 carries, four touchdowns, an interception and several big hits. In the last three games against three playoff teams, (Duxbury, Marshfield and Natick) Handsom-Fields has gained 525 yards. He has 1,292 for the season through nine games and has long since put the 3,000-yard career mark in the rear-view mirror.

"I think Jahvae and the offensive line know each other better," said Reardon. "Bernie Van Tassell said to me: Coach, I don't know which way he's going, inside or outside. Which way should I block? I just told him to make his block and let Jahvae make the decisions. I think more and more, they're on the same page now."

Ironically, the most important runs of the game came when Handsom-Fields was not in the game. Quincy was clinging to a 21-14 lead midway through the fourth period when Handsom-Fields went to the sidelines with cramps on the humid (honest) November night. The Presidents needed to work the clock and senior Garrett Cronin (40 yards, nine carries, four extra points) delivered with first-down rushes of five and 11 yards, carrying multiple tacklers on each run.

"If we didn't have Jahvae, Garrett would be an excellent starting tailback," said Reardon.

And Quincy made the big plays which eluded the Presidents during the losing streak. The first came on offense with the scored tied at 0-0 midway through the first period. On third-and-35 from the Natick 37 (you read it correctly), Desmond rolled left and dropped a pluperfect touch pass into McNelly deep along the sideline. McNelly fought to the three. On fourth-and-one from the three, Handsom-Fields scored and Quincy was up, 7-0.

"Instead of turning it over near midfield, we came up with a huge play. Cody had great touch on that ball," said Reardon.

From there, it was the defense who made the plays. With Quincy up, 14-0 midway through the second, McNelly ripped the ball free from Natick running back Malik Williams who was battling for extra yards at the Quincy 45. McNelly returned the ball 40 yards to the five to set up Handsom-Fields' third TD and put the Presidents up, 21-0.

Natick scored before half and used a hurry-up, no-huddle drive for a TD to start the second half to draw within, 21-14. The Redhawks drove to the Quincy 22 early in the fourth. Pressure from McNelly and Munroe forced a third-down incompletion, and a field-goal attempt sailed wide.

Dyreke Johnson swatted away two passes on Natick's final possession to seal away the victory. In recent weeks, Quincy played sound defense and forced third and fourth-down situations, but the Presidents could not make the plays to get off the field. Against Natick, they made them.

"Mike's play gave us a touchdown, and we got the big play on defense late in the game that we have been looking for in our last few games," said Reardon.

Handsom-Fields scored on runs of three, six and five yards in the first half. He swept in from the 15 on the final play of the game for his fourth TD.

Quincy (2-7) travels to Wellesley Friday night.

Q-NQ Cross Country Highlights

The fact that Quincy-North Quincy cross country hasn't won a meet since the opener vs. Hanover hasn't stopped some of the freshman runners from racking up incredible performances in big meets.

Evidence Abby Murphy who finished 4th in the Patriot League championship at Silver Lake and in Saturday's MSTCA coaches invitational finished 2nd, the second best freshman performance between the two divisions held at Wrentham's Fair grounds.

Murphy embarked in a see-saw battle with Shepherd Hill's (Worcester) Emma Whitehead, losing by seven seconds but clocking an 11:24 – a time 30 seconds faster than Emily Bryson's freshman best. Bryson used an outstanding kick to win the UAA championships in come-from-behind fashion representing Brandeis.

On the boys freshman side Kyle Ollmann 11:30 and AJ Nelson 11:39 paced the QNQ attack followed by Alan Vangorder, Shane Stokes, Nick Ouellette, Alex Ouellette and Sean Scanlon. Eve Anderson was the other finisher in the girls race.

In the boys Junior senior race Aidan Golden clocked a 19:09 and Kevin White a 19:17.

The teams will return to Wrentham for the MIAA Eastern Mass championships competing in Division 1.

NQ Falls To Hingham

By BILL GRIFFIN

Every team has a bad night, a night during which little goes right. North Quincy had one against Hingham.

The Harbormen took advantage of three turnovers and dropped the Red Raiders, 33-0 in a non-league game played Friday night in Hingham.

"We didn't play well," said North coach Mark Nutley. "We missed too many tackles on defense and just when we got something started on offense, we would make a mistake to stop ourselves."

Senior tailback Aidan Brown rushed for 95 yards to boost his season's total to 1,039 and crack the 1,000-yard mark in nine games in his first year as a running back.

Brown also completed a long pass to Tom Whooley on the option to set North up in good scoring position.

Senior quarterback Joey Fallon, who was 13-16 a week ago against Medway, threw the ball once again. Twice his passing and Brown's running brought North inside the Hingham 20, but turnovers stopped both drives.

"We just have to play a lot better. It's one of those games you just have to move on from as quickly as possible. We have to improve to have a chance against anyone," said Nutley.

North (1-8) hosts Oliver Ames Friday night at the Stadium in its final game before the Thanksgiving showdown with Quincy.

current Quincy High boys soccer team were represented at the dedication that day by their four captains, Tristan McCormick, Connor Porter, Robert Smith and Aidan Smyth along with their coach, Mark Spendlove.

It was decided that day that the team would dedicate their upcoming 2015 season and at the Oct. 24 game versus North Quincy to the memory of Lieutenant Alfred Schofield.

Coach Spendlove worked with some former classmate's of Al's and was put in touch with a cousin, Robbie Molla, who helped contact family members and invite them to the dedication.

"We were lucky to have several members of Lieutenant Schofield's family join us that night as we recognized one of Quincy's own and a true American hero," said Coach Spendlove.

Joining both the Quincy and North Quincy Teams on the field that night were Al's brother Arthur "Skip" Schofield and his wife Donna who arrived from Oklahoma for the special dedication. Al's niece, Cheryle Schofield Yankauskas, her husband William and son Justin; and several cousins, Frances Molla and her husband Bob, Robbie Molla, Susan Molla Kent, Elizabeth Ann Schofield Starratt and her husband Paul, Cheryl Schofield Cloherty and Sheila Schofield.

Coach Spendlove and the captains of the 2015 team presented a plaque to Al's brother, Skip, in recognition of Al's services to his Country and to the Quincy High Soccer Family. Depicted on the plaque was a team photo taken from the 1964 yearbook and a photo of the current team replicating the poses and positions of the 1964 photo along with Alfred Schofield's yearbook photo.

The inscription read "The QHS Boys Soccer Team of 2015 honors Alfred Schofield and the Team of 1963. Dedicated October 24, 2015"

A duplicate plaque is also on display in the trophy case at Quincy High School.

Coach Spendlove saw the dedication as a great way for the boys to embrace some of the history of the boys soccer team and at the same time pay their respects to a true hero.

"I found it both pleasing and very moving to see so many Schofield family members attend the ceremony prior to the North game." said Spendlove.

At the end of the dedication there was a moment of silence in memory of Lt. Alfred Schofield and Steve Goodyear, the coach of the 1963 team, who recently passed away on Oct. 16 at the age of 87.

3-Alarm Fire Guts Newport Avenue Building

than two feet between it and surrounding buildings. An alleyway in the rear of the building was full of cars, preventing fire engines from getting in and requiring firefighters to carry ladders and other equipment to the scene. Eight engine companies and three ladder trucks responded to the fire, including one from Boston.

"Pretty much everything we had was there," Griffith said.

Brewster Ambulance also provided an aerial drone, allowing Fire Chief Joseph Barron to survey the fire from up above. Barron coordinated the firefighters' efforts from the Newport Avenue side with Griffith leading the efforts in the rear of the building.

Newport Avenue between Beale Street and Elmwood Avenue was closed throughout much of the afternoon of Nov. 4 before one lane in each direction reopened in the evening. The road did not fully reopen until following morning. Service at the Wollaston MBTA station, which is directly across the street from the building, was not impacted.

The building was home to a cabinet store and barbershop as well as several apartments on the upper floors. Residents living in those apartments were left homeless but no one inside the building was injured and everyone had evacuated by the time firefighters arrived; several nearby buildings, including Odd Fellows Hall, were also evacuated by firefighters.

One Quincy firefighter was transported by Brewster Ambulance to a local hospital for smoke inhalation and heat exhaustion. The firefighter was treated and released and Griffith expected him to return to work for his next scheduled shift Nov. 6.

Griffith said the fire appeared to have started accidentally but remained investigation as of Nov. 5.

The Building Department was inspecting the building, but it was believed to be a total loss; Griffith said one of the building's walls was bulging outward. The building was constructed in 1900 and has a replacement cost of $527,774, according to the city assessor's online database.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) This year, instead of jumping into the whole holiday prep scene, move in a little at a time. You'll appreciate the sense of control you're more likely to enjoy.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The separation between the Bovine's head and heart is never as far apart as it seems. Both senses work best when they come out of logic and honesty.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) The best way to keep those pre-holiday pressures under control is to just say no to taking on new tasks while you're still trying to work with a heap of others.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) News means a change might be on its way, but what does it hold? Don't just ask questions; make sure you get answers you can trust.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Old friends and new have one thing in common: Both your longtime and newly minted pals have much wisdom to impart.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) With time running out, this is a good time for you to show 'em all what those Virgo super-organizational skills can do.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Librans and holidays are made for each other, especially if children and animals are going to be part of your joyous season.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Time is getting too short to allow a spat to taint the holiday season. Restart your relationship and reschedule holiday fun times.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Seeking advice is laudable. You might learn far more than you thought you could. Stay with it.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Continuing to assess changes works toward your getting your new project up and ready. Trusted colleagues remain ready to help.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) That new situation needs a lot of attention, but it's worth it. This is a very good time for you to involve the arts in what you do.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) It might be a good idea to slow your hectic holiday pace so that you don't rush past what -- or who -- you're hoping to rush toward.

BORN THIS WEEK: Others pick up on your confidence in yourself, which inspires them to believe in you and your special gifts.

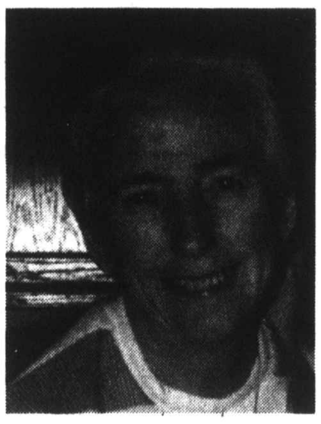
Virginia E. White



VIRGINIA E. WHITE

A Mass for Christian Burial for Virginia Ellard (Molloy) White of North Quincy will be celebrated today (Thursday) at 10:30 a.m. in Sacred Heart Church, Hancock Street, North Quincy.

Mrs. White died at home Nov. 6 surrounded by her loving family.

Virginia "Ginnie" Molloy was born in Quincy on Dec. 18, 1926 in a doctor's office at 644 Hancock St., which is now the Lydon Chapel for Funerals, thus affording her one of her most famous quips, "I was born in a funeral home." She was the third and last child of William E. Molloy Sr. and Mary Elizabeth (Ellard) Molloy. She had an older sister Mary and an older brother William.

Her father was a stock broker and the family enjoyed a comfortable life in Milton until the stock market crash of 1929 left the family penniless. After losing their home, the Molloys moved to humble quarters in Dorchester at the height of the Great Depression of the 1930s. Despite poverty and oft-times hunger, because of the support of friends, neighbors and the Church, Mrs. White had a happy childhood. Although poor in material things, the Molloys were rich in familial love and friendships.

She attended St. Mark's School and then, in September of 1941, she entered Dorchester High School for Girls. Her entire high school experience was when the world was at war.

After high school, she worked as a secretary at a plant that made military parts for the war effort. She continued working there for more than eight years, up until the birth of her first child.

She married the love of her life, Clayton E. White on Jan. 28, 1951. She first met Clayton at the age of 16 when she worked as a candy girl at the Adams Theater in Dorchester where Clayton was the projectionist. Five years later, after the war, they met by chance on the trolley, leading to a fine romance and marriage that lasted more than 60 years.

Although born in Quincy, Mrs. White was a Boston girl at heart, and never ceased to sing the praises of her Dorchester upbringing. She and her husband raised their six children in Roslindale and exposed them to the rich culture of Boston, the "Athens of America." She thoroughly enjoyed her role as wife and mother. She considered it her "calling."

In August of 1965, at the age of only 38 and with six small children, she suffered a stroke which left her right side paralyzed and she was unable to speak. She made a complete recovery with no therapy, "Just determination and a deal with the Almighty that if I recovered, I'd be the very best mother, wife, daughter and sister I could be."

During her husband's retirement, Mrs. White embarked on an idyllic period of her life, enjoying more than 30 ocean cruises with her beloved Clayton. She also cherished time spent with her children, grandchildren, and in recent years, her great-grandchildren.

A tireless volunteer at nursing homes, a wonderful seamstress, an avid reader, a family historian, a movie buff, a treasure-trove of nostalgic trivia - Ginnie was loved by all who knew her, and imparted her wisdom to her children and grandchildren. She loved to sing and had a lovely voice reminiscent of her favorite songstress, Rosemary Clooney. She would often burst into song around the house, and she knew the words to "just about every old song ever written."

Mrs. White was pre-deceased by her cherished husband Clayton in 2011, and her beloved granddaughter Christina Ann Lee in 2013.

She is survived by her daughters Mary Lou Kirshon of North Quincy, Janet V. Robinson of Lee Maine, Christine M. White of East Bridgewater and Patricia A. Hayes of North Quincy, and her sons Thomas E. White of Middleboro and Edward A. White of Dedham; along with 12 grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren.

She also leaves a niece, Kathleen McCloskey of Fitchburg and a nephew, William Molloy of Fall River, along with many nieces and nephews by marriage.

Visiting hours were 4 to 8 p.m. Wednesday at the Lydon Chapel for Funerals, 644 Hancock St., Quincy.

Burial will be in Bourne National Cemetery.

Cain's Interest In Politics Began At A Young Age

those streets and also provide information as to when a street or sidewalk might be set up for repair.

"If it's not set up for repair in the short term, why not, because I understand in the streets sometime there might be underlying infrastructure problems that require a lot more money. If that is something that is a problem, at least let people know so they can have an idea of where they fit into the queue."

Additionally, Cain would like to promote community engagement and civic involvement.

"I think what we were able to successfully do on this campaign is ignite a certain fire in people that hadn't been engaged before. Younger people were helping us out on the campaign, which is tremendous," Cain said.

"We want to keep that level of involvement up. We would like to get people involved in the community, obviously more community programs, different activities that would allow us to become more involved in each other's lives."

Cain also plans to send out surveys to his constituents to better understand their priorities. Issues like taxes and development would also be matters of concern for him.

Cain will be sworn in as the Ward 3 councillor in January. As he prepares to transition into that position, Cain plans on staying in touch with Coughlin, who stopped by Cain's victory party on election night.

"I saw him immediately after the results were in. He was kind enough to stop by my event last night at the Common Market and I will certainly be contacting him over the next couple of months to siphon whatever information I can," Cain said. "I actually asked him last night 'when are you going to ship over that file cabinet' and he said 'I've got a lot more than that.'"

As he readies himself to step into the role of ward councillor, Cain said it was too early to begin thinking of any future aspirations.

"I think it's too early," he responded when asked about future plans. "I'm looking forward to getting into the weeds on the local level and learning all that I can and doing all that I can for the community. We'll see. It's a great place to be right now and I feel fortunate to be in it."

but I'm instilled with hard work, determination, drive, commitment," DiBona said.

"I've been an athlete my whole life, through high school, into college. Being athletic and the competition is on, you go all out and that's what I do. When I do something, I'm all in. I go all out and that's what I had to do to win this race."

"I put a lot of hard work into this, I dedicated a lot of hours away from work and from the second I woke up in the morning until the second I went to sleep at night all I thought about was this race," he added. "I was constantly thinking about, thinking to myself I can't take any pedal off the metal. I can't take anything off the gas. I went into all-out campaign mode."

DiBona, whose mother is from Thailand, will be one of the first two residents of Asian descent to serve on the council, along with Liang. He said he was grateful for the voters who chose him on Election Day.

"I'm excited that the voters voted me in. I want to thank the people, because they're the ones that get you elected, the people. I really want to thank them for their belief in me," DiBona said.

"I want to thank my dad, Russ DiBona, and I want to thank my wife, Niamh, for all their time towards this campaign. It was tough; it wasn't easy. I want to thank my campaign team as well for all their hard work and dedication to me. I couldn't do it without them."

DiBona is a past president of the Ward 2 Civic Association and currently a member of the Merrymount Association, has spent five years as the head coach of the Quincy Point Panthers, the junior vice commander of the Sons of the American Legion Morrisette Post 294 for four years, a member of the Sterling Building Committee and a former Park and Recreation Board member.

"I've been very involved with making Quincy better," DiBona said.

When asked about plans for the future, DiBona said he wants to "just do a good job for the citizens of Quincy."

get back and forth to work and school. My friends are getting tired of giving me rides. What can I do?

The inspection station that rejected your car should have given you more options. You have three options, one is having the car repaired, two apply for a repair waiver, and three apply for a hardship waiver. To apply for a hardship waiver, have a registered emissions repair technician prepare an estimate of repair costs for your vehicle. The estimate to repair the major component needs to be at least: $1005 for a vehicle more than ten model years old. The rates are higher for newer vehicles.) Have any other emissions problems (other than the major component replacement or overhaul) repaired, if they were identified during your vehicle's initial inspection. Demonstrate that your vehicle passed its safety re-test if its initial inspection identified any safety defects. If more than 60 days have gone by since your vehicle passed its safety inspection, it may be required to undergo a safety test again. Where is the tire pressure sensor located on 2011 Toyota Tacoma? The low tire light comes on and the tires are fine.

The tire pressure sensors are located in all four tires as part of the valve stem assembly. These sensors transmit information to a tire pressure warning receiver located in the truck. This receiver will then transmit to the indicator in the car. Although it is possible one of the tire pressure monitors are faulty it is much more likely that one of the tires has a leak and is low on air. Some cars use a tire pressure monitor for the spare tire as well, so be sure to check the spare tire pressure as well.

I have a 2015 Toyota Prius and I love it. I was wondering if it has been studied whether the battery charges differently when braking lightly for the whole stopping distance, as compared to coasting for a while, and then braking harder for a shorter distance?

A. The service brake is certainly necessary to stop the car, but also wastes energy. In a conventional car, the adage of easy on the gas and brake to maximize fuel economy in my opinion works just as well with hybrids. Now since your car has a sophisticated energy display you could certainly do your own test. Try to duplicate the same route and try both techniques and see which works better for your type of driving.

I'm at a point in my life where I don't need to be that practical about a car anymore and was thinking about a luxury car. One car that I have always liked but never was quite sure I wanted to own was a Jaguar. Have the newest Jaguars gotten better and I understand an "affordable" model is coming out. What do you think?

Jaguar is working hard to change its image. The newest models have a great warranty (the best in their class) and the new XE (available in the spring of 2016) which I have only seen and not driven looks very well done. There are several engine choices, including a diesel and of interest of people living in the Northeast, available all-wheel-drive. The base price of the Jaguar XE is expected to be in the mid $30,000 range.

I am legally blind and love cars but my vision is not good enough to drive. Can you think of any automotive related jobs that I could do? I don't want a charity job I want my employer to think I would add value to his business.

Interesting question, I can think of a couple of positions. I remember reading a story about a blind car salesman who sold more cars than anyone else in the dealership. This salesman couldn't read or watch television, but he knew his product and could sell. I also remember reading about a blind mechanic who couldn't see well enough to drive but could fix cars. As a kid I watched a guy who was easily able to replace a fuel pump in a small block Chevy engine and it wasn't until he was done that I knew he was blind. I also remember being at a museum where one of the docents was also legally blind and his knowledge of the exhibits were incredible. The possibilities exist, readers do you have any thoughts about this, email me. jpaul@aaanortheast.com.

Reflections On The Elections And Moving The City Forward

The definition of a campaign equates it to a military operation trying to achieve a specific objective.

Being involved in a political campaign is like that, you feel compelled to strongly fight to achieve your objective whether you are the candidate or a volunteer. There is a passion and goal that drives you to be actively involved in the political process.

From meeting so many volunteers and candidates, I strongly believe that deep down, all had the same goal, and they wanted what was best for the city. There is disagreement about what is the best path to take, but we all want to achieve the same goal, to make Quincy better.

We are fortunate here, to have passionate people who are willing to commit to being actively involved in a campaign whether being a candidate or volunteer. I have tremendous respect for all who are willing to commit their time, talent, resources and energy to a campaign in the hopes of improving the city.

There is a tremendous burden to the families of the candidates, appreciate what the spouses, children and relatives endure during a campaign. Thank you to the families of the candidates for allowing their family member to run. Running a campaign is not an easy undertaking nor for the faint of heart.

The city benefits from a spirited contest. Competition makes for stronger candidates, increases awareness of issues and creates accountability for decisions. Having met so many voters, we are fortunate to have thousands of gracious and involved residents. An engaged and active voter is a tremendous asset to the city. Voters are at their best when they make the candidates earn their votes.

Congratulations to all who participated in the election, your efforts and intentions are truly appreciated. To all the winners, I wish each of you the best. We all have the same goals; we want to make Quincy even better.

For all elected officials, I wish nothing but tremendous success upon your endeavors, and I am fully committed to help move this city forward any way that I can.

We are depending on you to do your best for us and our city; after all we all are tied to your success and Quincy's future.

Comer said, "We must take our country back…and I am so proud to be part of all you assembled here today, keeping up the good work. When we hear we forget, when we see we remember, it's when we do, we understand."

Last Spring two benches were added to the Island, one in honor of Joseph W. Koch, a veteran of the U.S. Army and one in memory of the five Dunn brothers of Quincy, who served in World War II and are now deceased.

At this Veterans Day ceremony, a bench was dedicated by the Pugliesi and Swanson families honoring Salvatore Pugliesi USN WWII, David Pugliese, US Army Vietnam, (Bronze Star and Purple Heart recipient,) Carl Swanson Jr., USN WWII, Purple Heart recipient, Louise Swanson, Bethlehem Shipyard WWII, and Gold Star Mother Effie Pugliese, USN WWII.

Quincy resident and Massachusetts Detachment Commander SAL (Sons of the American Legion) Edward Villard was keynote speaker. Villard served as a police officer for more than 30 years, and although already in possession of several academic degrees, is now enrolled at Mass Maritime seeking a second Master's Degree, this time in Emergency Management.

Villard said, "As I travel throughout the state representing The Sons, I see many inspirational settings, but yours is truly unique. While the 300 flags standing here represent many Quincy veterans, it is inspiring. We would need Pageant Field to display the thousands of flags needed to represent ALL Quincy veterans who have served to preserve our freedoms.

"I have become very concerned by the lack of respect shown by some youth and some adults toward the very people who have served to protect their right to a free society. It is the dedication of organizations such as The Legion and Sons of the Legion in presenting ceremonies such as these which remind our fellow citizens the legacies of our men and women of the armed forces."

Present among the many American Legion officers, Color Guards from Quincy Police Fire departments, and Ladies Auxiliary, were the Ancient & Honorable Artillery Company of Massachusetts, the oldest chartered military organization in North America, whose charter was signed by Governor John Winthrop in 1638 and who operate a museum at Faneuil Hall.

Master of Ceremonies Vice-Commander Guy Ferris said, "Each of the flags here, with the exception of one, has a sponsor who's asked that a flag be dedicated with name tags. That one unnamed flag is to symbolize our prisoners of war and those missing in action who have yet to return home. Some of the flags are to honor deceased individuals whose families have sought that recognition…others were donated by the living to support Squadron 294 and we gratefully acknowledge their gifts."

At this particular ceremony, only the names of local deceased veterans were read aloud in a military roll call. Military guidelines governed the raising of the United States Flag, the POW/MIA flag, and the flag of The Sons of the American Legion. A commemorative wreath was laid at the base of the pole, followed by a gun volley and Taps was played.

'NO ONE DOES as much for their veterans as we do in Quincy…that's our citizens, that's our government and of course our wonderful veterans who are so humble to each other,' said Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes, the chairperson of the City Council's veterans committee, in her remarks at Sundays's Veterans Day observance at Flags for Veterans Island. Councillors: Amend Anti-Discrimination Ordinance To Include Gender Identity

By SCOTT JACKSON

An amendment to the city's anti-discrimination ordinance introduced by two city councillors would prohibit discrimination in the city based on gender identity.

Councillors Brian Palmucci and Doug Gutro introduced the amendment to Chapter 2.150 of the city's ordinances at the council's Nov. 9 meeting, where it was referred to the ordinance and environmental and public health committees. A public hearing is required before the council could vote on the change.

Chapter 2.150 currently prohibits discrimination in matters of housing, employment, education, contracts, purchasing or public accommodations on the basis of age, ancestry, citizenship, gender, race, and sexual orientation, among others. Palmucci said the anti-discrimination ordinance should

Officials Celebrate Opening Of New Veterans Housing

12 Apartments For Veterans, Families On East Howard St.

QUINCY MAYOR Tom Koch (center) and city and state officials join with NeighborWorks Southern Mass. to cut the ribbon on the nonprofit agency's latest community development project: 12 new apartments for veterans and their families.

Photos Courtesy Juli Ford/NeighborWorks of Southern Mass.

By JOE REARDON

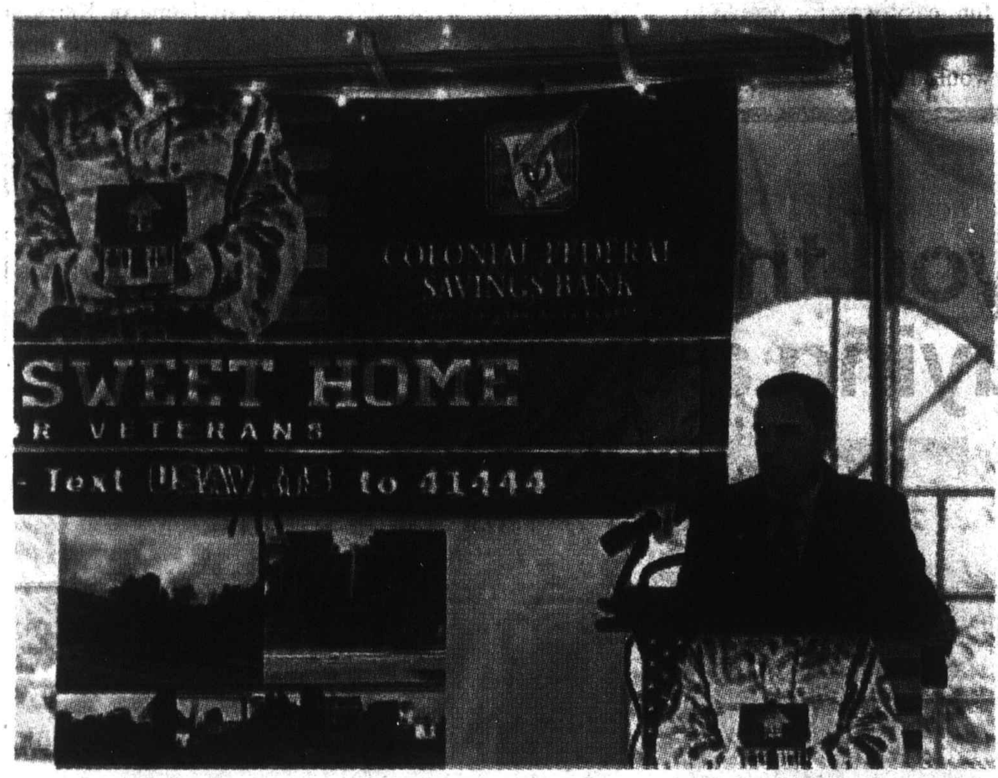
What was once an empty lot and eyesore with ugly billboards that was abandoned for decades is now the location of the new Home Sweet Home for Veterans.

The building, located at 178 East Howard St. in Quincy Point, has been in the works for three years and will be the home to 12 veterans and their families who will get the chance to get their feet back on the ground and start a new life.

Mayor Thomas Koch, state Rep. Ron Mariano and Quincy Department of Veterans Services Director George Nicholson were just a few of the city leaders on hand for the ribbon cutting last Tuesday morning. Other notables who attended included John Yazwinski, the President and CEO of Father Bill's and MainSpring; Rose Evans, the Deputy Undersecretary of the Massachusetts Department of Housing and Community Development; Chris Harper Fahey, Senior Relationship Manager, Partnership and Growth Advisor, NeighborWorks America and Normand Grenier, President of NeighborWorks of Southern Mass.

The project, carried forth by NeighborWorks of Southern Mass, is the 17th home for veterans the company has completed in recent years. The various veteran homes have received major support from the veterans service agencies of Quincy and Weymouth, the Braintree Housing Authority and the regional veterans affairs supportive housing provider.

This year in Quincy alone, NeighborWorks has built 24 new apartments for low and moderate income families and purchased and renovated a 78-unit apartment building.



NEIGHBORWORKS SOUTHERN Mass. Executive Director Robert Corley addresses attendees at the ribbon cutting ceremony at 178 E. Howard St. The veterans' housing was funded by the agency's "Home Sweet Home for Veterans" campaign.

Funding for the project included the Colonial Federal Savings Bank, Mass Housing CCRI Fund and the HUD Home and Affordable Housing Trust Fund of Quincy. Elton and Hampton Architects drew up the plans for the house and the construction was carried out by M'O Connor Contracting.

Robert Corley, the executive director of NeighborWorks, told those on hand for the ribbon cutting that the project is the culmination of three years of work by several agencies and that those people who live in the East Howard Street neighborhood supported the project from the start.

"When I tell people what I do for a living it's sometimes hard to describe," said Corley. "I wish I could bottle up this property right here and show everyone this property when they ask me that question."

Koch spoke of the importance of honoring the city's veterans and how the home did just that. "The city of Quincy has a long tradition of honoring its veterans and I'm proud to be part of that tradition," he said. "We have a tradition of generation after generation responding to our nation's call. Let's continue to do the work to honor our veterans and this is a great example."

Mariano, who grew up and lives in the Quincy Point neighborhood, called NeighborWorks "a great partner with great vision."

"I do drive by this site very often," said Mariano. "This truly is something to be very proud of. For someone who sold papers at the main gate of the shipyard and has lived down here my whole life and committed my life to improving the circumstances of Quincy Point, this is truly an outstanding achievement. The mayor talked about honoring veterans. This is more than that. This is a beginning of a resurgence and revitalization of an area that has long been neglected. That to me is extremely important. It truly is a magnificent structure."

Nicholson also sung the praises of NeighborWorks and the work the company has done for veterans. "It's very difficult to convey in words the true significance of what we're doing here," Nicholson said. "These units are the answers to the prayers and dreams of an extremely challenged, yet incredibly lucky, group of veterans and their families.

"What was no more than a dream has become a reality. What was once a fantasy is now tangible. The light at the end of the tunnel has blossomed into a bright new day and a chance at a future. NeighborWorks has struck gold with these veterans."

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development estimates that on any given night, nearly 50,000 veterans are homeless. What's more, today's veterans tend to be older than in previous generations; as a result, they often have families, making it even more difficult to find an affordable place to live.

NeighborWorks Southern Mass.'s work on veterans housing issues dates back to 1996, when the organization developed an eight-unit home for veterans in Quincy called the Sheila McIntyre House. Since 2012, the agency has built or renovated four homes on the South Shore for veterans' and their families. The East Howard St. project marks its largest project developed specifically for veterans.

The Salvation Army Quincy Corps has launched its annual Red Kettle Campaign.

The Salvation Army Red Kettle Kickoff is an important event in Quincy, and bell ringers can be seen at various locations throughout the city during the holiday season.

The money raised during the Red Kettle Campaign is a critical source of funding for vital programs and services for tens of thousands of families, youth and senior citizens in Quincy and across Massachusetts each year. This includes meals, toys and other holiday support for those in need, along with funding for food pantries, social services, and education programs throughout the year.

"We see new people in need of The Salvation Army's services each day," said Captain Timothy Ross, Corps Officer of The Salvation Army Quincy Corps Community Center. "Many never imagined they would need our help. We are seeing families with two adults working who can't make ends meet. Others don't have enough income to cover the rising cost of food and utilities. We are excited to get the red kettles back out there so that we can continue to help all those in need."

Captain Timothy Ross said the goal is to raise $135,000, part of a statewide goal of raising $3.4 million, in just six weeks' time.

Quarry Hills Apartments OK'd

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council has approved a plan to construct 269 apartments off Quarry Hills Drive with the developer agreeing to set aside $250,000 for mitigation work at the intersection of Ricciuti Drive and Willard Street.

The council on Nov. 9, acting as the city's special permit granting authority, unanimously approved William Locke's proposal to construct two six-story buildings with a total of 269 one- and two-bedroom market rate apartments and 430 parking spaces, including ones inside and outside the buildings. The council held a public hearing on the proposal June 16 and convened to review the plan again on Oct. 5.

Locke agreed to set aside money for mitigation work at the intersection, which is a short distance from an off-ramp for Interstate 93, at the end of the Oct. 5 meeting. Several residents living at other developments off Ricciuti Drive raised concerns about the intersection in June and Rep. Bruce Ayers said improvements were needed to there at the

A REAL NATURAL

When discussing "natural" zircon, it is important to distinguish it from "cubic zirconia," which is the laboratory-grown diamond imitation. Zircon is a beautiful natural gemstone in its own right, which occurs in a wide range of colors. Over the years, the colorless variety was most prized because it looks more like diamond than nearly any other gemstone. In recent years, however, blue zircon has grown in popularity, largely due to a consistent supply of quality blue zircons from Cambodia. As the demand for these beautiful blue gemstones is expected to increase, collectors are snapping up the larger gemstones in anticipation of future price increases. Today's prices may soon seem to be real bargains.

Zircon's color diversity is caused by traces of certain impurities, some of which are radioactive. But don't worry - the radioactivity is minimal and poses no health hazards. Colorless zircon is usually cut with a brilliant cut to bring out its fire to its fullest capability. It is often used as a more affordable, yet natural alternative to a diamond. Council Backs Effort To Name Quincy Nation's Most Patriotic City

Designation Seen As Benefit To Residents, Businesses

By SCOTT JACKSON

City Councillors have given their unanimous support to pending legislation on Beacon Hill that calls on the United States Congress to proclaim Quincy the most patriotic city in America.

Rep. Bruce Ayers and Wollaston resident Kerry Byrne introduced the resolution on Beacon Hill earlier this year. Both appeared before the council on Nov. 9, when councillors approved their own resolution urging the state Legislature to approve the bill.

"We all know Quincy is filled with a lot of history and pride," Ayers said. "This is to…get a spirited debate going and to kind of showcase a lot of those historical events and happenings and places."

"I'm starting to get some pushback from some of my colleagues on Beacon Hill from Braintree, from Lexington, from Concord, from Plymouth," Ayers added. "We can use all the support we can get."

Byrnes said he wants schoolchildren nationwide to learn about Quincy in the manner they currently learn about places like Plymouth or Lexington and Concord.

"Quincy is a uniquely patriotic and historic community. One thing we can do as a community is tell that story, project that upon the wider world. I think it will have great benefit for anyone who works here, who lives here, who does business here," Byrne said.

"I want every schoolchild in America to grow up knowing about Quincy, Mass., the way they know about Plymouth or Lexington and Concord or Philadelphia or Boston. This community and all the great thing it has done for the United States of America, for the values we hold dear, for representative government all around the world needs to be known by every person in this country and beyond."

The resolution on Beacon Hill gives several reasons why Quincy should be named the most patriotic city in the nation, including: Presidents John and John Quincy Adams, as well as John Hancock, president of the Continental Congress, were born in the city; John Adams authored the Massachusetts Constitution, the oldest written constitution in the world, in his Quincy law office; the city was home to two shipyards during both world wars, one of which was where "Kilroy Was Here" was coined; the annual Flag Day parade; and the service of city residents in the military.

Council President Joseph Finn said the resolution would, at a minimum, provide a boost to city residents currently serving in the armed forces.

"Every council session it's been the tradition recently to have a moment of silence for the men and women who are serving in the military service here from Quincy, both here at home and abroad," Finn said.

"It's absolutely amazing to sit at graduation and see the number of kids with stoles or whatever they have that mark that they're actually going into the service. I'm sure everyone sitting around the table knows a number of people that are involved in military service here from Quincy. If nothing else, I think this also gives them a great boost and reminder of the dedication of their service."

Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes suggested students in the city's public schools could get involved in the process by starting a letter writing campaign to Congress, for example.

"Maybe the kids write letters or they do something in support of this and they send it to Congress," Hughes said.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

- On Dec. 2, 1859, in Charles Town, Virginia, abolitionist John Brown is executed on charges of treason, murder and insurrection. Brown became militant during the mid-1850s, when he fought pro-slavery settlers in the sharply divided Kansas Free State territory.
- On Dec. 6, 1917, a Belgian steamer and French freighter, both loaded with ammunition, explode in Canada's Halifax Harbor, leveling part of the town and killing nearly 1,600 people and injuring some 8,000. The ships carried 8 million tons of TNT intended for use in World War I.
- On Dec. 5, 1945, five U.S. Navy torpedo-bombers take off from Florida on a routine training mission over the Atlantic Ocean. The squadron leader later reported that his compass had failed and his position was unknown, and a rescue aircraft was dispatched with a 13-man crew. No trace of the 27 crewmen or six aircraft was ever found.
- On Dec. 4, 1956, the "Million Dollar Quartet" convenes at Sun Studios in Memphis, Tennessee, in an historic impromptu jam session. Present were Carl Perkins, Johnny Cash, Jerry Lee Lewis and Elvis Presley. A tape recorded that day was not discovered until 1981.
- On Nov. 30, 1965, lawyer Ralph Nader publishes the muckraking book "Unsafe at Any Speed." It became a bestseller and prompted the passage of seat-belt laws in 49 states (all but New Hampshire).
- On Dec. 3, 1979, eleven people are killed in a stampede outside a Who concert in Cincinnati when a crowd of general-admission ticket-holders surged forward in an attempt to secure prime unreserved seats inside, known as festival seating.
- On Dec. 1, 1990, 132 feet below the English Channel, workers drill an opening through a wall of rock, connecting the two ends of an underwater tunnel linking Great Britain with the European mainland for the first time in more than 8,000 years.

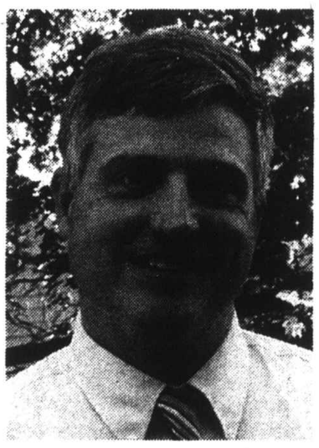
Roos Not Interested In DiBona's School Seat

Former Ward 3 candidate Karl Roos says he is not interesting in seeking the open School Committee seat being vacated by Noel DiBona who was elected a councillor at-large earlier this month.

In a statement released to The Quincy Sun on Monday, Roos said he was surprised to see his name mentioned in discussion for the upcoming Joint Convention - when city councillors and school committee members will gather to vote in a replacement to fill DiBona's school seat. The term expires at the end of 2017.

"I have not thought about, talked about, reached out to anyone nor have I have been contacted by anyone from the School Committee or City Council about participating in the Joint Convention," Roos said. "It is flattering to be considered but I have no intentions of participating in the Joint Convention to fill the School Committee seat that Mr. DiBona is vacating."

Roos said he supports the appointment of Emily Lebo to fill the unexpired term. Lebo, a former School Committee member, waged an intense yet unsuccessful write-in campaign in an effort to win one of three school seats in this fall's city election.



KARL ROOS

Refering to Lebo's three-week write-in effort, Roos said, "I think that speaks to Mrs. Lebo's commitment and desire to return to the School Committee. Mrs. Lebo has also expressed her willingness to participate in the Joint Convention.

"I would be greatly surprised if Mrs. Lebo did not already have the necessary support to be successful in the Joint Convention," he continued. "Mrs. Lebo is a safe choice to fill the seat. I wish Emily well in the upcoming Joint Convention and with her future endeavors."

Roos said he is looking forward to spending his time focusing on his family and pursuing other personal and business interests.

School Committeeman David McCarthy - who lost a bid for an at-large council seat this fall - told The Sun that he too is not interested in seeking DiBona's unexpired school term. McCarthy will finish 12 years of service as a School Committee member at the end of this year.

Recipe For Retirement

By KRISTEN ALBERINO
Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

The gravy is steaming next to the savory stuffing and sweet potatoes. There are four types of pie for dessert — pumpkin, apple, sweet potato, and pecan. Every family has its own unique Thanksgiving dinner traditions but, as we all know, a carefully followed recipe is key to creating a perfect holiday meal.

If you fail to plan, or measure your ingredients poorly, your pie could be a real flop. The same can be said for financial planning and preparing for your future.

Social Security Online Services
★ Convenient ★ Secure ★
www.socialsecurity.gov

Follow this perfect recipe, and you'll be rewarded with a delightful retirement:

First, start your retirement pie with a visit to the Retirement Estimator. Just drop in some simple information and the Estimator uses your past earnings and estimated future earnings to project about how much you'll get when you retire. You can experiment with the recipe and drop in different future earnings and retirement dates until your financial security in retirement is just the way you want it. Visit our Retirement Estimator at www.socialsecurity.gov/retire/estimator.html.

Next, stir in the savings. Social Security replaces about 40 percent of the average worker's pre-retirement earnings. Most financial advisors say you will need 70 percent or more of pre-retirement earnings to live comfortably. To supplement Social Security you'll also need savings, investments, pensions, or retirement accounts to make sure you have enough money to enjoy retirement. If you have a pension from your employer, or a 401(k), IRA, or similar retirement fund, be sure to add that into the mix.

You like to taste while you bake, don't you? Then you'll want to set up an online secure my Social Security account so you can log in anytime to check your reported earnings and projected benefit estimates. If something doesn't seem just right, there's still time to make corrections. So, if your earnings are reported incorrectly, or if you find you need to save more to meet your retirement goals, there's still time to make corrections before your retirement pie is done. You can visit my Social Security online anytime, even on holidays, at www.socialsecurity.gov/myaccount.

After you've added the ingredients of Social Security earnings, personal savings, and any pensions you may have, let the retirement pie bake. When the retirement pie is ready, enjoy it! You deserve a comfortable retirement. If you need more recipes for a long and healthy retirement, visit us at www.socialsecurity.gov.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1957 postcard published by the late James H. McManus, owner of the Fox and Hounds Grille on Sea Street at the end of Quincy Shore Drive. He opened the restaurant in 1936 just after Prohibition ended. It was famous for its large baked stuffed lobsters and charcoal broiled club sirloin steaks. Perhaps more famous than the food was the cocktail lounge that featured nightly entertainment. Popular personalities who appeared here included Hum & Strum and Hugh McGuiness. McManus also owned the Fox and Hounds nightclub in Boston, the Red Coach Grille in Wayland, Brigham's Ice Cream and Candy stores and the James H. McManus Ice Cream Company. After several changes in ownership this site is today home to an entirely new Fox and Hound Restaurant. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

"This Christmas collection stands apart from the church's usual collection of necessities like deodorants and soap," said Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, pastor. "These gifts are meant to be something special, something feminine, so that the women at Father Bill's will find a gift meant for them on Christmas morning."

Donations are welcome. Call 617-773-3319 to arrange a drop-off time.

Gifts will be brought to Father Bill's on Dec. 24.

The Period Of Animals And Its Affect On Earth

While following the weekly goings on reported in The Quincy Sun, I thought it would be interesting to put things in perspective. I have been doing some reading which has done just that.

In the geologic history of the earth, we are now in the period of animals. This a brief period in the history of the earth. Prior to this time was the microbiological age, following the present time the earth will return to the microbiological age.

One might be surprised to learn that right now the earth is in an Ice Age. The global warming of which we are so concerned will last but a few centuries when fossil fuels run out.

By going to non carbon dioxide renewal energy, we are speeding up our entry into the Ice Age by removing carbon dioxide from the atmosphere. Since the sun came into existence some 4.7 billion years ago, it has increase in brightness and energy by 30%.

The earth has responded by adjusting its atmosphere to yield a livable condition. As the sun continues to increase its yield of energy, the oceans will boil off and temperatures will rise to a hellish level. None of this will happen tomorrow. Knowing this improves one's quality of life by understanding the dynamics of our existence.

$1.11 Residential, $1.81 Business Tax Hikes Proposed

Mayor James Sheets has proposed FY 94 Tax Classification rates that would mean increases of $1.11 per $1,000 for residents and $1.81 per $1,000 for business owners, compared to last year's rates.

A public hearing on Sheets' proposed tax rates of $14.57 per $1,000 for residential and $30.58 per $1,000 for C.I.P.P. (commercial, industrial and personal property) will be held Monday, Dec. 6 at 6:30 p.m. in the City Council Chambers in City Hall.

The tax rates, which were unveiled at the last city council meeting, would keep the percentages of Quincy's $78.6 million tax levy the same as last year: 60 percent residential and 40 percent C.I.P.P.

RECOUNT SCHEDULED IN SCHOOL RACE, TO DECIDE CEDRONE OR BARRY IN 3rd SPOT

A school committee election recount requested by two candidates will get underway Thursday morning, Nov. 18, according to City Clerk and Board of Registrars Chairman Joseph Shea.

School Committee woman-elect Christine Cedrone and first runner-up Sean Barry each requested a recount in all six wards in the city.

Cedrone captured the third and final spot in the Nov. 2 school committee election, narrowly defeating Barry by eight votes.

(Editor's note: The results of the recount produced a tie between Cedrone and Barry. The tie vote created a vacancy on the committee to be filled by a joint meeting of the school committee and the city council. At this meeting, Mr. Barry received the majority of the votes cast and was seated as a member of the school committee.)

Admission is $10 at the door.

Discover Quincy Holiday Pop-Up Art Gallery

Opens Dec. 3 In Quincy Center; Local Artists Invited To Show, Sell Their Work

Discover Quincy announces it will host a pop-up art gallery for local artisans.

The gallery - to be located Quincy Center with the site to be determined soon courtesy of a local business - will open Dec. 3.

Local artists are invited to show and sell their work at the temporary retail location during the holiday season.

"The revitalization of downtown Quincy creates a unique opportunity to give artisans access to otherwise unaffordable retail space," said Margaret Laforest, director of Tourism and Marketing for the Quincy Chamber of Commerce.

Applicants will be juried and accepted until all spaces are filled. Priority will be given to Quincy area artists to sell unique, handmade works; art, ceramics, fiber, glass, jewelry, metalwork, mixed media, photography, woodwork and more.

Vendor acceptance is based upon the quality and originality of the work as well as booth presentation. Booth space sizes to be determined individually.

Artwork will be displayed on 3-foot by 6-foot panels with each artist assigned one panel for the duration of the show.

Discover Quincy is working in partnership with the Quincy Art Association whose members have automatically been accepted. Space has been reserved for QAA and will be coordinated directly with the association to save members from undergoing the application process.

In order to ensure a balanced and varied selection of exhibitors, the number of exhibitors accepted in any single genre may be limited.

"This is an exciting opportunity for local artists to sell their work within the up-and-coming art community in Quincy," Laforest said.

Apply online at thequincychamber.com by priority deadline of Friday, Nov. 20. Artists will be notified of acceptance by Nov. 24 and arrangements to be made for artwork drop off.

Anyone who participated in Discover Quincy's Summer Fridays art pop up will be automatically accepted.

The Discover Quincy Holiday Pop Up Shop plans to open Dec. 3. While Discover Quincy is heavily subsidizing the retail space, they will require a $50 fee for vendor space or a 20 percent commission on artwork. Fees are flexible with volunteer service during store hours, set up and break down.

Fees will be utilized to cover expenses including advertising for the season. Artists will be paid for their sales weekly.

For more information, email mlaforest@thequincychamber.com or call 617-639-1117.

Additional information will also appear in The Quincy Sun once further details including hours and location are finalized.

Planning Ahead For Thanksgiving

Holiday Recipes From Marie & Suzie

By MARIE

Thanksgiving Day is a great way to start the holiday season. But there is always so much to do - but if you plan ahead there will be much less stress.

A good way to begin is by making the stuffing the day or so before.

There are so many different ways to make stuffing. At times at our house, I prepare one with turkey giblets, and the other without.

STUFFING

2 stalks celery (diced)
1 small onion (cut)
1 bag of stuffing mix (or large loaf of bread) soaked
3 cups chicken stock
3 tablespoons oil, butter
2 tablespoons Bell's seasoning
Optional (1 cup mushrooms) or cooked chestnuts
Giblets (if used)
1/4 pound sausage or ground meat -optional (any kind if used)

In the hot oil and butter mix, sauté the celery and onion, mushrooms or chestnuts if used, and add the ground meat. If using the giblets, cut and sauté them at this point.

Combine all the rest of the ingredients and cook until blended.

Stuffing has to be cooled fully to use. Turkey should be filled loosely-because stuffing expands while baking.

Any remaining stuffing may be baked in a covered dish at 300 degrees for 25 minutes. This recipe can fill about a 20 pound turkey. Happy Thanksgiving!

Herbed Quinoa, Wild Rice Stuffing

By SUZIE

Quinoa and wild rice are loaded with protein to keep you full and fiber to keep your digestive tract running smooth.

Bread stuffing certainly is delicious but making a stuffing like this alongside traditional corn bread or bread stuffing gives you and guests the choice of still having their comfort foods while upgrading the ingredients.

This is key during the holiday season to avoid digestive upset and the dreaded weight gain. Flavorful herbs such as sage, thyme, oregano, parsley, rosemary…etc aren't only fragrant and add incredible depth to foods but they are also rich in antioxidants that can improve circulation, reduce inflammation and even help prevent certain cancers.

So don't stress over your holiday meals. Just rethink ingredients and recipes!

HERBED QUINOA AND WILD RICE STUFFING

2 cups wild and brown rice mix
1 cup Quinoa
2 tablespoons olive oil, 1 tablespoon pasture butter (I love Kerrygold)
2 very finely chopped medium onions
3 stalks chopped celery
1 large chopped carrot
2 granny smith apples, diced
2 large minced garlic cloves
2 tablespoons EACH chopped fresh sage, and thyme.
3 tablespoons chopped fresh rosemary
1 teaspoon sea salt (I love using Herbamare seasoned salt) and pepper to taste
½ cup organic apple juice

4 cups organic chicken broth

In a half cup measuring cup, add about equal amounts of dried cranberries, chopped walnuts and chopped cashews or almonds (1/2 cup total)

In a large heavy pot heat oil and butter. Add onion, celery and carrots and cook until tender. Add the salt, pepper, apples, 1 tablespoon each of sage and thyme and cook a bit until sizzling. Now add the juice and broth and bring to boil.

Add in wild rice and brown rice mix and cook for 45 – 50 minutes. Now add the quinoa and the rest of the sage and thyme. Cover and cook until quinoa is done, about 15 minutes. Now add your nuts and cranberries and rosemary and stir well to combine.

Season to taste at this time. It may need more salt and pepper. Preheat oven to 350 and place stuffing in greased 9 by 13 inch baking dish. (Do not press down keep fluffy) Cover with foil and add some pats of butter. Bake 20 minutes then take foil off and bake about 10 more minutes.

Happy Thanksgiving!

Turkey Mac & Cheese

By MARIE

When it is time to prepare leftover turkey, of course the usual turkey sandwich comes to mind-or turkey soup or turkey pot pie.

But I found great and different way for leftovers.

It is for mac and cheese – so popular especially with the children.

In today's recipe you can eliminate the green pepper if you prefer.

TURKEY MAC & CHEESE

2 cups diced turkey
1/2 cup green pepper
1 small onion
2 stalks celery
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
3 cups light cream or milk
salt and pepper
3 cups cooked elbows (or other small favorite)
1 cup shredded swiss or cheddar
Parmesan cheese for topping

In the butter, saute the turkey, pepper, onion and cook until tender. Add the flour and slowly add the cream until flour is well mixed, and thickens. Add the cooked pasta, the cheddar cheese, salt and pepper.

Place the mixture in a casserole dish topped with the Parmesan cheese, and bake in a 350 degree oven for 30-40 minutes.

Butternut Squash Brussels Sprout Combo With Maple Syrup

By MARIE

Today's recipe for a side dish on Thanksgiving Day or any time is the best one I have ever had.

Last week my daughter Rita made this great combination of butternut squash and brussels sprouts with her chicken dinner.

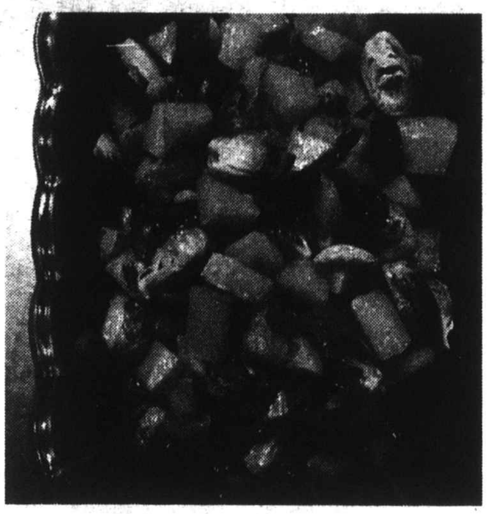
It takes a little while, but well worth the effort.

Butternut Squash, Brussels Sprouts

1 pound brussels sprouts (cut in halves)
1 medium butternut squash (diced)
1/2 pound bacon (she used uncured)
2 tablespoons pure maple syrup
salt and pepper
olive oil for sprinkling

On a cookie sheet, either greased or lined with parchment paper, place the halved brussels sprouts and diced butternut squash and sprinkle with olive oil, salt and pepper.

Bake in a 450-degree oven turning while cooking until tender.



Meanwhile sauté the bacon, drain and set aside.

When the vegetables are done, remove and place in a large dish.

Add the crumbled bacon and the maple syrup, and toss until blended. This got raves, especially from the children.

Curried Coconut Cauliflower Soup

By SUZIE

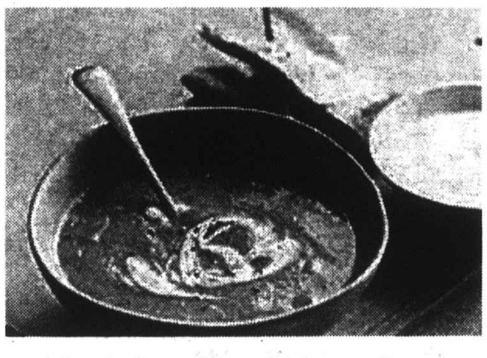
Soups are a great addition to your Thanksgiving meal. This can be made the day before and just reheated to serve before the big dinner.

Great to come home to after the big NQHS/QHS game for sure!! It smells amazing and tastes even better.

CURRIED COCONUT CAULIFLOWER SOUP

Cauliflower is an excellent source of fiber, vitamin C, vitamin K (anti-inflammatory and aids in improving cardiovascular health) sulforaphane (protects lining of stomach) and a very good source of manganese, beta-carotene, beta-cryptoxanthin, caffeic acid, cinnamic acid, ferulic acid, quercetin, rutin, and kaempferol are among cauliflower's key antioxidant phytonutrients.

This antioxidant support helps lower the risk of oxidative stress in our cell which basically means that cauliflower helps lower our cancer risk by helping us avoid chronic and unwanted oxidative stress. Combine this with anti-inflammatory spices like turmeric, curry, and coriander, onions and garlic which help to combat infections due to antibacterial and antifungal properties as well as they may even be a weapon against gastric and colorectal cancer and the other ingredients, and you have a powerhouse of a soup to have simmering on your stove.



1 head of cauliflower, chopped
1 large yellow onion, peeled and chopped and 3-4 cloves garlic, halved
5 cups organic vegetable stock and 1 can of coconut milk (14 oz)
2 tblsp. Thai curry paste, 1 tsp. cumin, ½ tsp coriander, 1tsp. turmeric, sea salt and pepper to taste
1 tablespoon fresh chives and olive oil for drizzling and for sprinkling on top

Preheat oven to 375 degrees and spread cauliflower, onion and garlic in single layer on baking sheet, bake about 30 minutes until golden brown.

While baking, bring stock and all seasonings /spices to a boil in large pot over medium heat. Remove vegetables and add to pot, Simmer about 15 minutes.

Using your hand immersion blender, blend in pot until smooth. Add in coconut milk and check for seasonings. Ladle into bowls and drizzle olive oil and sprinkle chives. Enjoy!

Turkey Hash

By MARIE

In most restaurants on the menu, there's almost always hash with eggs-and very popular with some people.

Today's recipe for leftover turkey is for hash, and quite simple to prepare.

HASH

2 stalks celery
1 small diced onion
3 tablespoons butter
2 cups diced turkey
2 cups diced, cooked potatoes
2 cups light cream or milk
1 teaspoon Bell's seasoning
salt and pepper
1/2 teaspoon paprika

In the butter, saute the celery and onion until the onion is transparent. Add the turkey. potatoes, and cream - cook slowly until heated thoroughly. Add the Bell's seasoning, salt and pepper and paprika. Heat until the hash is browned on the bottom.

Sweet Potato Casserole

By MARIE

Most of us enjoy sweet potatoes – my family certainly does – cooked any way.

Today's recipe is for a sweet potato casserole that makes for a great yummy side dish for Thanksgiving.

SWEET POTATO CASSEROLE

8 sweet potatoes (peeled and cut)
2 tablespoons butter
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
salt and pepper
1/3 cup brown sugar
12 large marshmallows
1/4 cup pecan halves

Boil the sweet potatoes until tender. Toss with remaining ingredients except the marshmallows. Spoon mixture into a greased casserole dish. Cover with the marshmallows, sprinkle with the pecans and bake in a 350-degree oven for 30 minutes.

Holiday Food Safety: Protecting Guests From Foodborne Illnesses

A Message From The Quincy Health Department

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

RUTH JONES

Cooks across the country are making plans for holiday feasts that include everyone's desired dishes, from cornbread stuffing to pumpkin pie. Friends and families are invited, and excitement is in the air. Food safety is probably not the first thing you think about when planning a holiday feast. But to keep your gathering from becoming memorable in a bad way, it's important to take steps to protect your guests from foodborne illnesses.

While it is well known that the U.S. food supply is one of the safest in the world, according to the CDC, approximately 76 million people get sick from foodborne illness each year. Food safety can always be a unique challenge during the holidays. Not only is it cold and flu season, but the menu may include more dishes than there is room for in the refrigerator or oven. It takes skill, timing and organization to execute a healthy holiday meal, with dishes that need to be kept at proper temperatures, to ward off the growth of dangerous bacteria. Furthermore, many guests may include people who are especially vulnerable to foodborne illnesses such as older people, young children, pregnant women, or anyone with a compromised immune system. Your menu may also include food offerings from friends and relatives that have traveled for hours, or have been kept at room temperature for extended periods of time.

Typical symptoms of foodborne illness are vomiting, diarrhea, and flu-like symptoms, which can start anywhere from hours to days after contaminated food or drinks are consumed. The symptoms usually are not long-lasting in healthy people, a few hours or a few days, and usually cease without medical treatment. But foodborne illness can be severe and even life-threatening to anyone, especially those considered most at risk.

To make sure your holiday dinner is not only delicious but as safe as possible plan ahead. Professional chefs do it, and so should you. Consider your refrigerator, freezer and oven space, and how you'll manage to keep hot foods at 135 degrees or higher and cold foods at 40 degrees or below. If you need to use coolers, make sure you have plenty of clean ice and check it frequently to be sure the ice hasn't melted. Don't rely on the natural outdoor temperature on the porch to keep foods at proper temperature.

The first rule of safe food preparation in the home is to keep everything clean.

- Wash hands with warm water and soap for 20 seconds before and after handling any food. This means the time it takes to sing 'Happy Birthday' twice.
- Wash food-contact surfaces (cutting boards, dishes, utensils, countertops) with hot, soapy water after preparing each food item and before going on to the next item.
- Rinse fruits and vegetables thoroughly under cool running water and use a produce brush to remove surface dirt.
- Do not rinse raw meat and poultry before cooking. Washing these foods makes it more likely for bacteria to spread to areas around the sink and countertops.

Rule number two is separate. Don't give bacteria the opportunity to spread from one food to another (cross-contamination).

- Keep raw eggs, meat, poultry, seafood, and their juices away from foods that won't be cooked. Take this precaution while shopping in the store, when storing in the refrigerator at home, and while preparing meals.
- Consider using one cutting board only for foods that will be cooked (such as raw meat, poultry, and seafood) and another one for those that will not (such as raw fruits and vegetables).
- Keep fruits and vegetables that will be eaten raw separate from other foods such as raw meat, poultry or seafood—and from kitchen utensils used for those products.
- Do not put cooked meat or other food that is ready to eat on an unwashed plate that has held any raw eggs, meat, poultry, seafood, or their juices.

Rule number three is cook. Food is safely cooked when it reaches a high enough internal temperature to kill harmful bacteria.

- Color is not a reliable indicator of doneness. Use a food thermometer to make sure meat, poultry, and fish are cooked to a safe internal temperature. To check a turkey for safety, insert a food thermometer into the innermost part of the thigh and wing and the thickest part of the breast. The turkey is safe when the temperature reaches 165°F. If the turkey is stuffed, the temperature of the stuffing should be 165°F.
- Bring sauces, soups, and gravies to a rolling boil when reheating.
- Cook eggs until the yolk and white are firm. When making your own eggnog or other recipe calling for raw eggs, use pasteurized shell eggs, liquid or frozen pasteurized egg products, or powdered egg whites.
- Don't eat uncooked cookie dough, which may contain raw eggs.

The final rule is chill. Refrigerate foods quickly because harmful bacteria grow rapidly at room temperature.

- Refrigerate leftovers and takeout foods and any type of food that should be refrigerated within two hours.
- Set your refrigerator at or below 40°F and the freezer at 0°F. Check both periodically with an appliance thermometer.
- Never defrost food at room temperature. Food can be defrosted safely in the refrigerator, under cold running water, or in the microwave. Food thawed in cold water or in the microwave should be cooked immediately.
- Allow the correct amount of time to properly thaw food. For example, a 20-pound turkey needs four to five days to thaw completely when thawed in the refrigerator.
- Leftovers should be used within three to four days.

Remember, be "food safe" for the health of you and your family all year, not just in the holiday season. Happy eating!

Quincy Artist's Ornaments On National Christmas Tree

By SCOTT JACKSON

Ornaments inspired by John and Abigail Adams will adorn the National Christmas Tree is Washington, D.C., this year and were designed by Sharon Pierce, owner of the Art Spot on Franklin Street.

The National Park Foundation recently announced Pierce had been chosen to create Massachusetts' ornaments for the "America Celebrates: Ornaments from Across the USA" display at President's Park on the grounds of the White House. Pierce joins local artists from each U.S. State, territory and the District of Columbia who are designing ornaments inspired by the country's national parks and their programs, paying tribute to the centennial of the National Park Service in 2016.

"It is an honor to be selected because the national parks are such an important part of every community," Pierce said in a press release. "I am excited to be a part of the America Celebrates display because it gave me a chance to reflect on what an interesting and rich place my home – the city of Quincy – is."

The globe ornaments were designed using mixed media and the connection to Quincy's history. Quincy's nickname, the City of Presidents, inspired Pierce to use various portraits of John and Abigail Adams and the love letters they exchanged, which were written in the same spirit embodied by the holiday season.

"Art can be an incredible way for people to connect with national parks and we're thrilled to carry on the time honored tradition of debuting ornaments from all over the country," Will Shafroth, president and CEO of the National Park Foundation, said. "We're honored to have Sharon Pierce represent Massachusetts in this year's America Celebrates display."

The 93rd annual National Christmas Tree Lighting will be held this year on Dec. 3 at 5 p.m. The tradition dates back to 1923, when President Calvin Coolidge lit a Christmas tree in front of 3,000 spectators on Christmas Eve.

In addition to the America Celebrates display, President's Park is home to a number of family-oriented holiday attractions including nightly performances and a model train display.

Council Mixed Over Downtown Affordable Housing

rently applies to all residential projects in the city that require a special permit, variance or site plan review from any board or commission and include 10 or more residential units. Under the zoning code, 10 percent of units in applicable projects must be made affordable – targeted at residents who make less than 80 percent of the median income for the area. Developers can also opt to make a payment into the affordable housing trust fund in lieu of building on site units.

Those requirements, however, do not currently apply to projects permitted under the Urban Revitalization and Development Plan for Quincy Center. Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci has proposed the change to the zoning code, which would require such urban renewal projects to comply with the Inclusionary Zoning Ordinance. The council's ordinance committee reviewed the proposal Monday night for nearly 90 minutes after a half-hour public hearing on the change. The committee did not vote on the change because the Planning Board must first hold a separate hearing on the matter.

Palmucci spoke in favor of his amendment Monday night and said Quincy Center should be reflective of the city as a whole.

"I don't know that it is OK to just have an affordable housing policy – the Inclusionary Zoning Ordinance – that only applies to every neighborhood in the city of Quincy except for the downtown," Palmucci said.

"My experience on this council has been that our downtown should be reflective of our community. It is an ideal place for folks to live because of the amenities the downtown has and will expand with the redevelopment of that area, especially its proximity to public transportation."

Council President Joseph Finn also spoke in favor of Palmucci's proposal. He said the exemption for urban renewal uses in the Inclusionary Zoning Ordinance was added because Street-Works, Quincy's former master developer for the downtown, had agreed to pay $10,000 per new residential unit built into the affordable housing trust in its agreement with the city.

"There isn't a master developer – that's gone – so now what we have is segments and separate developers who are coming in and negotiating," Finn said. "By us no longer having this [requirement] within the context of the zoning ordinance, now we have no basis to negotiate contributions or contributing to the trust in any way, shape or form.

"That's why this amendment, which I support tremendously and congratulate Councillor Palmucci for putting it forward, I support it…[with] the number of units that are springing up, it (the IZO) doesn't seem to be deterring in any way, shape or form the development of residential properties."

Councillor Michael McFarland said he was opposed to requiring developers in Quincy Center to comply with the affordable housing requirments. He said doing so would put too many strings on downtown developers and such a change should wait until next year, when the Planning Department and Metropolitan Area Planning Commission release a housing plan for the entire city.

"I don't think we should be putting any more strings on downtown development. Next year, when I'm not sitting here and you're looking at the plan you can put in whatever amendments you want to put in. Once the new plan has been issued, you can take a look at the whole city, but I think to do that, to put more strings on the developer at this point in time, would not be good," McFarland said.

"The interest rate now is favorable. There seems to be a want and need to bring projects to downtown. I think we should continue the momentum."

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee concurred with McFarland.

"I don't see any reason why we shouldn't continue to try to have incentives for downtown redevelopment. I think that these early steps that we take downtown have to be eminently successful in order to set the tone and as Councillor McFarland has mentioned, it's one of the more expensive areas for development," McNamee said.

"Absent any arguments that really tell me demonstrably why developers don't need to be incentivized for downtown, I'm not going to vote for it."

In response to those concerns, Palmucci said there is enough talent and ability in the mayoral administration to come up with other incentives for developers in Quincy Center besides forgoing affordable housing. Those could include tax incentives, for example.

"You designate an area. If someone develops in that area, they get a tax relief for a period of years that you can negotiate," Palmucci said. "We did it when Granite Telecommunications thought about moving down south and out of the city of Quincy.

"The City Council and the mayor recognized that that is a quality employer, it's a good place to work, and it's a business that we want to keep in Quincy. So what did we do? We incentivized them through tax relief to stay in the city and to expand their operations here."

During the public hearing portion of the meeting, Quincy Chamber of Commerce President Dean Rizzo stated development in the downtown costs five to eight times more than it does elsewhere in the city, which he said was the reason why urban renewal uses are currently exempt from the IZO. Rizzo said the chamber is opposed to Palmucci's proposal to require downtown developers to comply with the IZO and instead the council should wait for the new housing plan for the city to be released next year.

"Our opposition is not against the creation of affordable housing, obviously. Our opposition is to take a step back and think about what we're doing before we move forward," Rizzo said.

The change was supported by the Rev. Sheldon Bennett and the Rev. Dr. Adolph Wismar, both of whom sit on the city's affordable housing trust committee; Sandy Eaton of the South Shore Coalition for Human Rights; and Edgewood Circle resident Bill Zamzow.

"The current market rate units that are being built in the city are typically renting in the range from $2,000 to $3.000 a month," Bennett said. "That's a rental figure that's really beyond the reach of typical below median [income] working people – schoolteachers, officer workers, production and service employees that frankly our employers need to support and staff their businesses."

"Folks are really hurt-

Council Mixed Over Downtown Affordable Housing Requirement

ing," Eaton said. "The city needs affordable housing – it needs lots of affordable housing – and we can't afford to exclude any particular neighborhood from this mandate and as a matter of fact we need to explore ways to expand it to make this as welcoming a community and as responsive a community to its working class folks as possible."

Under Chapter 40B of state law, communities are required to meet certain requirements for affordable housing or developers who propose affordable housing projects can bypass local zoning rules.

Sean Glennon, the Planning Department's director of community development, said Quincy is not in danger of failing to meet the requirments laid out in Chapter 40B because it exceeds the land area minimum for affordable housing. That minimum requires 1.5 percent of developable land be used for affordable housing and 3.26 percent of such land in the city is dedicated to affordable housing, Glennon said, not factoring in several recent projects that would increase the percentage.

Chapter 40B also establishes a goal of having 10 percent of all housing units in a city dedicated for affordable housing. In Quincy, 9.6 percent of all units are dedicated for affordable housing. The city, Glennon said, is currently 178 units short of meeting the 10 percent mark though that doesn't include several recently completely projects with affordable housing units, which would reduce the shortfall to 135 once certified by the state.

Joseph Koch Field Dedication Sunday

A ceremony dedicating the playing field behind Atlantic Middle School to long-time Park Department and Public Works employee Joseph W. Koch will be held at noon on Sunday at the newly restored field on Hollis Avenue.

The field was one of the last projects Koch worked on prior to his death in August 2014. The brother of Mayor Thomas Koch, Joe Koch was a United States Army Veteran who dedicated nearly 40 years to the City -- leading a number of major projects during that time.

After his death, the Quincy City Council, School Committee, and the Park and Recreation Board all took formal action to formally dedicate the field in Koch's honor.

Koch went to work for the City in 1977, where he spent most of career in the Park and Forestry Department as a heavy equipment operator, foreman and arborist. He served as the primary equipment operator for a wide range of major park improvements, including Adams Field, Veterans' Memorial Stadium, the Adams Walk in Merrymount Park, the Faxon Field track facility, the reconstruction of Cavanagh Field and the new greenspace that has become part of the Quincy High School campus on Coddington Street.

He also worked as a foreman in the Department of Public Works, supervising the City's snow removal operation and leading an overhaul of the DPW's rear yard.

Councillors Want Anti-Discrimination Ordinance To Include Gender Identity protect transgender individuals as well.

"Quite simply the reason that we're seeking to do this is it doesn't currently exist and it should," Palmucci said. "By amending our anti-discrimination ordinance to include transgender individuals, we're simply saying we will not allow a class of people to be discriminated against. We would be adding gender identity to the list of basis upon which we formally disallow discrimination in the city of Quincy to join the likes of race, sex, color, age, ethnicity and religion.

"What does that mean? That means in the city of Quincy transgender people could not be discriminated when it comes to housing, employment, education and public accommodations. Public accommodations are retail stores, health care facilities, hotels, public transportation, public spaces and restaurants."

Seventeen states and Washington, D.C., as well as more than 200 communities nationwide have passed anti-discrimination laws protecting gender identity, according to the amendment. Legislation pending in both chambers on Beacon Hill would add gender identity to the state's anti-discrimination law, Palmucci added at the meeting.

"I believe this is our opportunity in the city of Quincy to stand up as a community and say we, the city of Quincy, won't tolerate this type of discrimination," he stated. "No one should be denied services or access to public spaces on the basis of gender identity."

Outgoing QVC Commander Richard Keane Commended

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council on Monday night commended outgoing Quincy Veterans' Council Commander Richard Keane for his service to the country, his fellow veterans and the community as a whole.

Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes, the chairwoman of the council's veterans service committee, presented the commendation. It's important to remember the sacrifices made by veterans and their families, she stated.

"Some of us become complacent. We become numb to world events and to the service and sacrifice of our men and women in service to our military and our country and it's important to keep their service and their sacrifice in our minds and hearts," Hughes said.

"I just want to recognize not only Richard's service to his country as a veteran but his service to his fellow veterans here in Quincy and to the city really. I know your dedication to your fellow veterans will continue through your involvement with the Morrisette Post, the Cavanagh Chapter 79 DAV and the Quincy Elks.

"This council thanks you for your outstanding service throughout this year."

"I would just like to thank you for your service," Council President Joseph Finn added, "but not simply that but the veterans community itself and the level of organization and the work that you do to make certain veterans have their needs met is absolutely incredible."

Keane said it's been an honor to serve as the QVC's commander the past year and said he is proud to live in Quincy, his adopted hometown.

"It's been an honor to serve this last year in the capacity of commander of the Quincy Veterans' Council," Keane said. "As some of you may know, and some of you probably don't, Quincy is my adopted city. I grew up in Somerville and people always say to me in Somerville, 'what's it like in Quincy?' and I always tell them 'it's like Somerville with an ocean.'

"I've been here since '71 and this is my home and I'm so proud to be part of Quincy and its historic features. Thank you very much."

$7,500 In Donations Accepted

The City Council has accepted $7,500 in donations the past two weeks, the bulk of it benefiting the Mayor's Charity Cup Golf Tournament.

The City Council on Monday night accepted a $2,500 donation from National Grid to the annual golf tournament, which raises funds for various local charities. On Nov. 9, the council accepted donations totaling $4,000 toward the tournament, including $2,000 from HighTechnigue Inc. and $1,000 each from Quincy Access Television and Quincy College.

The council on Nov. 9 also accepted a donation of $1,000 from Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey toward the Quincy Bike Rodeo, which was held earlier this year on Oct. 17.

High Hopes For Newest Husky

Former Red Raider Standout Anthony Green Looks To Earn Time In Northeastern Frontcourt

North Quincy's Anthony Green made his Division I college basketball debut last week, suiting up for the Northeastern University Huskies as they opened their season with an 87-84 overtime win against cross-city rival Boston University.

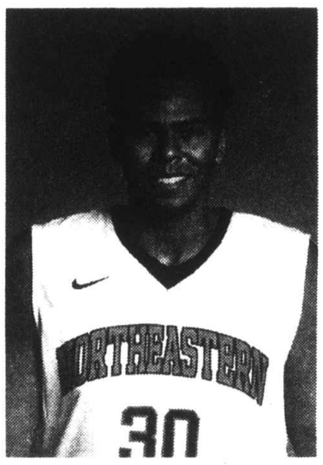
The 6-10, 270-pound center made his presence known soon after entering the game midway through the first half. He followed up a teammate's miss with a putback hoop, registering his first collegiate point and rebound on the same play.

A couple of possessions later, Green took a feed off a pick and roll and attacked the hoop with a two-handed dunk attempt that rattled off the rim as he was fouled. He sank one of two free throws. Green finished the game with three points and one rebound in four minutes of action.

The game was the latest milestone in the fast-rising career of the 2014 North Quincy High School graduate.

After leading the Red Raiders to consecutive appearances in the MIAA Division I South Sectional final in 2013 and 2014, Green collected a wide range of local and statewide honors before announcing he would enroll at Tilton (N.H.) School for a year of postgraduate work.

On a roster full of Division I prospects, Green played the role of defensive stopper in helping the prep powerhouse to a 29-4 record and the Class AA New England Preparatory School Athletic Council title.



ANTHONY GREEN

He enrolled at Northeastern in June and spent the summer taking classes and working out with the team and its strength and conditioning staff.

At Northeastern, Green is expected to come off the bench and contribute to a team that last season won the Colonial Athletic Association (CAA) championship before dropping a 69-65 first-round game to Notre Dame in the NCAA Tournament.

Green is part of a highly regarded recruiting class that Huskies' coach Bill Coen is hoping will replace the production of three frontcourt players lost to graduation. The Huskies were picked to finish third in the CAA.

Other Red Raiders Alumni Playing in College

Green's classmate Efthim Butka is a walk-on member of the basketball team at Saint Anselm College. The 6-4 swingman, now a sophomore at the Division II school in Manchester, N.H., took a year off from basketball to get himself settled academically.

He's hitting the books as a biology major and is now ready to hit the court for the Division II Hawks, who opened their season with two wins last weekend.

This year's squad at Framingham State University is led by twin brothers Dan and Pat Gould, 2013 North Quincy graduates who are beginning their third year playing for the Division III Rams.

Dan starred in a 66-64 weekend loss to Bridgewater State, as he scored 22 points after making six of nine three-pointers and four of five free throws. Pat chipped in with four points and four assists.

Last year, Dan, a 5-8 shooting guard, was third on the team in scoring (7.2), and also led the team in free throws (80%). Dan is majoring in business management.

Pat, the team's 5-9 point guard, started every game and was among the team leaders in assists and steals. He is a history major and plans to pursue a master's degree in education after graduating from Framingham State.

The Goulds, along with Green and Butka – then juniors at NQHS – captivated the city as they led the Red Raiders to the MIAA Division I South Sectional Final in March 2013.

Salvation Army Seeking Volunteer Bell Ringers

The Salvation Army is seeking volunteer bell ringers to help with its Red Kettle Campaign this holiday season.

The Red Kettle Campaign is one of the biggest fundraisers for The Salvation Army and it is set to start on Nov. 23rd in the Quincy, Braintree, and Weymouth area.

The majority of shifts start at 10 a.m. and go through 6 p.m. There are also some evening shifts.

There are 16 locations throughout the area, times 8 hours a day, that's over 4,000 hours that is needed to be covered by bell ringers.

The money raised at the Red Kettles each year is critical in funding The Salvation Army emergency assistance programs year round.

It takes a lot of community support to help cover over 4,000 hours of Bell Ringing. Many groups such as churches, businesses, and service clubs as well as individual volunteers have helped to cover some of those 4,000 hours and many more volunteers and groups are still needed.

"Giving of your time to volunteer to ring a bell at one of our kettle locations is a great way to connect and give back to our community," said Captain Timothy Ross.

Volunteers of all ages and groups are welcome to assist with the program and can contact Captain Timothy Ross at The Salvation Army office at 617-472-2345 or via email at Timothy.Ross@use.salvationarmy.org to sign up.

No Foul Play Suspected In Man's Death

By SCOTT JACKSON

No foul play is suspected in the death of a 62-year-old Division Street man whose body was found in a marsh near his house last week.

The body was recovered shortly after 2 p.m. on Nov. 12, after the Quincy Fire Department received a report from a passerby who saw the body in the marsh at the end of Division Street behind State Street South, according to Deputy Fire Chief Paul Griffith. The body, Griffith said, was in about four feet of water at the time and appeared to have been in the marsh for a couple days.

David Traub, a spokesman for Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey, identified the man as Ronald P. Donovan of Division Street. He said Donovan was known to walk and bird watch in the marshy area near his home.

The state Medical Examiner's Officer was called to the scene to investigate the death, but Traub said no signs of foul play were found there.

"There were no signs of foul play at the scene and the medical examiner found nothing suspicious," Traub said in a statement. "The cause and manner of death remain undetermined pending toxicology tests."

of local services, including The Salvation Army's Emergency Assistance program in Quincy. The Salvation Army expects that the number of people in need across the Commonwealth will be at or near record levels this year. Recent economic indicators reveal that the poverty level remains unchanged in the state despite economic recovery in some sectors.

"Given the need we are seeing, it's critical that we get off to a strong start this year," added Captain Nicole Ross. "We are fortunate to live in such a caring and supportive community and we're asking our fellow residents to help us achieve a successful Red Kettle Campaign in Quincy."

Salvation Army officials stress that any contribution will help — and donations of time are accepted as gratefully as donations of money.

Red Kettles will be set up outside of all Stop & Shop and Shaw's/ Star Markets locations in the Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth, and Hingham area as well as Roche Brothers and Walmart in Quincy. Other locations include the South Shore Plaza and Kmart in Braintree and the Walmart in Weymouth.

Online Red Kettle donations can be made at www.salvationarmyma.org/Quincy.

"Reaching out to those in need by volunteering to ring bells is a wonderful way to connect with the community, to give back, to share blessings, and to be blessed in return," said Captain Timothy Ross. To volunteer this Christmas season, contact Captain Timothy Ross at 617-472-2345 or by email at Timothy.Ross@use.salvationarmy.org.

The Red Kettle tradition began in 1891 when Salvation Army Captain Joseph McFee wanted to help feed needy citizens in San Francisco. McFee remembered the ferry landings in Liverpool England, where people would sit with small kettles that travelers would toss spare change into to help the less fortunate. Placing his own kettle on Market Street in Oakland California, McFee was able to help individuals on Christmas. The idea traveled to Boston in 1897 and the Red Kettle Campaign has been a tradition ever since.

Quarry Hills Apartments Approved

October meeting, calling it a "very dangerous intersection."

Between the October meeting and the one on Nov. 9, City Solicitor Jim Timmins said he worked with the developer on a set of conditions for the project, including the $250,000 that will be set aside for traffic work. By agreeing to the conditions in advance, the solicitor explained, both sides are looking to avoid any potential legal challenge.

"The type of agreement that has been reached tonight is a reflection on not only the interests and hard work of the parties, but the fact that both parties are looking to avoid any sort of appeal," Timmins said.

City traffic engineer Deborah Finnigan said she met with state traffic engineers at the site following the Oct. 5 meeting to review potential improvements.

A radar detector was installed on the off-ramp for two days in early November. Eighty-five percent of vehicles exiting on the off-ramp those two days did so at 40 miles per hour or less. The maximum speed was 67 miles per hour and at least one vehicle came off the interstate driving 55 miles per hour or more each hour.

"At least one time per every hour somebody was clearly going faster than they should, but 85 percent were going 40 or under, which is not an unreasonable speed," Finnigan said.

Current conditions, she said, do not warrant the installation of a traffic signal at the intersection. That is unlikely to change in the future, even with the new apartments being built at Quarry Hills.

A portion of the money being set aside – in the range of $15,000 – will go towards a road safety audit. As part of the audit, city and state traffic engineers and public safety officials will meet to brainstorm possible improvements that could be made to the intersection and off-ramp, which would then be studied. Such improvements could include realigning Willard Street and/or the off-ramp, installing a traffic island, even removing the off-ramp entirely and redirecting traffic elsewhere.

In the short-term, lanes leading into the intersection will be repainted and new signage may be installed, as well as a permanent radar detector.

The developer will also pay $8,000 per unit into the city's Affordable Housing Trust Fund, a total of $2.15 million. Locke agreed to the $8,000 per unit figure, which is on par with similar projects, at the Nov. 9 meeting.

Another condition of the special permit requires the project to adhere to the building dimensions originally presented to the council. Officials with the Granite Links Golf Club had vetted those dimensions to ensure the view of Boston from their golf course and restaurant would not be impacted; former Mayor Walter Hannon, speaking on behalf Granite Links, backed the proposal at the June public hearing.

Toys For Tots Drive At Registry Of Deeds

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell announces that the Registry will once again be sponsoring its annual U.S. Marine Corps Reserve Toys for Tots drive.

"The Registry of Deeds is again delighted to partner with a charity like the Marine Corps Reserve's Toys for Tots program," said O'Donnell. "Since 1947, when the program was established, because a wife of a Marine officer couldn't find an organization to take a Raggedy Ann doll, approximately a half billion gifts have been donated."

Donations of new and unwrapped games and toys can be bought to the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, 649 High St., Dedham starting Monday, Nov. 23rd through noon Wednesday, Dec. 16th.

A marked donation bin will be set up in the Registry lobby Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. for donations.

"The success of the drive is the direct result of the Yuletide efforts of charitable citizens in Norfolk County and across America who take a moment of their time to remember those less fortunate. By dropping off gifts at the Toys for Tots sites, the joys of the holiday season can be created for so many," O'Donnell said.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Thursday, November 12, 2015, at approximately 8:00 p.m., Officer William O'Neill was dispatched to Stop & Shop on Southern Artery on a report of an unwanted male that was said to be "huffing" on the pharmacy side. Huffing is the intentional inhalation of chemical vapors to attain a mental "high" or euphoric effect.

Upon arrival, the Officer spotted several people waving him over and pointing to a male who was shirtless. The Officer saw the Stop & Shop Loss Prevention Officer standing a safe distance away from the male, who now started to walk away into the parking lot. Officer O'Neill recognized the male due to an extensive history of huffing. The male began flexing his muscles and moving his arms in an aggressive manner. The Officer radioed headquarters and requested a second Officer to assist as he followed the male. The male began making growling/grunting noises. The Officer, using his cruiser, cut off the path of the male, who then turned and walked quickly in the opposite direction. Officer O'Neill exited his cruiser and told the male to stop so they could talk. The male then walked faster and broke into a run towards Southern Artery.

Officer Bruce Tait arrived on scene and pulled in front of the male, cutting him off. Officer Tait stepped out of his cruiser in an attempt to talk to the male, who then charged at the Officer aggressively, with raised hands, in an assaultive posture. As the male neared, Officer Tait deployed his pepper spray to the face of the male which stopped his assault. The Officer ordered the male to get down on the ground. After first refusing to do so and still a threat, Officer Tait deployed his baton and administered one strike to the male's right leg. This brought the male to the ground, which made him less threatening. While on the ground, the male continued to struggle. One handcuff was applied to the male's wrist, but he refused to put his other arm/hand behind his back and attempted to push his body up from the pavement. Officer O'Neill assisted Officer Tait in trying to hold the male down.

At this point, the Loss Prevention Officer assisted in holding the male's legs. Officer Tait radioed for assistance due to the violent actions taken by the male to escape. Prior to the arrival of help, the Officers were able to control the male's right arm and handcuff him. Due to the male's muscular size, two pairs of cuffs had to be utilized. Once the male was secured in the cruiser awaiting medical treatment for exposure to pepper spray, Officer O'Neill interviewed the Loss Prevention Officer who said that the customers reported that the male was outside touching people and yelling at them. Initial reports were that the male was throwing up in a bag. The Loss Prevention Officer went outside and saw the male with his head in a bag, and he recognized that he was huffing. He said he approached the male, who immediately kicked him (shod foot) on the right leg. He described the male as being very aggressive, taking off his shirt, flexing and making noises. The Loss Prevention Officer brought the Officer to the trash barrel and pointed out a white plastic bag containing an orange liquid, which he said was the substance the male was huffing. The bag/liquid was left in the trash since it could not safely be contained for evidence purposes. Another employee of Stop & Shop told the Officers that he was working at the outside pickup area when the male walked over and placed the bag with the liquid inside the storage area. He said that at one point the male hit/touched him on his left shoulder area. The employee also said that he observed the male grab a customer from behind, wrapping both arms around the person.

The male was transported by the prisoner transport wagon to the station for booking. The Officers inspected the male's backpack and found a (2/3 empty) can of "Strypeeze" paint stripper. (Quart size) The can has the warning, "harmful vapor". At booking/ property inventory, Officer Dave Coletti (booking/cell block officer) found a bottle of Ibuprofen pills (93 white, oval pills stamped 1P465) in one of the bags belonging to the male. The prescription bottle belonged to someone else. This item was given to Detective Keenan (Drug Control Unit) to be processed for analysis by the state lab. The male was charged with "Assault and Battery with a Dangerous Weapon, to wit Shod Foot, Resisting Arrest, Disorderly Conduct, Inhaling Toxic Substance, and Possession of Class E Drug."

As a result of placing the resisting the 38 year old homeless male in custody, Officer O'Neill sustained a laceration to his left hand. Nice Work!

Jorgensen Heading To URI On Basketball Scholarship

Record-Setting Quincy High Senior Signs Letter Of Intent

By BILL GRIFFIN

It was fitting that on her big day, on a day when many athletes would have chatted about themselves until the moon rose in the sky, Nicole Jorgensen talked about other people, special people who made her journey possible.

Jorgensen signed a letter of intent to play basketball and attend the University of Rhode Island on a full scholarship before a large group of family, teammates, friends, teachers and school staff at Quincy High School last week.

When she was asked about her long and winding road from the shy, nervous days of middle schools, to her first tentative steps onto the basketball floor in high school, to the Division 1 prospect she has become, Jorgensen talked not of herself, but of teammate Gabby Jerahian and Gabby's father Jay who passed away from cancer in their sophomore year.

"I owe everything to Gabby's father," said Jorgensen. "He taught me everything I know about the game, he took us to games everywhere when we were younger, and he always encouraged us. I wouldn't be here today signing this letter if it weren't for him."

The timing was perfect. Signing day for Jorgensen was Nov. 12. Jay Jerahian's birthday was Nov. 12. Sometimes things work out just right.

"I hope somewhere he knows I wish him a Happy Birthday. This is all because of what he did for me," said Jorgensen.

The people in her life, her family, were the main reason Jorgensen chose Rhode Island. Many schools were interested. She wanted to stay close to home. Her mother has not missed one of her volleyball, basketball or softball games since middle school. Her brother just became a father. It is as important to Jorgensen to be an aunt, a daughter, and a sister as it is to be a basketball player.

"I'm very family-oriented," she said. "I wanted my mother and family to share my college experience. I didn't want to miss out on the new baby. When I visited Rhode Island I found out that the school motto was: Family First. I felt a connection with the girls who play there. The people there made the decision easy for me."

Jorgensen won't say it, but Rhode Island is getting a wonderful basketball player. She holds the Quincy High records for blocks and rebounds in a game, in a season, and in a career. She has 775 career rebounds and 223 career blocks. She had a game with 25 rebounds and a game with 13 blocks. She still has her senior year in front of her, a senior year which could be most memorable, and she may leave behind records for blocks, rebounding and scoring which will not soon be touched.

The numbers tell only a small part of the story. She has become a basketball player. She knows how to play the game. She knows how to kick the ball out to open shooters to counter the endless double and triple-

The ceremony was held before school Nov. 12 and was attended by administrators, coaches, friends, family and teammates.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

Chiropractor

RHYME OR REASON

We all like to think that things happen for a reason. When we experience back pain, causes may include a herniated disc, arthritis, fractures, or spinal misalignment. However, it's often the case that no specific diagnosis can be made. Such "non-specific" back pain, which may be triggered by lifting, twisting "the wrong way," or even sneezing, can be localized or it can radiate slightly into the buttocks and thighs. While its cause may not be pinpointed by objective tests, contributing factors are likely to include muscle weakness, imbalance, or overuse, as well as sitting too much, poor posture, and joint wear and tear. It is the chiropractor's job to take all into consideration and formulate an effective treatment plan.

At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, our concern is the total health of our patients. Through the use of conservative, non-surgical, drug-free care, we provide treatment from acute symptomatic relief to wellness care. Please call 617:472.4220 and let us help you gain relief from any discomforts you may be experiencing. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. Don't suffer needlessly, try chiropractic.

P.S. Some patients experience back pain due to restricted movement in their spine or pelvis, while others have pain that arises from an inability to control excessive movement in these same structures.

'One For The Thumb' For West Quincy Elks

Defeat Houghs Neck Manets 23-6 For 5th Youth Football Championship In 6 Years

By JOE REARDON

With the preliminary games and cheerleading competition complete, the crowd in a packed Veterans Memorial Stadium settled in for the highly anticipated showdown between the West Quincy Elks and Houghs Neck Manets for the varsity championship title game in the Quincy Youth Football League last Sunday afternoon.

What they got was plenty of hitting and some big plays from scrimmage from both teams to cap off a day of festivities at the stadium.

Hard running Stuart Dozier proved to be wild card as he put up a monster game. The elusive back rushed for 114 yards and all three of West Quincy's touchdowns as the Elks captured their fifth title in the past six years with a 23-6 win over a tough Manets club.

Elks quarterback Franco Calabro, who threw for 101 yards, was confident if West Quincy played its brand of smash mouth football for the entire 36 minutes, the team would come away with yet another championship trophy.

"We just wanted to run all over them and beat them physically," said Calabro near midfield shortly after the final horn. "The more physical team wins. We've been saying that all year. He (coach Justin Thorley) told us if we beat them physi-

WEST QUINCY quarterback Franco Calabro is chased out of the pocket by Houghs Neck's Michael Cugini. Calabro threw for 101 yards for the Elks in a 23-6 in over the Manets to win the Quincy Youth Football varsity championship Sunday at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

HOUGHS NECK'S Shane Murphy races 23 yards and eludes a West Quincy tackler to give the Manets a 6-0 lead in the second quarter against the Elks.

'We Remember Their Commitment To Our Nation'

Over 300 Attend Veterans Day Indoor Ceremony At QHS Gymnasium

By SCOTT JACKSON

The example set by America's veterans provides a great advantage to today's servicemen and women, a past national commandant of the United States Marine Corps League told a crowd of more than 300 veterans and residents at the city's annual ceremony marking Veterans Day.

The Nov. 11 ceremony was held inside the Munroe MacLean Gymnasium at Quincy High School; inclement weather forced the relocation of the ceremony to the gym and the cancellation of a planned parade for the first time in more than 25 years.

Those in attendance filled two sets of bleachers inside the gymnasium. Among the crowd were dozens of veterans; Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts; city and state officials; and members of the Quincy High football team, who watched the ceremony from the elevated track overlooking the gym after their practice was moved outside to accommodate the ceremony.

James Laskey Sr., a Vietnam veteran and past national commandant of the U.S. Marine Corps League, was the featured speaker at this year's ceremony. Recalling the time he was told "when we pull the pin on the hand grenade, Mr. Hand Grenade is not our friend,” Laskey said the men and women who serve today have state-of-the-art training and equipment.

“I’m here to tell you that these young men and women are performing that mission with skill and with honor that has been unequaled. The training and equipment that these young warriors receive are nothing less than state-of-the-art – it is the best that our engineering minds can provide,” Laskey said. “The technological advances in equipment have been spectacular.”

Complementing those technological advantages is the example set by veterans who served in wars past.

“Even with that military wisdom and state-of-the-art equipment, we still have another great advantage: They have the example of you, yesterday’s American veterans. You that stand so proudly out there; you who were instrumental in developing the foundation of tactics in use today,” Laskey said.

“Make no mistake – this legacy has been passed down from the first American veterans who took a stand on Lexington Green in 1775 to those warriors recently discharged. You can be proud of our veterans of today. They continue to raise the bar of courage and decency.”

Veterans Day, Laskey stated, is a day to pay tribute to all veterans regardless of whether they served in times of war or peace.

“Here in Quincy, and throughout the country, there are countless ceremonies going on at this time. Today we pause to pay tribute to our veterans who have worn the uniforms of our armed forces. It is this day that we remember their commitment to our nation,” Laskey said.

“It doesn’t matter whether they served during a time of war or peace. It doesn’t matter where or when they served. What does matter is that they did serve. They committed themselves to upholding those principles that we as a nation hold dearly. The legacy set forth by our veterans has become this country’s strength and security, securing our liberty and our way of life.

“These veterans are our hidden heroes. One only has to look around at our colleagues and friends, neighbors and family members; they are all there. They have all answered the call of duty and returned home to live in the land they defended.

“Our veterans are drawn from several generations and many backgrounds. They’re Americans who remember the swift conflict of both Persian Gulf Wars and those who served during the long Cold War vigil. They are veterans who remember the heat of Vietnam and the bitter cold of Korea. They are members of the Greatest Generation who served under the greatest generals and admirals of World War II; these heroes are now in their 90s and many of them are still with us today.”

Laskey also spoke of the work being done by veterans’ service organizations in Quincy and beyond.

“Your veterans’ service organizations of today are still thinking of our fellow Americans who were missing in action and where their fate is still undetermined. We in the veterans’ community will not rest until the fullest possible accounting for every life has been made,” Laskey said.

“As a member of Quincy’s William R. Caddy detachment of the Marine Corps League for the last 47 years, I know personally of the work that your veterans’ service organizations do within the city. They continue to lead by example and are committed to improving the life and welfare of our veterans. You can find them donating both money and time at the VA hospital.”

Laskey was one of several speakers at the hour-long ceremony.

GEORGE NICHOLSON, a U.S. Air Force veteran of the Vietnam War and Quincy's director of Veterans Services, receives applause after his remarks at the Veterans Day observance at Quincy High School. Nicholson noted the city's outstanding demonstration of patriotism during the Vietnam War. 'Veterans Day Is A Day We Reflect On The Contributions And Sacrifices Made By All Our Service Members'

The following is the text of the keynote address by James Laskey, a past national commandant of the U.S. Marine Corps League, at the Quincy Veterans Day observance at the Quincy High School gymnasium.

By JAMES LASKEY

We are gathered here today to celebrate Veterans Day on the anniversary of the armistice that ended World War I. The armistice began on the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month. The guns fell silent. It was said that it was 'the war to end all wars.'

That was 94 years ago. I only wish that were true. Today, as we have had over the last 94 years, we still have servicemen and women engaged in combat roles throughout the world.

Today is Veterans Day, a day of national remembrance, a special occasion to honor all the men and women, living and dead, who took up arms in defense of this wonderful country.

It's a day we reflect on the contributions and sacrifices made by all of our service members and their families.

It's a day we demonstrate that our gratitude toward our veterans is more than just mere words. Here in Quincy, and throughout the country, there are countless ceremonies going on at this time. Today we pause to pay tribute to our veterans who have worn the uniforms of our armed forces. It is this day that we remember their commitment to our nation.

It doesn't matter whether they served during a time of war or peace. It doesn't matter where or when they served. What does matter is that they did serve. They committed themselves to upholding those principles that we as a nation hold dearly. The legacy set forth by our veterans has become this country's strength and security, securing our liberty and our way of life.

These veterans are our hidden heroes. One only has to look around at our colleagues and friends, neighbors and family members; they are all there. They have all answered the call of duty and returned home to live in the land they defended.

Our veterans are drawn from several generations and many backgrounds. They're Americans who remember the swift conflict of both Persian Gulf Wars and those who served during the long Cold War vigil. They are veterans who remember the heat of Vietnam and the bitter cold of Korea. They are members of the Greatest Generation who served under the greatest generals and admirals of World War II; these heroes are now in their 90s and many of them are still with us today. America has needed these qualities in every generation and every generation has stepped forward to provide them. What the American veterans have given our country is beyond our power to fully repay; yet today we recognize their honor.

LOCAL VETERANS SALUTE during the singing of the National Anthem at Wednesday's Veterans Day ceremony at Quincy High School. More than 300 people attended the ceremony that was held indoors due to inclement weather. The annual Veterans Day parade was cancelled because of the weather – the first time in 25 years.

Our nation will always be proud of their service and the sacrifices that were made. Today, we speak words of tribute to those veterans and their families who have served as liberators in nations throughout the world. They have by their actions made this and other countries safer.

We imagine all our veterans old and wise, however, the reality is those veterans who have paid the ultimate price were only young men when they died. To those families who lost loved ones they will be remembered every day. We should also remember their sacrifices, not just today nor on Memorial Day, but every day as well.

To those of us who have experienced combat the realities of war become very vivid in our mind's eye. The living combat veterans of today have a responsibility to remember the conditions that led to the wars in which our veterans died. These warriors are a victim of a failed peace process. If we are to continue to remain strong, our strength cannot be misunderstood.

Today we have a chance to speak for all those men and women who are actively involved in combat operations. They have a clear mission to defeat the terrorists and enemies of this country and to aid in the rise of free governments, so that those nations may defend themselves. We as Americans adhere to the principle that all nations deserve the ability to determine their our destiny.

I'm here to tell you that these young men and women are performing that mission with skill and with honor that has been unequaled. The training and equipment that these young warriors receive are nothing less than state-of-the-art – it is the best that our engineering minds can provide. The technological advances in equipment have been spectacular.

Just to show you how far we have come, I can remember being told during my tour in Vietnam that, when we pull the pin on the hand grenade, Mr. Hand Grenade is not our friend. Or the instructions printed on the side of a rocket launcher, which said "aim toward the enemy." And my personal favorite, credited to Gen. MacArthur, "whoever said the pen was mightier than the sword obviously never encountered automatic weapons."

Even with that military wisdom and state-of-the-art equipment, we still have another great advantage: They have the example of you, yesterday's American veterans. Youth that stand so proudly out there, you who were instrumental in developing the foundation of tactics in use today. Make no mistake, this legacy has been passed down from the first American veterans who took a stand on Lexington Green in 1775 to those warriors recently discharged. You can be proud of our veterans of today. They continue to raise the bar of courage and decency.

One final note, your veterans' service organizations of today are still thinking of our fellow Americans who were missing in action and where their fate is still undetermined. We in the veterans' community will not rest until the fullest possible accounting for every life has been made.

As a member of Quincy's William R. Caddy detachment of the Marine Corps League for the last 47 years, I know personally of the work that your veterans' service organizations do within the city. They continue to lead by example and are committed to improving the life and welfare of our veterans. You can find them donating both money and time at the VA hospital.

Mayor Koch, Quincy Council President Finn, and other council members present, may I say thank you for this fitting tribute to our veterans. Thank you for taking this time and recognizing the veterans of this great city and country. Thank you for your continued support of veterans through the work of your Quincy Veterans Council and its chairman, Commander Richard Keane. I also want to take this opportunity to thank your veterans service officer George Nicholson for his outstanding job in relaying available programs to the veterans of the city of Quincy. Thank you so much Nick.

On this national holiday, our hearts are filled with respect and gratitude for the veterans of the United States of America. I wish to say to everyone, thank you so much, God bless you all and God bless the United States of America.

Semper Fidelis.

Mayor Thomas Koch highlighted a ribbon-cutting ceremony held the day before for 12 new units for veterans in Quincy Point as an example of Quincy setting the standard for veterans' services.

"We in Quincy continue to set the standard for providing services for our veterans. Yesterday's event – 12 new family units for returning veterans in the city of Quincy. Don't you think that's awesome?" Koch said.

"But our job is not done. I look around this room and I see so many veterans from the various wars who serve the Legion, the VFWs and continue to serve and advocate for their comrades, those who maybe didn't make it home, those that came home with some physical issues or challenges. We're grateful for all the work they do. They keep our feet to the fire in government to do the right thing."

City Council President Joseph Finn said everyone, especially those who have not served, has a responsibility to ensure the needs of servicemen and women are met.

"Today on Veterans Day we acknowledge all those men and women in uniform who every day, directly or indirectly, encounter the enemies to freedom and democracy both here and abroad," Finn said. "We honor their sacrifice and all of us – particularly those of us who have not served in uniform – have a responsibility to ensure that their needs are met and that we honor such service to our country."

George Nicholson, an Air Force veteran of the Vietnam War and the city's director of veterans' services, said he was disappointed the ceremony had to be moved indoors but was grateful for the turnout.

"I want to thank you all for being here. I'm seeing surprising numbers," Nicholson said.

"As I sit here and look at the bleachers filled as they are, I can't help but be proud here in the City of Presidents to note that the contents of this hall consists of our newest generation of citizens in our scouts, who are just beginning to learn the meaning of duty, honor and country; all the way at the other end of our human spectrum with our Greatest Generation, World War II vets who lived duty, honor and country.

"I am thankful to all of you for being here and I sincerely appreciate the effort that you made."

Nicholson called Quincy one of the most patriotic cities in the state and country, with more residents choosing to join the military than most other Massachusetts communities. He also pointed to the fact that the city's residents consistently met the quota for enlisting in the military during the Vietnam War, meaning that no city residents were ever drafted into service.

"I was recently informed that because the city of Quincy met its quota for volunteers each and every month during that war period, the city of Quincy has the distinction of not having had to draft one single individual into service of our country during the Vietnam War," Nicholson said.

"If that is not an outstanding demonstration of what patriotism is, I don't know what else could be."

Dozens of veterans attended the ceremony, four of whom were recognized by speakers at the event for their service: World War II veterans Robert Noble, Thomas Shepherd and Russell Erikson as well as Korean War veteran Joseph Dunford Sr., whose son Joseph Jr. is the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Gold Star Mother Angela Durkin and Quincy Veterans Council Commander Richard Keane placed two wreaths at the ceremony – one in the shape of a gold star and the other red, white and blue. Durkin's daughter, Ciara, died Sept. 28, 2007, while serving in Afghanistan as a specialist with the Massachusetts National Guard.

Lawrence Norton, a Marine Corps veteran of the Vietnam War, served as master of ceremonies and the Rev. John Swanson, pastor of Union Congregational Church and a Navy veteran, delivered the invocation and benediction. Moe Morad, a Korean War Army veteran, sang the national anthem and Robert LaFleur, a Vietnam era Navy veteran, played "Taps."

Color guards from the Quincy Fire and Police Departments as well as several veterans' groups were also in attendance, standing at attention throughout the ceremony.

DOWN 2-0 to Newton North and trailing 23-5 in the third and eventual title-clinching game for the Tigers, the Quincy girls varsity volleyball team showed its true character battling to the end. Quincy Volleyball Battles To The End

By BILL GRIFFIN

There was one point which told you all you know and you need to know about Quincy's volleyball team.

The Presidents trailed Newton North, 2-0 in games in the sectional finals. They were down, 23-5 in the third game. Most teams would have been thinking about the bus ride home. Quincy played the point of a lifetime.

It was quite simple. Quincy would not allow the ball to touch the floor. The point lasted longer than two productions of Hamlet. They skidded to the floor. They made one-handed saves flying towards the bleachers. They blocked shots, they dug out slams, they dropped to two knees to save the ball after it trickled down the net. They set up passes, they survived kill-shots, they responded with smashes to the Newton side.

It was great stuff. The names were Sarah Gibbons, Jessie Lei, Maggie Parker, Anxhela Hoti, Alica Walker and Danielle Parry. They would not quit on the point, the match or themselves. Finally, Parker sent a spot-on placement which caught an open patch of floor on the Newton side, and the point, as is surely should have, belonged to Quincy.

In the end Newton North was simply too good. That's what happens in the tournament. Only one team wins its final game. The test of a team is to go as far they possibly could, to drain every ounce of ability out of themselves before it was over. Quincy did that before falling to the Tigers, 25-10, 25-17, 25-7 in the Division I Central-East championship game at Algonquin Regional High School Saturday afternoon.

If ever a team should be measured by the journey it took rather than its final stop, it is Quincy. The Presidents went 22-2, won a share of the Patriot League title, earned the top seed in the sectional, and played dramatic, high-quality volleyball in defeating Cambridge Rindge and Latin (25-19, 25-19, 25-27, 25-17) and King Philip (25-22, 15-25, 23-25, 26-24, 16-14) to advance to the finals. In the space of 10 days, they played out the two most exciting sporting events (Canton and King Philip) this reporter has seen this year.

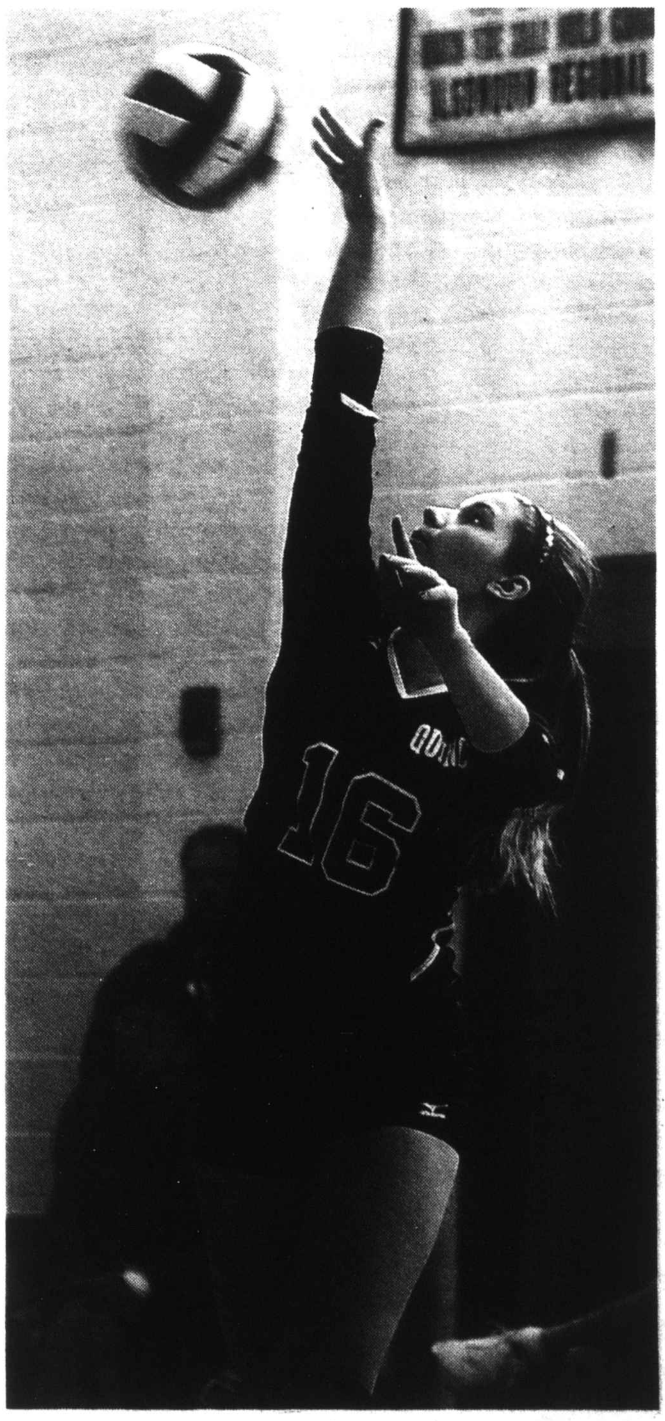
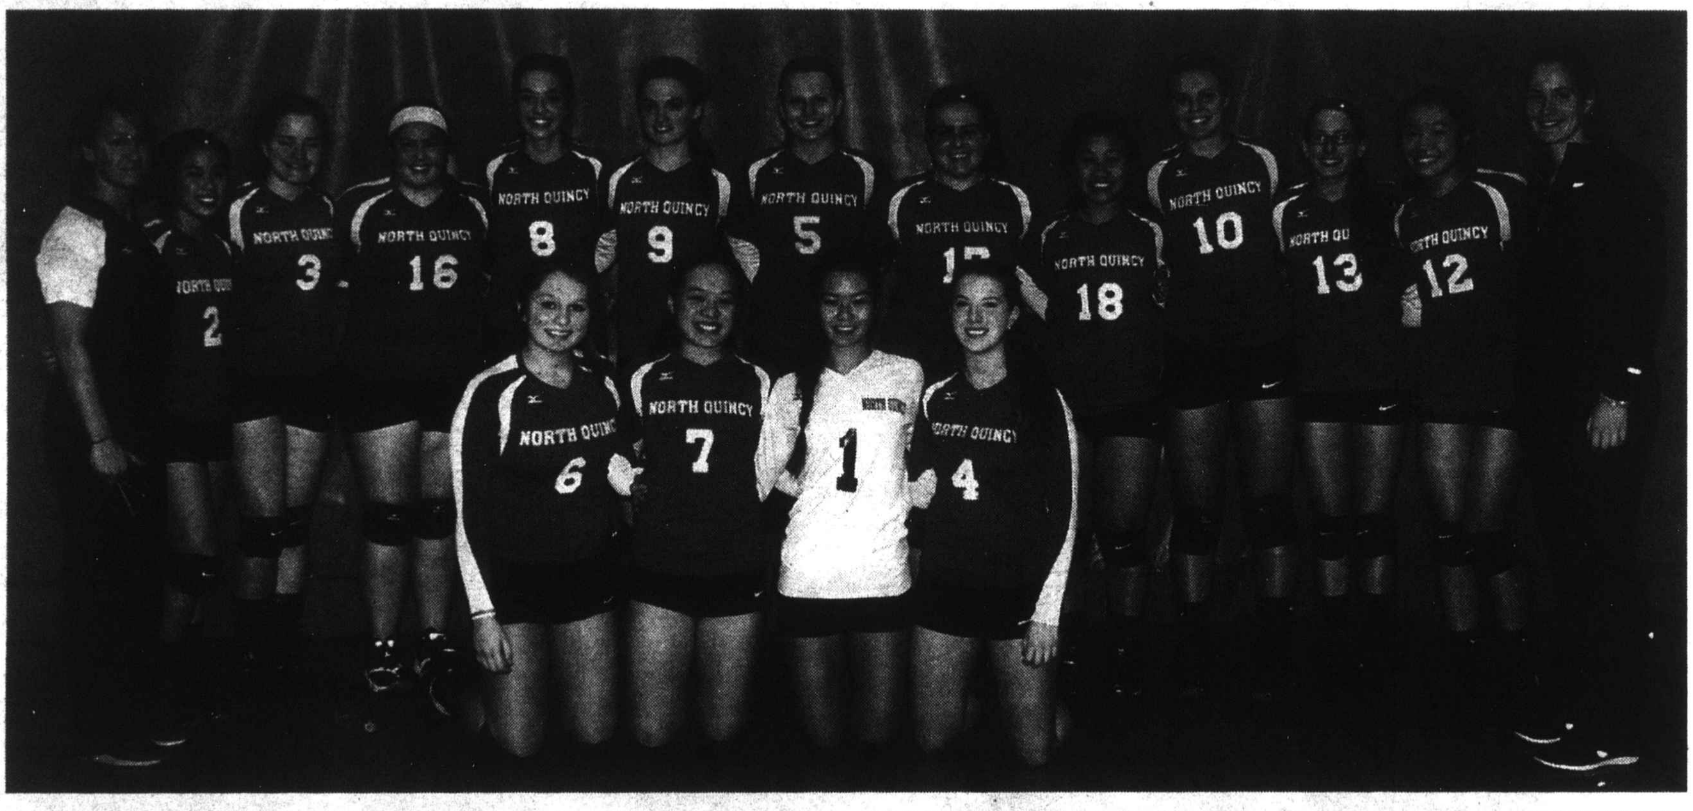
SARAH GIBBONS had a terrific tournament for Quincy. Among her stats were 19 kills and five blocks in wins against Cambridge Rindge & Latin and King Philip Regional High School.



ANOTHER VOLLEYBALL standout for Quincy was Maggie Parker shown here serving against Newton North.

Future Bright For North Quincy Volleyball



NORTH QUINCY GIRLS varsity volleyball team had a successful season posting a 16-6 record and 13-3 in the Patriot League. The team also qualified for the Div. 1 Central-East Tournmant. After the match was over, after Brookline had defeated North Quincy, 3-0 in the quarter finals of the Central-East Volleyball Sectionals last week, a fine moment played itself out at the far corner of the court.

Junior Izzie Flaherty and sophomore Jen Butka put their arms around each other, smiled, and looked not so much at the season which had just passed, but at a future which is bright and full of promise for each of them.

They had most different seasons. Flaherty had a break-out year which carried her from a multi-talented player who was known well in Quincy to a performer who earned state and national recognition.

Butka sat on the bench and tracked game statistics. Butka is a terrific basketball and volleyball player. She suffered an ACL injury during the summer. She could not play, but she stayed with her sport, her team, and her friends. She remained a teammate.

"Jen knows that everyone on the team loves her, and we can't wait to get her back next season," said Flaherty. "When she's healed, we'll work together and come back strong for next year."

When Flaherty speaks of motivation, it is wise to listen. When North missed the tournament last year for the first time since the Reagan Presidency, Flaherty and her teammates vowed it would not happen again on their watch. It didn't. They finished the regular season at 16-6 and 13-3 in the league. Next year, the goal will be not only to make the tourney, but also to do something when they get there.

"Missing the tourney last year definitely motivated us," said Flaherty. "We did a lot of work in the off-season, playing in summer leagues and doing agility drills. We bonded and got closer. We not only want to make the tourney next year, but to advance as well."

Flaherty's improvement in one year was striking. Each week the Massachusetts Girls Volleyball Coaches Association selects the top performer from the state and names her as its representative to the national team. For a week in October, the coaches – the people who best know the game – selected Flaherty as the best player in the state. Not in Quincy. Not in the Patriot League. Not on the South Shore. In the state. From Boston Harbor to the Berkshires, Izzie Flaherty was the best.

"She's just a fantastic player. It's good to see her get the recognition she deserves," said coach Kerry Ginty.

Volleyball is a game of athletic specialists. Hitters hit. Blockers block. Setters pass. Liberos keep alive points. Defenders return serves. Servers drill aces. If a player can do two of these well, she is an All-Star. Flaherty does them all well. All of them. This just does not happen.

Have a good look at her season: 209 kills, 180 digs, 38 blocks, 27 aces. These are rare numbers. They may not soon be seen again. Until next year, her senior year.

"I take pride in my entire game, especially my defense," said Flaherty. "Over the summer, I got back to basics, to doing the fundamentals well, and that helped this year."

A point against Brookline illustrated her versatility. She struck a low, hard serve. She moved in for the turn and bounced off the floor to save the point. She set a soft, accurate pass for a teammate. She moved to the wing, took a pass, timed her hit and put away a winner. Serve, defend, pass, hit. That is one player on one point. Enjoy.

"She can play at the net, she can play at the back line, she jumps out of the gym, she puts away points, she saves points, she is a great leader. What more can you ask," said Ginty.

No. 11 seed Brookline won the match over No. 3 North, 25-20, 25-18, 25-18. Brookline came into the tourney at 8-8. Forget the record and the seeding. The Warriors are always a power in the tourney. They come out of the demanding Bay State League and make an annual run in the sectionals.

North was within range in each game. The Red Raiders led, 17-15 in the first. They were within 17-15 in the second and 17-14 in the third. Sarah Tsan and Trina Liang each had five digs to keep alive points. Remy Aucoin (four kills, two blocks), Rebecca Thorne (three kills, one block), and Julia Klincewicz (three kills, one block) played well at the net. Flaherty added five kills, one block and three digs. Setter Sammie Caldwell had seven assists.

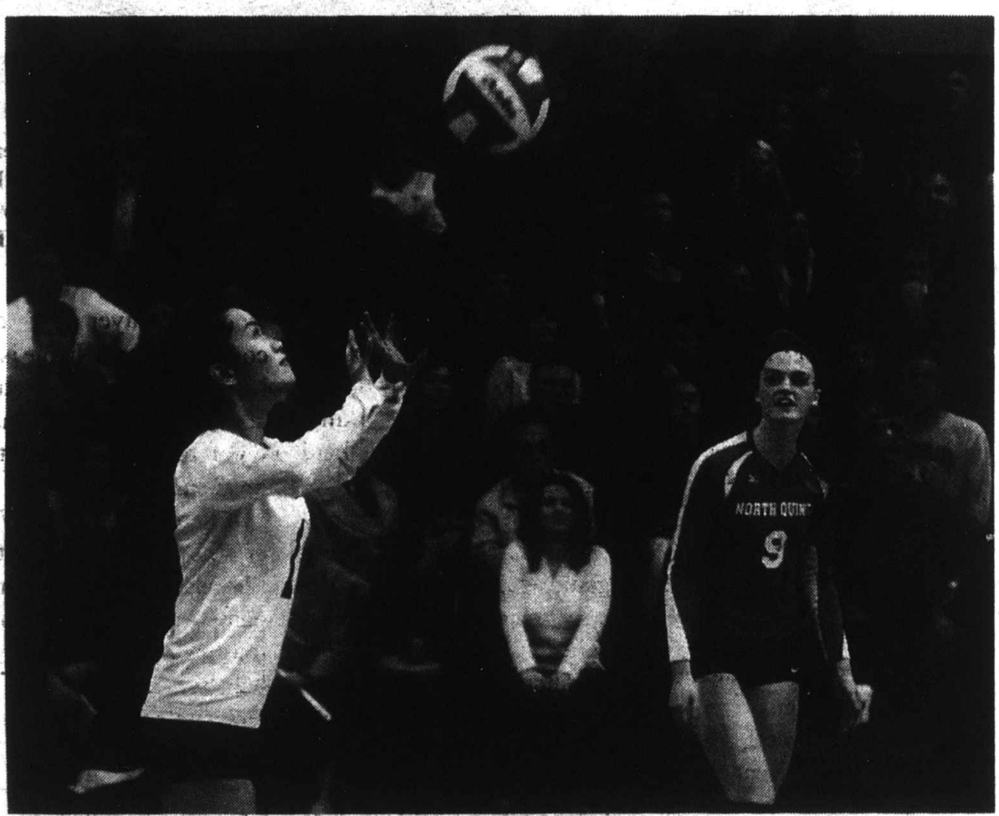
There were two main issues. It was the first tourney experience for a young North team which has just four seniors. Second, Brookline had a huge front line. Driving a volleyball through Brookline's blockers was like trying to drive it through a brick wall.

"I think nerves played a part," said Ginty. "We need to be a little more savvy. When we face blockers like Brookline, we have to do more than just try to drive the ball. We need to show a little more touch."

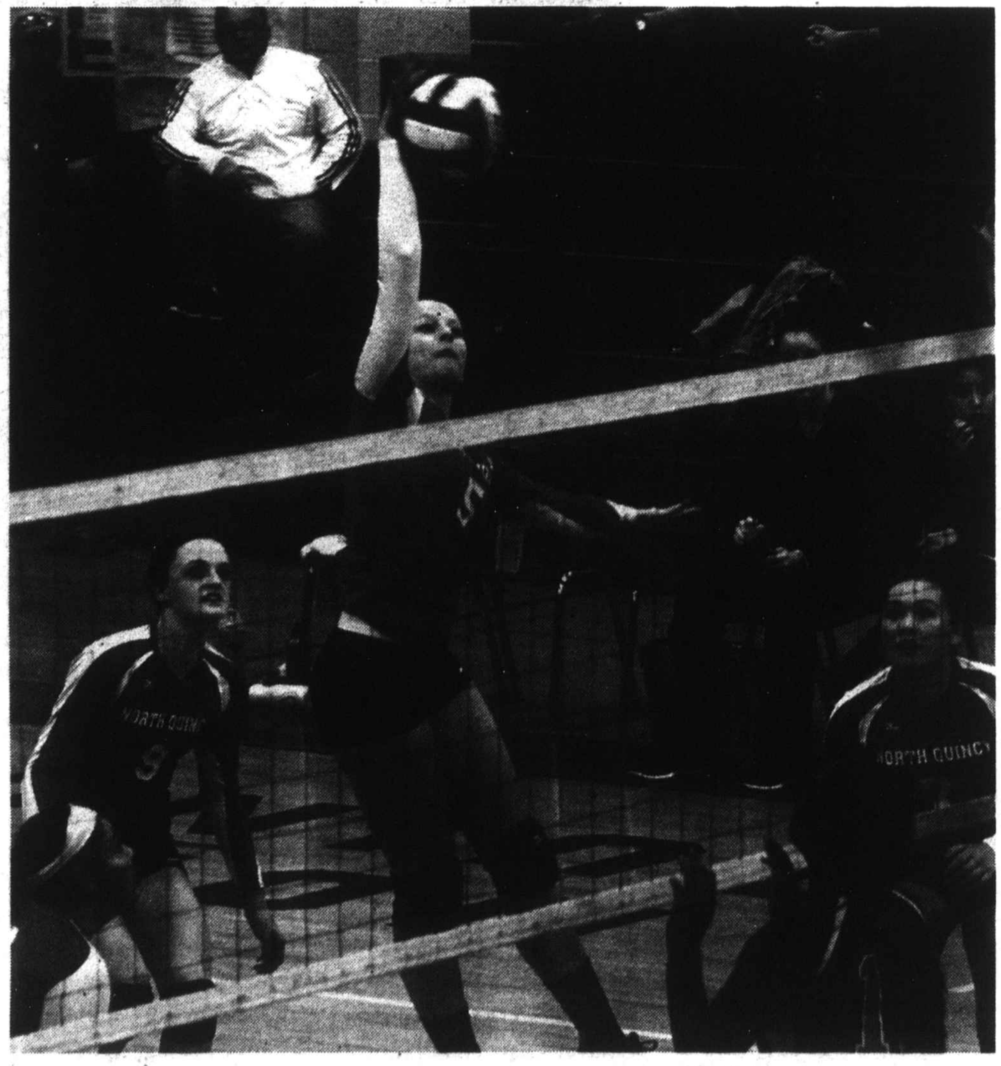
Katie Sautter, Cassidy Lothrop, Tsan and Liang are the departing seniors. Their presence and leadership will be missed.

It was a season of improvement for their young teammates. North lost its first match to Brockton and won the rematch. In the first Quincy match, the Presidents were clearly better. In the second Quincy match, North held leads late in all three games. Watch out for this team next year.

"I think the most rewarding part of the season was watching them gain confidence," said Ginty. "If you can coach a girl and see her walk proudly with her head up after a match or game, it's satisfying. I saw that this year. I think we also learned that making the tourney is not enough. We want to advance when we get there."



ALL EYES ARE upon senior Sarah Tsan including Isabelle Flaherty as she lines up a return. North Quincy High School bowed to Brookline in the quarter finals of the Div. 1 Central-East tournament Nov. 10.



WITH TEAMMATES Isabelle Flaherty and Trina Liang looking on, Remy Aucoin delivers a kill shot in the first set against Brookline High School.

Quincy Volleyball Battles To The End

Presidents were down 2-0 in games. They lost the second game, 25-10. They were surely dead and gone, but they came back. Against King Philip, they were down 2-1 in games, twice they were two points away from defeat in the fourth game, and they stared down two match points in the fifth game before Gibbons ended it with two beautiful shots. It was a great run.

"Newton is the best team we've seen this year, and we didn't play our best," said coach Jacqui Niosi. "Still this was a great season for us. I told the kids they would always have the banner in the gym and the trophy in the case from this tournament. I've been coaching for 10 years, I've seen a lot of games, but I will always remember the Canton and the King Philip games. Those were special.

"I also remember that point against Newton. A lot of teams would have tears in their eyes before the match was over. We kept playing hard."

The story was the players. In most tournaments, one player steps forward and leads her team. This year it was Gibbons. She had 19 kills and five blocks against Cambridge and KP. She closed out the fourth game with a kill shot along with putting up the two winning points in Game 5 against King Philip. She served well and showed touch and power at the net.

"Sarah definitely stepped up. She has a great personality. She can be goofy and keep us loose, or she can get us going when we're down," said Niosi.

There was Nicole Jorgensen (26 kills against Cambridge and King Philip) unleashing rockets and saving the second match point against King Philip with a block, There was Anxhela Hoti (nine kills, four blocks vs. KP) always working, blocking and sending hard smashes to open spots for kills. She brought Quincy within one late in the fifth game against KP with a precise touch shot under pressure.

There was Parker. She doesn't rattle the gym with her smashes, but she is steady and she gives the Presidents a complete volleyball player. She defends, she passes, she digs shots out of the floor and she can finish as she did in The Point. Against KP, she sent a no-look, backward volley for a clean winner.

"Anhexla is the hardest working player I've ever coached. When Nicole is on, her smashes are un-returnable. Maggie isn't flashy, but I can always count on her," said Nioisi.

There was Alicia Walker, the steadiest of setters (74 assists in three tourney games) time and again under tourney pressure putting the ball how and where the hitters wanted it. It was Walker who volleyed four clean winners in the fourth game against KP when Quincy was on the edge of elimination, and it was Walker who calmly served out the match against KP.

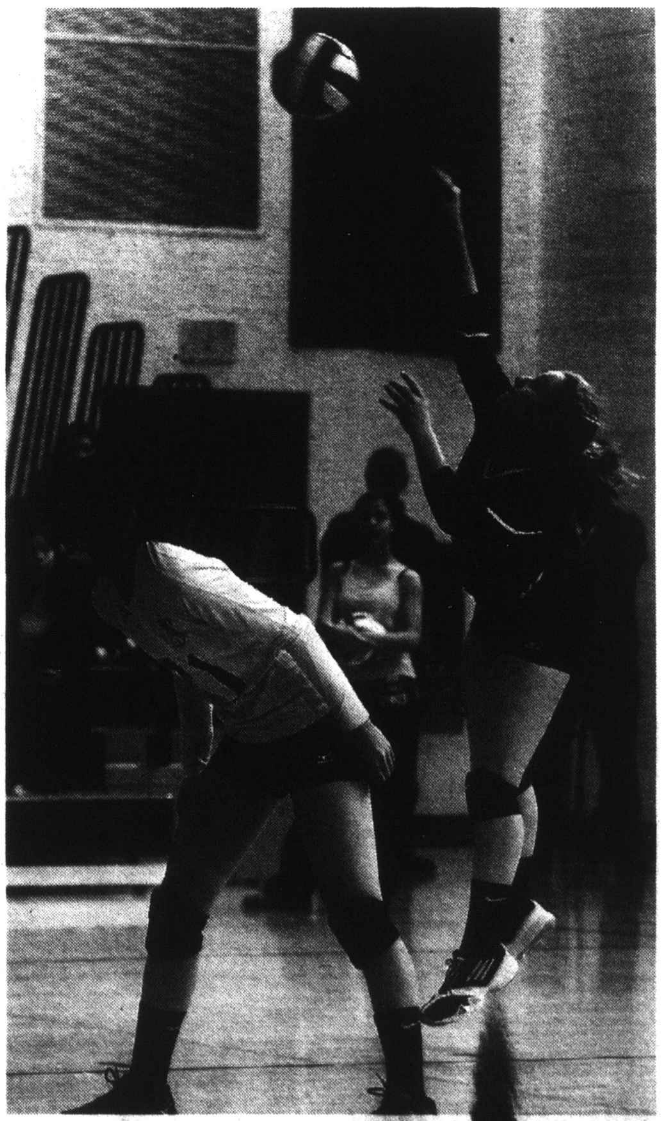
There was Jessie Lei (49 digs in three tourney games) skidding towards a wall a good 20 feet behind the baseline, chasing down a kill shot against Newton. She doesn't believe a volleyball should ever hit the floor. It was Lei's touch shot which wiped out the first match point against KP. There were Tien Le (six digs), Hillary Valenzuela and Parry (six assists) whose hustle drove Quincy to its best game against Newton – the second when the Quincy was within 19-17.

"Alicia mixed up her sets well all year to suit our hitters," said Niosi. "Jessie is fantastic. You should see what her knees look like from the all the times she hits the court."

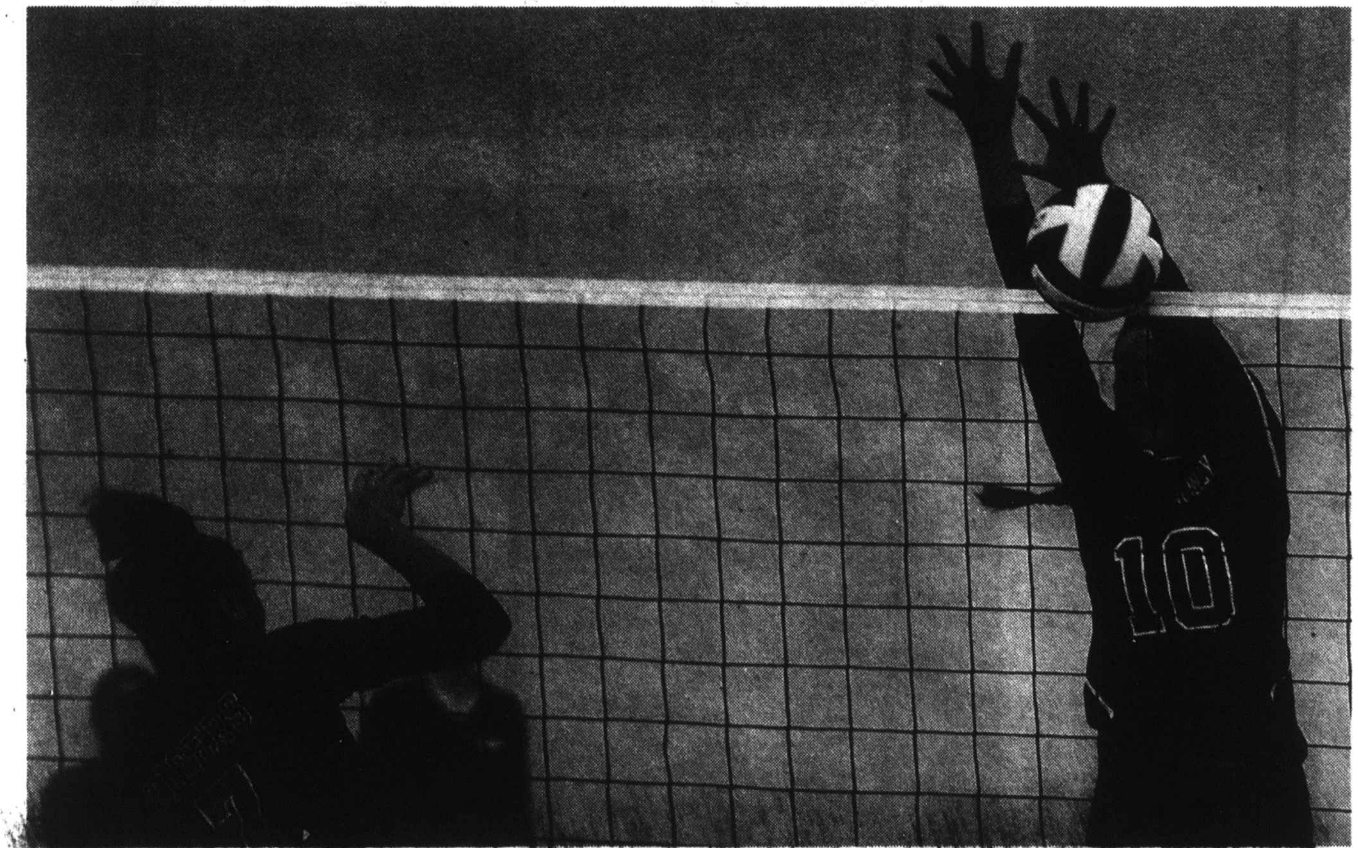
And there was the sophomore. Shannon Foley played every second of the King Philip match. She had 17 digs against Cambridge and 25 against King Philip. She served in crucial situations when Quincy simply had to have the point. Her serve is hard, low and accurate. Her volleyball instincts are wonderful. It is no coincidence that she did not play due to injury in Quincy's one regular-season loss against Duxbury.

"She plays like a senior," said Gibbons. "That's the way we think of her. She's not intimidated by any shot or situation."

Late in the Newton match, it was Gibbons who raised her voice in the huddle and urged her mates to keep playing hard. They listened and although they lost, they played The Point which told all you know and all you need to know about this team.



ALICIA WALKER (shown here serving against Newton North) registered 74 assists in three tourney games [illegible] calmly served out the match against KP. Ready for a return [illegible] Quincy's Jessie Lei (foreground).



ANXHELA HOTI blocks at the net for a Quincy point against Newton North. In the Presidents' semifinal win over King Philip Hoti had nine kills and four blocks.

5th Title In 6 Years For West Quincy Elks

cally and mentally we'd win this game. It was our last game in an Elks jersey and we took that to heart."

The Elks win was retribution of sorts for a loss to Houghs Neck earlier in the season with time running out on the clock.

Neither team was able to put much offense together in the first quarter, but the Manets finally broke the scoreless tie in the second.

Starting with great field position at the Elks' 30 yard line Shane Murphy made a big cut to his right and scampered 23 yards on the fourth play of the drive to give Houghs Neck a 6-0 advantage with 3:46 remaining.

That lead, though, was gone just a minute later.

Calabro completed a 31-yard pass to Franck Yhomby and a 49-yard strike to Eoin Gormley for a first down at the Manet 13. Dozier took it in off right tackle on the next snap and Gormley drilled the point-after kick to give West Quincy the 8-6 lead with 2:55 left in the half.

The Manets threatened on their next possession, but Patrick Devoy ended the drive when he pounced on a Houghs Neck fumble to give the Elks the ball back at the Manet 44. Calabro completed a 14-yard pass to Yhomby for a first down at the Houghs Neck 20, but an offsides call against the Elks brought the ball back and Peter Ugwu pulled down Calabro in the backfield to end the drive.

Thorley made some small adjustments at the half, but the Elks' strategy of running the ball and executing plays was very much intact.

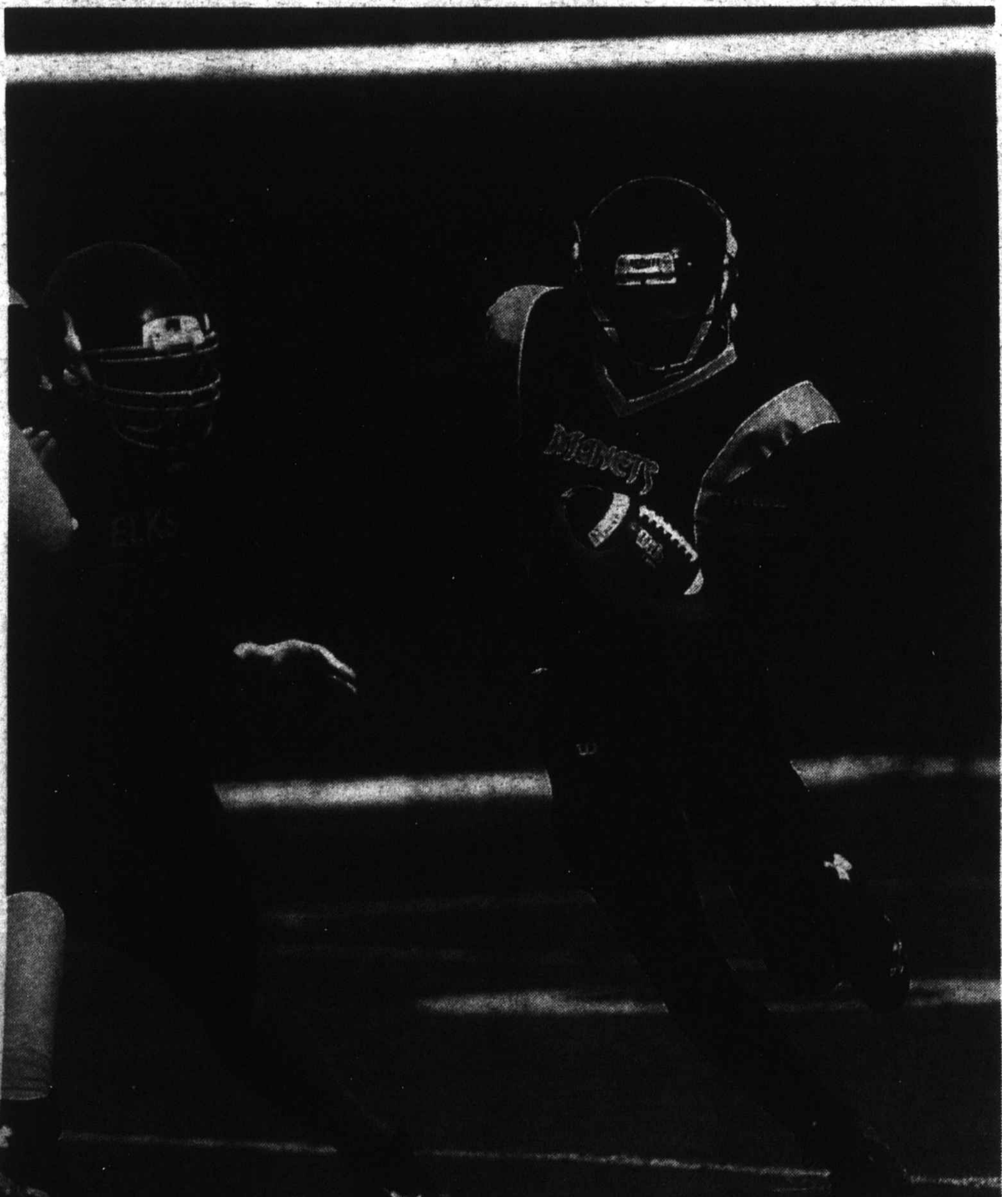
"We knew that team was very aggressive and we had to execute our game plan," said Thorley. "We had a game plan for them. We executed it and we won. That's how it is. It's very easy like that. They were taking away the outside from us so we had to run the ball up the middle. I adjusted at halftime to run the ball up the middle and we came away with a victory."

The Elks dominated the third quarter, marching 72 yards down to the Manet 20 and chewing up more than seven minutes on the clock, but were unable to put any points on the board.

They finally opened it up in the fourth. Dozier broke loose off right tackle and raced all the way down to the Manet 33 for a 16-yard gain. One play later he went to his left to score on a 17-yard run. Calabro went untouched on the conversion rush and the Elks had the 15-6 lead with 5:13 remaining.

Houghs Neck gave the Elks great field position at the 36-yard line on their next possession and West Quincy took full advantage. On the first play Dozier sprinted 36 yards untouched for the score with 3:05 remaining. Gormley made good on the point-after kick and West Quincy had it clinched at 23-6.

HOUGHS NECK'S Trenton Souza makes a touchdown-saving tackle hauling down West Quincy's Stuart Dozier.



ISAIAH STEINBERG finds a hole courtesy of a some big blocks by the Houghs Neck Manets for a big gain on the ground.

Jorgensen Heading To URI On Basketball Scholarship

team defenses. She can find the cutter breaking cleanly to the hoop. She can hit the boards and go for blocks without committing fouls. Anyone who saw her in the tourney last year against Durfee saw not a tall center, but a mature, gifted player who gave her team exactly what it needed.

"The biggest part of Nicole's growth has been in her understanding of the game," said coach Jeff Bretsch. "Remember we started her from her first game of her freshman year. That's a lot of pressure on a player, but she handled it well. She's made strides every year and she has learned how to handle any situation on the floor, no matter how emotional it may get."

Rhode Island plays out of the Atlantic 10. The Rams were 17-13 last year and lost in the conference quarterfinals to Duquesne. They ran a guard-oriented offense. They are looking for help in the middle which could means a spot that Jorgensen can compete for as she begins her college career.

"The coaches from URI were excited about Nicole right from the start," said Bretsch. "I think it's a good fit for her. If there is an open slot, it will make the transition a little easier for her."

It is an achievement for any athlete to play Division 1 ball. Jorgensen deserves more than a little extra credit for what she has done. Most Division 1 recruits are specialists. They play one sport all year, just basketball summer, spring, winter, and fall. Barring the unforseen, Jorgensen will have played three varsity sports for four years when she graduates.

She is an all-league volleyball player and a power hitter in softball who has launched more than one shot out of McCoy Field over the past three springs.

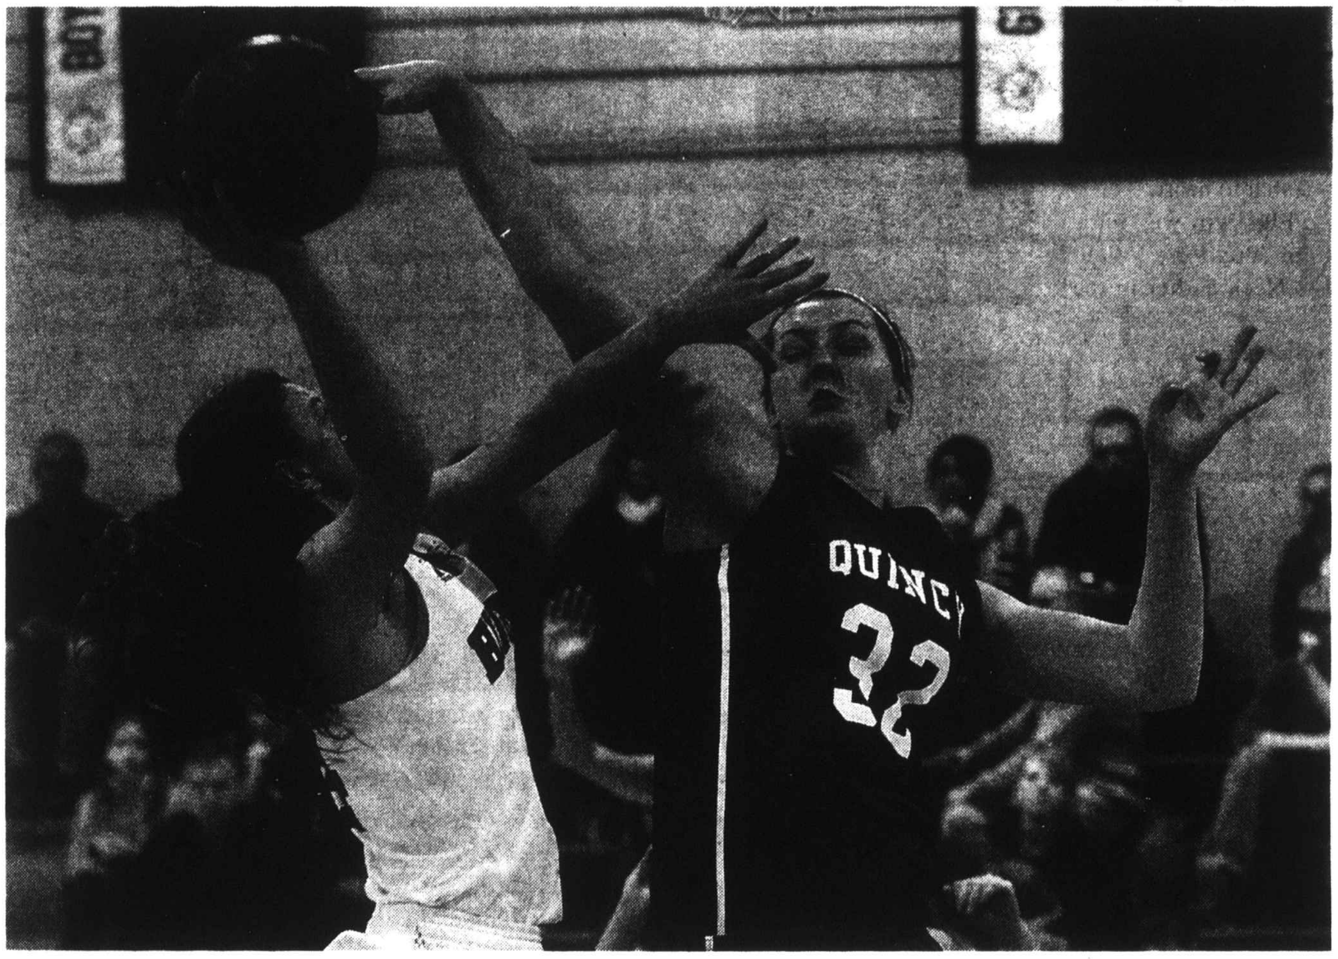
"I'm glad I played three sports. They kept me in shape for basketball. I enjoy being a teammate, and playing the three sports gave me more time with my friends," she said.

"Nicole is a kind person, especially where her teammates are concerned. I'm sure that's one of the reasons she played three sports," said Bretsch. "But she put her time into basketball, especially over the summer. She must have driven and flew to hundreds of AAU games."

She has also had a target on her back for four years. Because of her size and the great expectations, she has been double and triple-teamed since the first minute of her freshman year. Most top players see it when they are juniors or seniors. Jorgensen has seen it from the first time an opposing team walked into the gym. At times, it has looked like defenders were playing by the rules of rugby when they guarded her.

"It's been difficult and frustrating at times," said Jorgensen. "I don't show any emotion because I don't want my teammates to know it bothers me. I prepare for it in practice. Sometimes coach and my teammates will double and triple-team so I know what to expect in games."

"She deserves this," said Bretsch. "I love coaching her. She's serious about wanting to learn the game. She listens, she's a great kid, she's all a coach could hope for in a player."



AS A JUNIOR, Nicole Jorgensen set the Quincy High School girls' basketball record for blocked shots at 223 and counting. She will return for her senior season next month and then suit up for the University of Rhode Island on a full scholarship next fall.

By BILL GRIFFIN

For Quincy, it was a terrific defensive performance which produced the Presidents' second straight win over a playoff opponent and their third win against a quality team from the Bay State League this season.

Cody Desmond threw a 16-yard touchdown pass to Garrett Cronin in the first quarter and the Presidents made three-big time stops in the fourth period to drop Wellesley, 6-0 in a non-league meeting Saturday morning at Wellesley.

For North Quincy, it was another fine effort from tailback Aidan Brown, but depth issues, especially along the defensive line, created problems for the Red Raiders.

Oliver Ames scored three times in the second half to offset a 123-yard rushing game from Brown and defeat North, 25-16 in a non-league contest Friday night at Veterans Stadium.

"It was a tremendous defensive effort from our kids," said Quincy coach Bill Reardon whose club went to 3-7 with the victory. "Wellesley runs the option and our defensive coordinator Kevin Carey put in an excellent game plan. The important thing against the option is to stay disciplined, to stay with your man whether he has the ball or not. We did a good job of that."

"Depth is beginning to hurt us," said North coach Mark Nutley whose club dropped to 1-9 with the loss. "The injuries are starting to pile up especially on defense. We had five sophomores out there at times tonight."

This was an impressive win for Quincy. Wellesley won its first six games of the season and earned a No. 2 seed in the Division 2 Southwest sectionals. The Raiders are especially difficult against the run, so the Presidents showcased a balanced offense on a windy day to score the only touchdown of the game in the opening period.

"The wind was a big factor. If it was at your back, you could throw. If it was against, you couldn't. We had it at our back in the first period," said Reardon.

Quincy scored on a 40-yard drive, mixing the passing of Cody Desmond and the running of Jahvae Handsom-Fields. Passes to fullback Garrett Cronin coming out of the backfield produced two completions, including the scoring strike for a 6-0 lead.

"We put Garrett in motion," said Reardon. "They had to choose whether to cover Garrett or Jahvae. Cody threw to whoever was open. He made a good decision and Garrett was wide open for the touchdown."

The defense made it stand up, holding Wellesley without a serious threat until the fourth quarter. It began with senior tackle Mike Munroe, who has had a dominating season. He spent most of the morning in the Wellesley backfield disrupting running plays before they got started.

Defensive ends Isaiah Uzamere and Mike McNelly and linebacker Jackson Vo showed excellent discipline against the option. They blanketed their assigned runners for the entire game and shut down an excellent rushing team.

"Wellesley hasn't seen Mike Munroe and that makes him even tougher," said Reardon. "Teams in the league know about him, but if you are seeing him for the first time, he is very hard to contain. It was Jackson's second game back from a broken hand, and he has really give our defense a shot in the arm."

Quincy nearly put the game away in the third period. The Presidents marched 70 yards and took all but 1:23 off the clock in the period. They had the wind at their back and once again, they were able to mix the run and the pass. A penalty stalled the drive at the Wellesley four, and the hosts were still within six points with the wind at their back in the fourth period.

"It seemed like the entire fourth period was played on our side of midfield," said Reardon. "I think we stopped them on fourth down three times. Our kids made the plays when they had to."

Sophomore cornerback Shorn Hawthorne batted away one fourth-down pass. Desmond and Dyreke Johnson broke up another.

Late in the fourth, Desmond tried a sneak on fourth-and-one at the Quincy 37. A punt into the wind would have been futile. The initial measurement showed Desmond made the first down by a foot. The chains were moved. Wellesley's coach asked for a second measurement. The chains were re-set. The second measurement showed the sneak was shy by a chain-length.

It gave Wellesley good field positon, but just as they did against Natick, the Presidents made the plays on defense to finish off the win. Munroe set the tone with a tackle in the Wellesley backfield for a loss on Brown had 123 yards on 23 carries for North to give him 1,159 for the year. He had 100 in the first half, including a one-yard score which gave the Red Raiders at 7-6 lead at intermission.

"He's had a great year. He runs hard and he's been consistent in every game for us," said Nutley.

Brown is a brilliant cutback runner. His best against Oliver Ames was a 51-yard shot late in the first period. He started right, let the defense over-pursue, then cut back over the middle through a huge hole opened by Conor Pound, Ryan Manning, and Jeff Sullivan, and sped down to the Oliver Ames 30.

Oliver Ames ran the option most of the game featuring quarterback Charlie Ryan and halfback Liston Funai. Ryan scored on a nine-yard keeper for a 6-0 lead in the first period.

North answered with a 31-yard march with a strong wind at its back in the second period. The key play was a 12-yard sweep by Brown who was sprung by a good block from Tom Koch. Brown went in from the one and Dara Griffin's extra point put North up, 7-6.

Tom Whooley and Chris Donaghey preserved the lead by pushing Funai out at the Red Raiders' one on the final play of the first half.

"That was a huge defensive play," said Nutley. "I was hoping we could build on it in the second half, but it didn't happen."

North was missing senior tackle Derek Huynh for the second straight game, and it hurt the Red Raiders on defense. OA drove 31 yards for the go-ahead score on an eight-yard run by Funai early in the third period for a 12-7 lead. Junior Allen Daley, who played well on defense for North, made a fine tackle to break up the two-point-conversion.

Funai and Ryan were able to control the action with their running and scored two more TDs for a 26-7 lead.

North and senior quarterback Joey Fallon answered with a late scoring drive of 54 yards. Fallon accounted for all the yards with completions to Donaghey, Brown and a pair to Whooley. The second pass to Whooley from the 13 drew North within 26-13. Brown rushed for the points to make the final 26-15.

North and Quincy meet Thanksgiving morning in the annual rivalry game to close out the season.

'Christmas Through The Eyes Of A Child' Features Over 100 Units • Steps Off 12:30 P.M.

By SCOTT JACKSON

"Christmas Through the Eyes of a Child," is the theme for the 63rd annual Quincy Christmas Parade, which will feature more than 100 units – including bands, floats and other special units – marching their way up Hancock Street starting at 12:30 p.m. Sunday.

The parade will step off from the intersection Hancock Street and Hannon Parkway and will follow the traditional three-mile route along Hancock Street through the heart of the city, ending at North Quincy High School. An awards ceremony will be held inside the high school at the parade's conclusion.

The theme for this year's parade, "Christmas Through the Eyes of a Child," was submitted by Denise Bausemer of Bittern Road and George Norris of Manet Avenue, both of whom will be riding along in the parade. The Quincy Christmas Parade Committee chose that theme over 32 other entries submitted this year.

Sunday's parade is being dedicated to the memory of the late Donald McCarthy Sr., a longtime parade volunteer who passed away suddenly June 29. McCarthy served as a dedicated volunteer on the parade committee for more than two decades.

Bands participating in the parade include:

Immaculate Heart of Mary High School; Waltham American Legion; Acton-Boxborough Regional High School; Plymouth High

WHAT WOMEN WANT

Fine jewelry, and diamond jewelry in particular, is always very high on women's lists of desirable gifts. So, any man intent on giving the woman in his life what she really wants should take careful note of her style and taste. Women with a classic sense of style are likely to prefer jewelry with a timeless look, such as a diamond solitaire, line bracelet, or simple diamond studs. Women leaning toward more artistic and contemporary designs might be drawn to diamonds that are mixed with alternative materials, including stainless steel, titanium, and even wood. In any case, one of the many beautiful things about diamonds is that they go with anything, anytime, and anywhere.

With the holidays fast approaching, men everywhere are wondering what to get the jewelry-loving women in their lives. Instead of buying what you like, notice what she wears most and take a look at what she already owns. For more information, please call 617-773-3636. We are a full service jewelry store, and we accept custom orders. Our prices have always been more than competitive with no fake markups in order to offer huge discounts. We welcome you to stop by our store at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center.

Don't Forget: We pay cash for Gold - Platinum - Diamonds... highest prices paid.

Joseph Mulvey: Quite The Little Golfer

The fact that Joseph Mulvey of Quincy has been a golfer for three and a half years may seem a little ordinary.

But when you consider Joseph is only age 5 and has won a handful of tournaments while still in pre-kindergarten well it's rather extraordinary.

He's a terrific, well-mannered little boy who enjoys competing in tournaments as much as he does practicing with every club in his bag.

And all that practice has certainly paid off already. Joseph, the oldest son of Joe and Ellen Mulvey and the big brother of Thomas, age 3, had a quite a year for himself on the links.

He won four of six tournaments he entered this summer and fall including the Six and Under US Kids Golf Boston Tour Championship held in Cranston, R.I. To win that title, he bested nine other golfers in his age group. In the two other tournaments he competed in that he did not win, he finished third overall and second overall. One of those tournaments was won by the 9th ranked kid golfer in the country.

He's about as tall as a golf bag but Joseph's golfing stature makes you stand up and take notice. When he takes a swing with his driver, he's smooth and fluid – mechanically sound for someone who won't start kindergarten until next fall.

He's got game, as they say, but he also has something that is more important.

Sportsmanship and respect for the game and his fellow playing partners.

"I'm proud of him because he's just a nice kid," says his father, Joe. "On the course he's always encouraging the other kids more than anybody. He's a good sport. He takes his hat off and shakes hands after the tournaments are over."

Joseph's uncanny golfing ability at such a young age can be traced to a Christmas present he got when he was just 18 months old. A friend of the Mulveys gave Joseph a set of plastic golf clubs.

He started to watch golf on his TV like his dad does and before long, he was taking the clubs back and swinging them trying to emulate the pros.

He played with the plastic clubs so much he broke them.

"I kept duct-taping them together," says Ellen. "We went to visit friends on the Cape and I brought the bag of little golf clubs. Our friend has boys and they all had real clubs. I quickly put our little plastic clubs away."

As chance would have it, the friends live near a public golf course.

One of the boys was only age 4 but had a set of real golf clubs.

"He took those real clubs and hit it off the tee right onto the public course's green. We came home and we said, 'I think he's ready for real clubs,'" Ellen said.

READY TO HIT the links are young golfing phenom Joseph Mulvey (left), age 5, and his younger brother and caddy Thomas, age 3. Joseph – who first picked up a club when he was 18 months old – won four golf tournaments earlier this year.

The Mulveys ordered Joseph his first set of true clubs for his second birthday. They were too big and too heavy but he played with them in the backyard.

"We put a golf hole in the backyard and he played and played until he hit them too far into the neighbor's yard," Joe recalls. The sprouting golf prodigy was hitting the balls so flush his parents had to switch him to plastic ones.

"We also got a net because he was hitting them too far," Joe adds.

Joseph enjoys practicing as much as he does playing. He and his dad are members at the Harmon Club in Rockland and they also practice indoors at the Marina Bay Sportsplex when the weather gets cold and the course snow-packed.

They also like going to Granite Links and hitting

• On Dec. 10, 1901, the first Nobel Prizes are awarded in Stockholm, Sweden, as Alfred Nobel, the Swedish inventor of dynamite, had directed in his will. It is believed that he did so out of moral regret over the increasingly lethal uses of his inventions in war.

• On Dec. 9, 1921, General Motors engineers discover that leaded gas reduces "knock" in auto engines, eliminating the pinging sounds. Ethyl alcohol also worked, and it was cheap -- however, anyone with an ordinary still could make it, which meant that GM could not patent it or profit from it.

• On Dec. 7, 1941, hundreds of Japanese warplanes attack the U.S. naval base at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, killing more than 2,400 naval and military personnel. The U.S. declared war against Japan the following day.

• On Dec. 12, 1980, American oil tycoon Armand Hammer pays $5 million at auction for a notebook containing writings by Leonardo da Vinci. In 1994, the book was sold to Bill Gates, founder of Microsoft, for $30.8 million. Gates has since loaned the manuscript to a number of museums for public display.

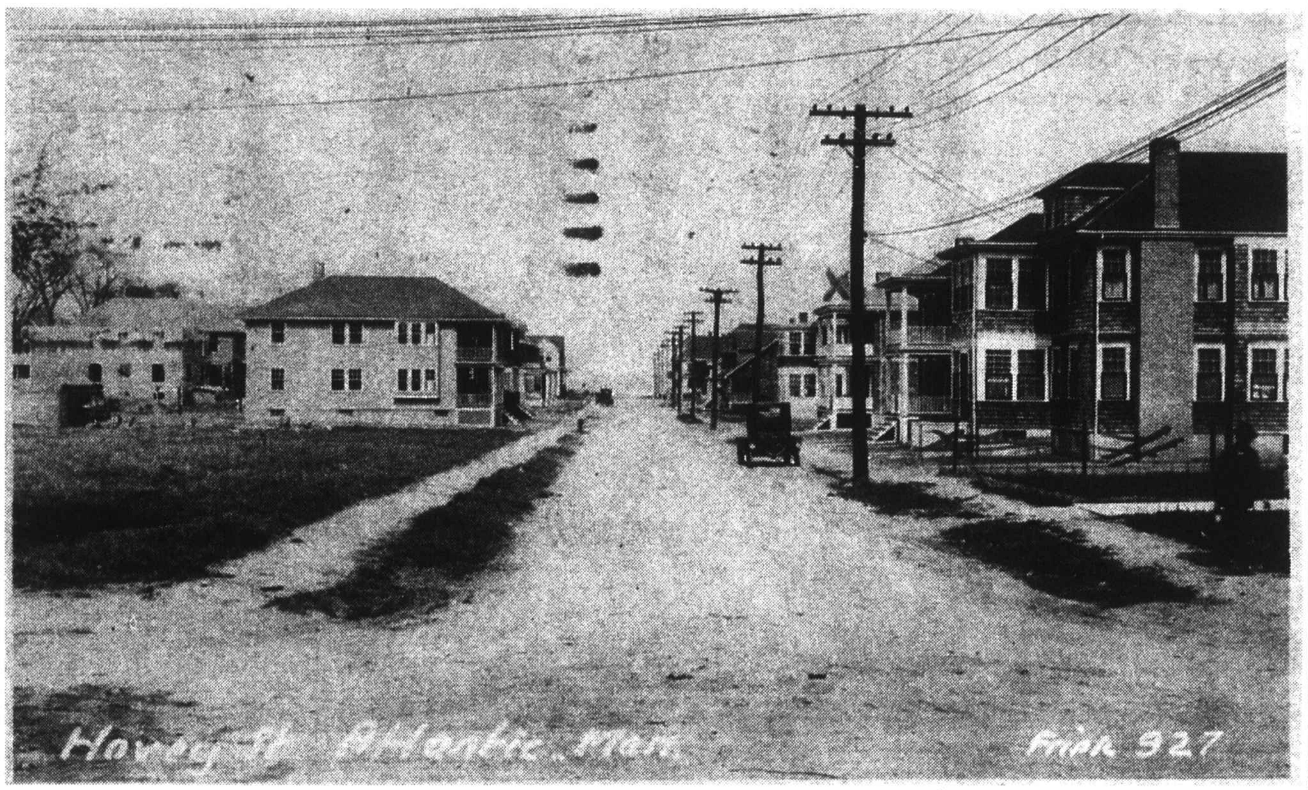
Scenes From Yesterday



THIS IS A 1926 real photo postcard view of Hovey Street in Atlantic looking towards the beach from Wadsworth Street. The empty lots on the left were soon after built upon with the same type of multi-family houses as shown here. At this time this section of Quincy was growing rapidly; new houses were being built on every street. In 1926 the city issued 699 building permits for single and two family dwellings, over half were for wards 5 and 6, which were Atlantic and Wollaston. There were no building regulations or zoning laws at the time so this street and others around it have single and multi-family dwellings on lots mostly smaller than 4,000 square feet. Quincy Awarded $680,000 Grant For New Boat Ramp

The Baker-Polito Administration's Seaport Economic Council has awarded Quincy a $680,000 grant that will allow the city to replace its current boat launch ramp at the public landing in Houghs Neck.

The current ramp is only accessible from two hours before high tide until two hours after. The new ramp will be usable in all tidal conditions, increasing access to Boston Harbor.

Officials also said the new ramp will drive new tourism, fishing, and recreational boating activity.

Quincy was among a host of seaside communities that will share in $6.6 million in grants to support pier, port, and boardwalk improvements as well as a tidal energy testing initaitve in the Cape Cod Canal.

Other communities receiving grants were Chatham, Gosnold, Marshfield, New Bedford, Salem, Saugus, Salisbury, Winthrop, and the Marine Renewable Energy Collaborative.

The economic development and infrastructure grants will advance the maritime economy in a diverse set of coastal communities, officials said.

New Leadership For A City At The Crossroad

Starting in the new year, we will have the first two Asian Americans (Nina Liang and Noel DiBona) and the first African American (Ian Cain) on the City Council.

New ideas, new perspectives, new approaches, new challenges...that's what are needed in the city leadership as, I think, Quincy is at a crossroad.

Quincy, Somerville, Cambridge, Braintree all have the T's Red Line train service.

While the other cities are destinations for the young people and / or start up companies (i.e. technology), Quincy is . . ?

We have all this infrastructure renovations, sidewalk and crosswalks repairs, pipe repairs, condo constructions but for what? What does Quincy have to attract people to live here, besides having the Red Line?

Many residents, me included, love the peace and quiet, but who is / will pay for all this new infrastructure if we stay the status quo?? We, the residents.

Maybe Mayor Koch is laying the groundwork to attract new businesses with all this construction around the city. Good luck with that; I haven't heard or read anything to that effect.

American Idol's Casey McQuillen Performs At Catholic Academy

Quincy School Stop Part Of 'You Matter' Tour

Quincy Catholic Academy Middle School had the honor of being a part of American Idol Star Casey McQuillen's "You Matter" Tour Nov. 18.

"What a wonderful opportunity for our young teens to hear Casey's message," said Principal Cathy Cameron. "We're so grateful to Casey for sharing her personal story and expressing the importance of being brave, to be yourself, and follow your dreams. She not only has a beautiful voice, but she's a wonderful motivational speaker."

The 'You Matter' Tour is an hour-long interactive concert of her songs and stories. Throughout the program, Casey shows the students how she grew from an insecure 13 year-old girl to a 23 year-old aspiring pop star who isn't afraid to dream. She explains how her experience on American Idol taught her not to be afraid to take risks. Her audience ranges from 10-17, and, over the past two years, she has had the opportunity to perform for over 75 local schools and thousands of students, free of charge.

The 'You Matter' Tour was also awarded the 2015 Berklee Urban Service Award for using music as a catalyst for social change in the Greater Boston area and making a difference in Boston communities.

Peter and Susan Graceffa announce the marriage of their daughter, Maria Graceffa, to David Rones, son of Philip and Terese Rones.

Maria designed her bespoke gown from Modern Trousseau, wore a sweeping veil, and carried light blue hydrangeas.

WHAT'S COOKING
with
Marie & Suzie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

Cheeseburger Pie

By MARIE

Today's recipe is an all American favorite – baked in the pie shell. A cheeseburger is a favorite for many of us and I found this recipe for a pie that is easy to make for a crowd pleaser.

You need one pie crust for the pie.

Cheeseburger Pie
1 pound ground beef
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon oregano
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/2 cup bread crumbs
8 ounce tomato sauce
1/4 cup chopped onion
8 ounces mozzarella cheese for topping

Heat oven to 425 degrees. Cook the beef until brown. Stir in the salt, oregano, bread crumbs, 1/2 cup of the tomato sauce and the onion. Spread cheese over the top.

Pour into the pastry lined pie plate. Bake for 30 minutes, and serve with remaining tomato sauce.

Stir Fried Chicken And Broccoli

By SUZIE

You don't need to do take out when you can make a quick and delicious Asian inspired meal at home.

With just a few key ingredients, you can be enjoying a healthy meal before a take out meal would even be ready to pick up! I always keep handy in my pantry some organic broth, and many condiments for flavoring my meals.

I also keep frozen organic vegetables in my freezer always to rely on, even though fresh usually tastes best, it's not always available. Here is a yummy recipe for a very simple stir fried chicken and broccoli. Hope you enjoy and feel free to spice it up a bit with red pepper flakes, chili peppers..... etc.

1/3 cup water
1/2 cup vegetable or chicken stock
2 cups broccoli florets
1 pound boneless skinless chicken thighs cut into small chunks
4 tablespoons sesame oil
1 sliced medium onion
1/2 cup chopped scallions
2 tablespoons minced garlic
1 tablespoon minced ginger (I buy it already minced by the Ginger People sold in small jars. Keep refrigerated!)
2 tablespoons Braggs Liquid Aminos (far less sodium than soy sauce or tamari, but you can use those)
1 teaspoon honey

Bring water to boil in large deep skillet over medium heat. Cook broccoli until it turns a bright green, then remove. Get rid of water (just about 2 minutes). Add in about 2 tablespoons of oil to skillet and cook onion for a few minutes. Then add broccoli and scallions. Cook a few minutes then remove from pan. (Just keep a bowl next to your stove for this.)

Now add to the pan the remaining 2 tablespoons of oil, and chicken, with the garlic and ginger. Cook until chicken is done. Now throw in all your vegetables from your bowl, and toss with Aminos/soy sauce and honey. Add in the broth and cook until reduced slightly, just a few minutes.

Add more scallions and season to taste with salt and pepper if you need to. I like to add red chili flakes. I also like to add a bit more honey, and usually end up doing 2 teaspoons but some like it with just one. Experiment!

Fruit Cup With Marshmallow Sauce

By MARIE

Here is a fruit cup that looked almost too pretty to eat. They say that presentation is important when serving food, and this dessert was just that pretty.

My daughter Nancy's friend Kim brought this array of fruit cups at Nancy's birthday bash. It takes a while to prepare, but well worth the time.

MARSHMALLOW CREAM

1 8 ounce block cream cheese
1 jar of marshmallow fluff
1 teaspoon vanilla

Mix together into a creamy consistency. You can adjust the thickness by adding more or less marshmallow. Add the vanilla.

Kim used a waffle type cup and arranged them all in a pretty platter.

CUT UP FRUIT

2-3 Kiwi
1 cup cut up strawberries
1 cup blueberries
1 cup red and green grapes small chocolate chips for top

Mix all of the fruit together, and place a small amount of the marshmallow sauce on the bottom of each cup topped with the rest of the marshmallow sauce and the chocolate chips.

McIntyre Government Center Reopens Dec. 5

Ceremony To Celebrate Completion Of $12M City Hall Restoration Project

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

After more than two years of restoration work, the newly refurbished James R. McIntyre Government Center – Old City Hall – will make its public debut with a formal reopening ceremony Saturday, Dec. 5 at 11 a.m.

The formal opening will feature a ribbon cutting, formal program and tours for the public.

Among the speakers will be Mayor Thomas Koch, City Council President Joseph Finn, City Clerk Joseph Shea and lead Architect James Edwards.

Built in 1844 of Quincy granite, the 171-year-old structure was designed by architect Solomon Willard who also drew up plans for the Bunker Hill Monument in Charlestown.

The $12 million project is the first significant restoration of the historic building since it opened as the seat of government. A portion of the cost – about a half million dollars a year – is being funded by Community Preservation money.

Lincoln-Hancock Candy Drive Sweet Success

STUDENTS AND STAFF at Lincoln Hancock Elementary School recently participated in The BFund's Halloween Candy Drive, where each piece of candy resulted in a $.25 donation to Boston Children's Hospital. The BFund is a local organization created by a group of families that frequently holds fundraisers, which directly benefit the children and families currently inpatient at Boston Children's. For one week, students and staff brought in candy to donate to The BFund's drive. Once the collection was complete, candy was sorted and bagged with an encouraging note. These care packages will be delivered to the many children that may have missed their own Halloween activities. Lincoln-Hancock's candy drive raised more than $600 that will directly go to Children's as well as created over 100 goodie bags that will help make someone's day a little sweeter.

Salvation Army Community Leader Kettle Dec. 2, 9

Volunteers Ringing Bell Both Days 9 A.M. To 4 P.M.

SALVATION ARMY volunteers will ring the bell at the 19th annual Community Leader Kettle outside City Hall Wednesday, Dec. 2 and Dec. 9. From left: Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti, NorthEast Community Bank Vice President Amy Huber, Isobel Bertman of Rogers Jewelry, Capt. Timothy Ross, Corps Officer, Salvation Army Quincy Corps Community Center; Joan Keohane, Salvation Army Advisory Board and Mayor Thomas Koch. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth

More than 40 community leaders will ring the bell for the Salvation Army outside City Hall Wednesday, Dec. 2 and Wednesday, Dec. 9.

The Salvation Army kettle will be manned on the sidewalk at 1305 Hancock St. near the John Adams statue and McIntyre Mall from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. both days.

The community leader kettle has become a holiday tradition in Quincy in support of the Quincy Salvation Army. It was started 19 years ago by Quincy Sun newspaper founder and longtime Salvation Army Advisory Board member Henry W. Bosworth, Jr. Since its inception, the community leader kettle has raised $62,257 - including $5,800 last year.

Money collected at the kettle - like the Salvation Army's other kettles in Quincy and neighboring communities - benefits the needy throughout the year. This includes meals, toys and other holiday support for those in need, along with funding for food pantries, social services, and education programs year-round.

"We see new people in need of The Salvation Army's services each day," said Captain Timothy Ross, Corps Officer of The Salvation Army Quincy Corps Community Center. "Many never imagined they would need our help.

"We are seeing families with two adults working who can't make ends meet," Ross continued. "Others don't have enough income to cover the rising cost of food and utilities. We are excited to get the red kettles back out there so that we can continue to help all those in need."

Here is the line-up of community leaders volunteering at the City Hall kettle.

Hoarding: More Than Just A Heap Of Junk

A Message From The Quincy Health Department

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

RUTH JONES

Hoarding disorder is persistent difficulty discarding or parting with possessions because of a perceived need to save them.

A person with hoarding disorder experiences anguish at the thought of getting rid of the items. In many cases the items may have important emotional significance serving as a reminder of happier times, represent beloved people or pets, and/or they feel safer when they are surrounded by the things they save. Excessive accumulation of items occurs, regardless of their actual worth.

Hoarding often creates such cramped living conditions that homes may be packed to capacity, with only narrow pathways winding through mounds of clutter. Hoarding ranges from mild to severe. In some cases, hoarding may not have much impact on a person's life, while in other cases it seriously affects their functioning on a daily basis.

In the homes of those who have hoarding disorder, the countertops, sinks, stoves, desks, stairways and practically all other surfaces are usually stacked with possessions. And when there's no more room inside, the clutter may spread to the garage, vehicles and yard.

Some people also collect animals, keeping dozens or hundreds of pets confined inside or outside. These animals often aren't cared for properly and the health and safety of the person and the animals are at risk due to unsanitary conditions. People with hoarding disorder often don't see it as a problem, making treatment challenging. But intensive therapy can help them understand their compulsions and live safer, more gratifying lives.

Clutter and difficulty discarding things are usually the first signs of a hoarding disorder, which often emerges during the teenage years. As the person grows older, he or she typically starts acquiring things for which there is no need or space. By middle age, symptoms are often severe and more difficult to treat. Hoarding disorder affects emotions, thoughts and behavior.

Signs and symptoms may include:

•Persistent inability to part with any possession, regardless of its value.

•Excessive attachment to possessions, including discomfort letting others touch or borrow them or distress at the idea of letting an item go.

•Cluttered living spaces, making areas of the home unusable for the intended purpose, such as not being able to cook in the kitchen or use the bathroom to bathe.

•Keeping stacks of newspapers, magazines or junk mail.

•Letting food or trash build up to unusually extreme, unsanitary levels.

•Acquiring unneeded or seemingly useless items, such as trash, paperclips, and condiments from restaurants.

•Trouble managing daily activities because of procrastination and difficulty making decisions.

• Difficulty organizing items, sometimes losing important items in the clutter, moving items from one pile to another, without discarding anything.

• Shame or embarrassment and limited or no social interactions.

The cause of hoarding is unclear. Genetics, brain chemistry and stressful occurrences in life are being studied as possible origins. Hoarding disorder can affect anyone, regardless of age, sex or economic status. It's also not clear how common hoarding disorder is, partly because many people never seek treatment.

Risk factors include:

• Age. Hoarding usually starts around ages 11 to 15, and it tends to get worse with age. Younger children may start saving items, such as broken toys, pencils, outdated school papers and broken appliances. Hoarding is more common in older adults than in younger adults.

• Personality. Many people who have hoarding disorder have a temperament that includes indecisiveness. Hoarding disorder appears to be more common in people with psychological disorders, such as obsessive-compulsive disorder (OCD), depression or anxiety disorder.

• Family history. There is a strong correlation between having a family member who has hoarding disorder and having the disorder yourself.

• Stressful episodes. Some people develop hoarding disorder after experiencing a stressful life event that they had difficulty coping with, such as the death of a loved one, divorce, eviction or losing possessions in a fire.

• Social isolation. People with hoarding disorder are typically socially introverted and withdrawn. Some people actually turn to the comfort of hoarding to combat loneliness. In many cases, the hoarding leads to further social isolation.

Hoarding disorder can cause a multitude of complications, including: unsanitary conditions posing a risk to health, Increased risk of falls, Injury or being trapped by shifting or falling items, fire hazard, inability to perform daily tasks, such as bathing or cooking, poor work performance, family conflicts, loneliness and social isolation, financial problems, and legal issues, including eviction or condemnation of the property.

Because many people with hoarding disorder symptoms don't recognize that their behavior is a problem, friends or family members may experience more agony than the hoarder does. When their possessions or animals are taken away, hoarders will often rapidly collect more to help fulfill emotional needs.

Because little is known about what causes hoarding disorder, there's no established way to prevent it. However, as with many psychological conditions, getting treatment at the first indication of a problem may help prevent hoarding from becoming severe.

If you or a loved one has symptoms of hoarding disorder, talk with a doctor or mental health provider promptly. There are two main types of treatment for hoarding disorder — psychotherapy, medications, or a combination of both. Some communities have agencies that help with hoarding problems.

Check with your local government for resources in your area. As difficult as it might be, you may also need to contact local authorities, such as police, fire, public health, child protective services or animal welfare agencies, especially when health or safety is in question.

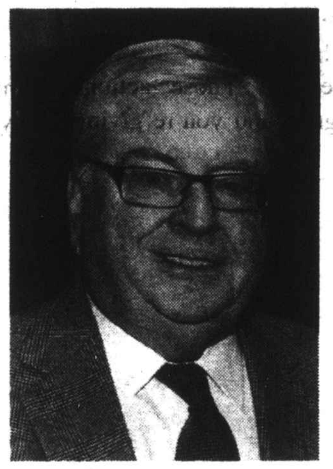
Shea Succeeds Gillis As County Commissioner

By SCOTT JACKSON

City Clerk Joseph Shea has been appointed a Norfolk County commissioner, replacing John Gillis following the latter's retirement earlier this month.

Fellow County Commissioners Peter Collins of Milton and Francis O'Brien of Dedham voted unanimously Nov. 18 to appoint the 70-year-old Shea to the seat left vacant by Gillis' retirement on Nov. 10.

Shea's seat will be up for election next November. Shea has said he plans to run for a full-term in 2016 and will retire as city clerk next spring.



JOSEPH SHEA

Shea has been a fixture in Quincy since the 1970s. He served as the executive secretary (chief of staff) to then Mayor Walter Hannon from 1972 to 1976. After working in the private sector, Shea was tapped by Gillis to serve as his assistant city clerk in 1991. Shea held that position for 19 months, until he was appointed city clerk in 1992 after Gillis was elected a county commissioner.

Gillis, who turned 90 earlier this year, was first appointed city clerk in 1959 and held that position until 1992, when he retired to serve as a county commissioner. Gillis was first elected to the county position in November of that year and was subsequently re-elected five times, most recently in 2012.

The city clerk's job is appointed by the City Council and carries a three-year term and a $115,000 salary. Aside from serving as the clerk for the council, the city clerk is the keeper of all city records and vital statistics, oversees city elections and voter registration as chairman of the Board of Registrars, acts as the city shellfish warden and sits on the five-member Board of License Commissioners, which Shea currently chairs.

County commissioners each earn approximately $30,000 annually and meet once a week. The commissioners oversee the county's budget, which covers the Registry of Deeds, Land Court and the Wollaston Recreational Facility and Presidents Golf Course. Commissioners serve four-year terms and no more than one commissioner may reside in any of Norfolk County municipality.

Shea has said he plans to use vacation and personal time he has accrued as city clerk to fulfill his duties as county commissioners until his retirement from City Hall.

By SCOTT JACKSON

Nina Liang, who was elected to one of three at-large seats on the City Council earlier this month, wants to build a sense of engagement and networks of relationships across Quincy.

Liang, 27, will be sworn into her first term on the council Jan. 4. Making her first run for elected office, she finished third in a five-candidate field for the three at-large seats in the Nov. 3 election.

"What really led me to run for office is that sense of engagement, that sense of building that network of relationships among people because everyone across the city of Quincy, they all have their own unique skill sets they can bring to the table and there are always folks that have a need in this city," Liang responded when asked what her priorities would be as an at-large councillor during a recent interview.

"There are numerous amounts of resources and I want to make sure no matter where you are in the city you have somebody you can reach out to. You have somebody that can act as a resource to get you to where you need to be."

Liang attributed her desire to help others to her experience growing up in Quincy.

As a daughter of immigrant parents from China, Liang would often help her parents translate various forms. Liang attended the Sacred Heart School, and said the school's principal, teachers and nuns went above and beyond to help her and her family out.

Additionally, Liang's younger sister has a mental disability and she said her family was able to get help from the city as well as the state's Department of Developmental Services, which provided her sister with the best care possible.

"Growing up, I realized I had the opportunity to be part of that – to be somebody that can help another family. To be somebody that can help another student. I had the ability to do that and I started getting really involved in the community doing volunteer work. When I was in high school that was something that was integral to moving forward. You had to commit yourself to community service work and I loved it," said Liang, who went to Fontbonne Academy for high school and then Hofstra University in New York.

"That was something that allowed me to do things like volunteer for the hospital. I volunteered for the hospital for a little while. I volunteered at middle schools and helping kids with their homework. Those actions are great and you're giving back to the community.

"But even more than that, you're establishing these relationships with people, long term relationships where yes you go into the school and help somebody do their math homework, but long term if you have a relationship with that child and they need help with something maybe they're parents can't facilitate now they have someone they can reach out to, just like I did way back when."

Liang, who resides on Williams Street in North Quincy, said she decided to run for an at-large seat because she would be able to build relationships between people citywide.

"As big as Quincy is, there are pockets of neighborhoods where there is an intense and beautiful sense of community where all the neighbors come and they know each other very well, they watch each other's kids, they go to each other's homes and have dinners. You have this very intense sense of community all across the city," Liang said.

"To be able to represent the city as a whole, I think it allows me to take somebody who is a resource here in one part of the city and somebody else across the city that has a need to be able to connect those two. That's something I'm really excited about.

"There are people all across Quincy that have these amazing abilities to offer through their work or just through life experiences they've had. I want to be able to make that connection across the entire city and this will allow me to do that."

Liang's competition for the at-large seats included two incumbents and two current members of the School Committee and she did feel like an underdog in the race. But she was comforted to know that all five candidates – herself and her opponents – were all running to make the community better and not fighting against each other.

"For me – being the only woman running at-large, being the youngest out of all of them running at-large and being the only one that was never in office running at-large – it was intimidating," Liang said.

"I had an opportunity to speak to every single one of them and across the board what sort of brought me some comfort is we were all doing it for the same reason. We all wanted to fight for balls at the practice range.

"People just stop and watch him hit the ball," his dad says.

What kind of game does Joseph have at such a young age?

He averages a score of 43 for nine holes. His posted his best score – a 37 – in a tournament this summer. Joseph finished third and the kid who won shot a 33 and the second place finisher shot a 36. They are a year and a half older than Joseph.

The course is modified for a youngster his age but his skill level is still impressive despite the shorter distances. A par 5 is about 200 to 250 yards; Par 4 is 110 to 175 yards and a Par 3 from 50 to 110 yards.

He can hit his driver about 110 to 120 yards. He's straight off the tee and can chip, putt and get out of bunkers, too.

"He hits every club straight," his dad says. "He has very good mechanics and has a great swing – pretty much by himself."

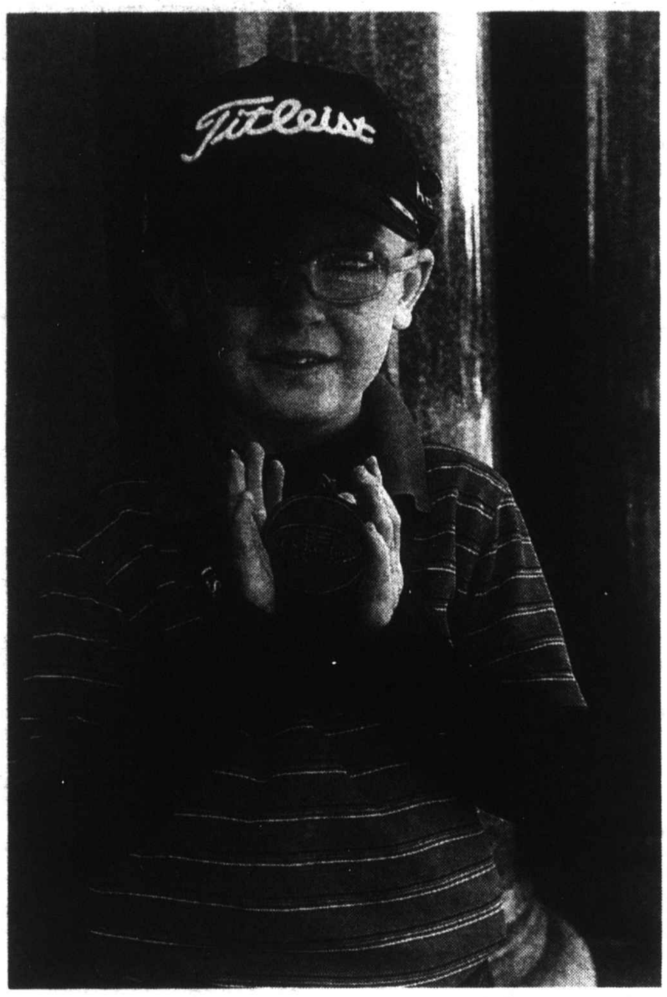
If you ask Joseph what he likes most about golf, he says softly with a smile, "Hitting the driver."

He also perks up when his dad asks him where he got is first eagle (a 2 on a Par 4.) "The seventh hole at Widow's Walk (in Scituate)," he says proudly.

With the summer season over, Joseph will continue playing this fall until there's snow on the ground and the courses close. They'll move indoors at Marina Bay and also hit from the heated bays at the Harmon Club when the weather turns more winter-like.

His golf calendar is already booking up. He's been invited to play in four different regional tournaments in Arizona, Florida and Georgia including a Holiday Classic just before Christmas in Florida.

He'll be invited to play at Pinehurst in North Carolina – site of several U.S. Open Golf Championships – in the World Championships next year in August. The tournament features the top-ranked young golfers from the U.S. and the world including Australia, Japan, India and New Zealand.



QUINCY'S JOSEPH MULVEY holds the medal he earned winning the Six and Under U.S. Kids Golf Boston Tour Championship held in Cranston, R.I. Mulvey, who is 5 years old, held on for a one-stroke victory to complete a fall season in which he won four of six tournaments and was named 2015 Six and Under Player of the Year.

Asked what is Joseph's secret of his golf success, his dad answers with one word.

"Focus. He can really concentrate and is very calm. Even when people gather around to watch him hit balls it doesn't phase him," Joe says. "When he has a tough hole, he's not upset. He takes it in stride and says to himself, 'the next hole is your best hole.'

"I have to remind myself sometimes that he's only five. Our attitude is just go have fun and that's when he plays the best. We're always proud of him. We see some kids who really feel the pressure but not Joseph."

As any golfer would tell you, once you get bit by the "golf bug" it's hard to keep the clubs down.

And that goes for a five-year-old like Joseph, too.

"He loves playing. He never says no," his dad says. "The minute he says no, that's okay too and we'll just hang out but he always wants to go."

Joseph also likes to follow his favorite golfer – Phil Mickelson – both figuratively and literally.

This past Labor Day, Joseph and his dad followed the five-time Major champion around TPC Boston during the Deustche Bank Championship in Norton Labor Day weekend. At the 18th hole, the boy and the legend – who coincidentally share the same birthday, June 16 – shared a brief moment that Joseph and dad will never forget.

"Phil's caddy (Jim) 'Bones' (Mackay) was actually laughing at him because he kept following Phil from hole to hole. At the 18th hole, there were a lot of people around Phil and they let Joseph through so he got close to Phil.

"Phil actually gave Joseph a fist pump walking off on the 18th hole."

It may be just a fist pump now but some day it could be deemed a golfing baton. One golfing legend making way for the game's newest phenom.

McIntyre Government Center Reopens Dec. 5

happened it if weren't for the Community Preservation monies that voters voted for a number of years ago," said Mayor Koch. "That made the project possible and financially feasible."

The restoration completes a long-list of upgrades including bringing the building up to code for the electrical, plumbing, HVAC and other systems. The foundation has been strengthened and an elevator has been installed to provide handicap accessibility. Other new features include security and fire suppression systems – both lacking in the building prior to the project.

Mayor Thomas Koch, who spearheaded the drive to overhaul one of the city's most iconic buildings, said the McIntyre Government Center will now be a source a pride.

"This building now speaks to our history, it speaks to us as a city. This is a class city and this will be more reflective of what this city deserves," Koch said in a recent interview from his third floor glass annex office overlooking the historic city hall.

"I think people will be quite pleasantly pleased with the work that's been done. "I know it's been talked about and talked about and reported on but I still go back to the conditions of that building and how horrible it was and quite frankly how embarrassing it was as the sitting mayor when people wanted to see the old building.

"It really was a disgrace," Koch said, adding the building was plagued by mold, mildew, water leaks and even insects among other shortcomings for a public government building.

Koch called the project an investment for the city and its future generations.

"This is about the city – our history, our heritage and it's a gift to the future generations of this city.

"The city has made a commitment to future generations and the City Council funded that commitment," Koch said. "It's a preservation project but this building is also one of the icons of the city. That building is the city and since 1844 all the governmental decisions have been made in that building. How many people have served in that building whether it was town meeting, town council, city council, mayors, city managers . . . it's pretty remarkable."

Some early cost estimates pegged the project at $7 million. However, when bids were opened, the costs were over $10 million.

"We're not drastically over the cost of the bids," Koch said. "That was purely an estimate because until you got in there and started opening walls and doors and seeing the extent of how bad things were you just didn't know how bad it was.

"The architect and engineer said to me, 'if there were an earthquake tremor or if you had a fire in that building it would have just imploded. It would have been a crime to send a firefighter into that building in those conditions. It was structurally so unsound – the whole thing would have just caved," the mayor said.

"Had that happened under our watch there would have been a lot of finger pointing and people asking 'why didn't you do something about it?' I'll take the criticism any day when people ask 'why did you spend so much on that building?'

"When people see it, I think they'll realize it was a good investment," he added.

The signature space of the restored government center will be the second-floor "Great Hall." The 181-seat hall will house the new City Council Chamber as well as a balcony on the third floor of the building. The Chamber will feature a new council desk made out of maple and period-accurate color schemes.

The first floor will feature exhibit space displaying historic artifacts from city government throughout the years as well as meeting space.

It is expected that the City Council will meet in the new Chamber Monday, Dec. 7 following the public opening Dec. 5.

Inauguration ceremonies for Mayor Koch and other elected officials will take place in the Great Hall on Monday, Jan. 4. Koch said the ceremony will start at 10 a.m. The social event will be held at Granite Links later that evening at 7 p.m. Jan. 4.

Joseph W. Koch Memorial Field Dedicated At Atlantic

Long-Time Parks, DPW Worker Honored At Ceremony

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The playing field behind Atlantic Middle School was dedicated Sunday in memory of long-time Park Department and Public Works employee Joseph W. Koch. The restored field on Hollis Avenue was one of the last projects Koch worked on before his death in August 2014.

Among those attending the ceremony were members of Koch's family including his brother Mayor Thomas Koch. City colleagues and other local officials and friends also turned out for the tribute to Joseph Koch.

Joseph Koch was a U.S. Army veteran who dedicated nearly 40 years to the City – leading a number of major projects during that time.

After his death, the Quincy City Council, School Committee, and the Park and Recreation Board all took formal action to formally dedicate the field in Koch's honor.

Koch went to work for the City in 1977, where he spent most of career in the Park and Forestry Department as a heavy equipment operator, foreman and arborist. He served as the primary equipment operator for a wide range of major park improvements, including Adams Field, Veterans' Memorial Stadium, the Adams Walk in Merrymount Park, the Faxon Field track facility, the reconstruction of Cavanagh Field and the new greenspace that has become part of the Quincy High School campus on Coddington Street.

He also worked as a foreman in the Department of Public Works, supervising the City's snow removal operation and leading an overhaul of the DPW's rear yard.

Mayor Koch said dedicating the natural-grass soccer field in his brother's memory was a fitting tribute to a dedicated city employee who grew up near the field and often played football and baseball there.

KOCH FAMILY MEMBERS were among those attending the dedication of Joseph W. Koch Memorial Field at Atlantic Middle School in North Quincy Sunday. "It seemed to be a natural fit for remembering Joe there," the mayor said before Sunday's ceremony. "He grew up the street from the school, played baseball there with the Koch Club there and it was the last project he worked on before his death."

The monument is an upright granite memorial engraved with the City seal and Army emblem as well as an excavator and a bulldozer. Behind the monument stands a flag pole.

Joseph Koch was a behind-the-scenes loyal city employee who preferred long days in heavy equipment to the limelight. Asked how he thought Joe would react to the honor, Mayor

No Foul Play Suspected In Boy's Death

By SCOTT JACKSON

Investigators do not suspect foul play in the death of a 10-year-old boy found unresponsive in his Verchild Street home around noon on Sunday.

Quincy Police Capt. John Dougan said police were called to the house on Verchild Street around noon Sunday after the boy was found unresponsive. The boy was rushed to Quincy Medical Center, where he was pronounced dead.

The investigation into the boy's death was ongoing as of Monday morning, but Peggy Krippendorf, a spokeswoman for the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office, said foul play was not suspected.

"At this time it does not appear to be suspicious, just tragic," she said.

PREGNANCY GINGIVITIS

It is strongly suggested that pregnant women schedule a prenatal visit with the dentist since hormonal changes related to pregnancy make women particularly prone to gum disease (gingivitis). Women who already have gingivitis will likely find that their gums will become increasingly more inflamed, especially if they do not receive treatment. It should also be pointed out that research shows that changes in estrogen and progesterone levels associated with pregnancy affect the nature of the body's response to the bacteria responsible for causing periodontal (gum) infections. These infections may pose a threat to the placenta and fetus, increasing the likelihood of preterm delivery. This potential complication alone should prompt pregnant women to schedule regular dental visits.

You may not even be aware that you have gum disease because often there is no pain. If you have any concerns or questions about any subject relating to the well-being of your teeth and gums, call us at 617 479-6220. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we are currently accepting new patients. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist.

P.S. About 40 percent of women develop gingivitis at some point in their pregnancies.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Monday, November 16, 2015, Officers Joseph Cox and Patrick Folan were dispatched to Miranova Suites on Cottage Avenue for a reported theft.

Upon arrival, the Officers met with the hotel concierge who said that he just arrived at work and noticed that there were items missing from the hotel desk and lobby. The concierge showed an empty recessed area where a television had been removed. There was a towel sitting on the arm of a chair and there was no electrical power in the hotel lobby/desk area. Officer Cox checked the circuit breaker board in the rear of the lobby and discovered that 3 breakers had been switched to "off". These breakers were labeled Lobby Outlet, Camera and Camera. The Officers also found a second television partially detached from a wall mount, with fingerprints on its face. A hotel female guest (suspect 1) approached Officer Folan and stated that there was a television on the ground across the street. The concierge confirmed that this was the television missing from the recessed area in the lobby.

Simultaneous to investigating this incident, a concerned citizen stopped and stated that there was a male sleeping in a vehicle in the Miranova Suites parking area. Officer Folan checked the vehicle and the male occupant, who said he was fine and did not require any assistance. Back inside the hotel, the concierge determined that the following items were missing; Samsung Television (recovered at scene) 2. Dell Computer/monitor combo 3. Hewlett Packard Computer/monitor combo 4. Laser jet printer 5. Metal Butterfly Statue 6. Antique Metal Horn.

At this time, Detective Landry arrived on scene and removed the fingerprints from the face of the television. While analyzing the area behind the desk, Detective Landry uncovered a Suboxone prescription bottle, with Suboxone strips inside, dated 11/11/2015 and belonging to the man who was sleeping in the car. At this time, suspect 1 returned to the lobby, walked around, then left and returned multiple times. She was not wearing shoes and was watching Officers on scene conduct their investigation. Officer Cox encountered the female suspect and asked her if everything was ok to which she stated "yes". After inquiring as to her name, Officer Cox recognized her name as the owner of the vehicle that the man was sleeping in. When questioned, she said that the male was her friend and he was waiting for her. She then said that she was going back to her room. Officer Cox went out to check on the vehicle, but it was no longer there. The Officer then spotted the vehicle parked off in the distance. The vehicle's rear windows were tinted, but the Officer was able to see a computer chair, pillows and big rolls of toilet paper inside.

LT. DAN MINTON

Officer Cox requested that an Officer guard the suspect vehicle in order for the concierge to identify the items as hotel property.

The concierge confirmed that the items came from one of his hotel rooms. At this time, the female suspect/car owner approached the Officers, who confronted her and gave her Miranda Warnings. She told the Officers that her male friend stayed at the Inn overnight and he was waiting in the vehicle, but apparently re-parked and walked away. She said that she believed that he placed the stolen items in her vehicle. The female suspect gave permission to the Officers to search her vehicle. The concierge identified more items missing from the lobby as well as additional items taken from the room.

Based on the physical evidence as well as statements made, Officer Cox placed the 30 year old Weymouth female suspect under arrest for, "Larceny from a Building." The female suspect provided a telephone number of the male friend. Officer Cox called and told him that he needed to respond back to the hotel to take responsibility for his involvement in this incident. The 30 year old male from Weymouth stated that he would come to the Quincy Police Station with a lawyer to be placed under arrest. At the time the report was written, he had not turned himself in, so Officer Cox applied for an arrest warrant for the same criminal charge. Nice Work!

TELEMARKETER SCAMS: You get a call from a telemarketer selling a fancy new product, and after talking, you decide you want to buy it. That's when he asks you to wire money for payment, specifying cash pickup. Do you do it?

Don't do it! If you wire money, you can't get it back - and, thanks to recent changes to the FTC's Telemarketing Sales Rule, it is illegal. Under the updated Rule, it's against the law for the caller to ask you to pay with:

- a cash-to-cash money transfer (like Western Union or MoneyGram)
- a "reload" card, used to load money on a prepaid debit card

The expanded TSR also has new rules about what a telemarketer can do with your bank account number behind the scenes. Unless you've done business with a company before, giving out your bank account number on the phone can be very risky. Consider pulling out a credit card instead. The bottom line is that these payment methods help scammers stay in the shadows, and they offer you little or no protection from fraud. In fact, you should be skeptical about any telemarketer that pressures you to pay a certain way. Credit cards offer you the most protection, but even then, you'll want to make sure you aren't dealing with a phone scam. Under the TSR, telemarketers also are not allowed to charge an up-front fee to help someone recover money lost to fraud.

These changes add to protections you already have under the TSR, including:

- the National Do Not Call Registry (under fire for not working!)
- rules about when telemarketers can call, and what they have to tell you when they do
- rules about billing, abandoning calls, and caller ID transmission
- limits on robocalls

If telemarketers don't follow the rules, just hang up. In most cases, it is not a good deal anyway, so just hang up.

SUGGESTIONS FROM A HEALTHCARE WORKER WITH THE ELDERLY: Here are two ideas to safeguard senior citizens in their home:

- Make sure there is a home phone. (land line) In an emergency, the senior will know where the phone is, unlike a cell phone which they could put down and not remember where it is. Sometimes it may be difficult to get to that phone.

- Even better: provide the senior with both the land line and a cell phone.

- The best: have multiple land line phones located throughout the home and a cell phone with a simple belt or waistline carrying case.

Bathrobes: for seniors, it is recommended that the length not go beyond the knees due to incidents of tripping.

Diverse Faiths Pray For Peace At Bethany Church

By REV. PETER PREBLE

On a cold and rainy Sunday evening, about 70 gathered at the Bethany Congregational Church in Quincy to pray.

What made this gathering different? It was made up of Hindus, Muslims, Unitarians, and Christians all coming together to join their voices as one in praying for peace in our world.

When terrorism or natural disaster happens, all of us are affected in one way or another. We can get caught up in all sorts of feelings and emotions, and this is okay but once the dust settles what should our response be? As people of faith, our duty to others is clear. Jesus taught us to take care of one another, and our burdens, and one of the most effective ways to make this happen is by prayer.

Quincy Prays for Peace was the idea of Bethany Church member Jean Ann Phinney. "I had been thinking about this for a while and the time just seemed right," Phinney said.

When Senior Pastor, Rev. William Harding, was deployed to Iraq as a United States Army Chaplain, Phinney organized a 24/7 prayer chain to hold Pastor Bill and all the soldiers deployed in prayers. Quincy Prays for Peace is an extension of that prayer chain.

Rev. Harding, the prayer service host for the evening, welcomed all in attendance to Bethany and expressed his hope that, "Bethany continues to be a beacon of prayer and hope in Quincy and that our prayers continue long after this night has ended."

The service brought together people of diverse faiths with the common goal of praying for peace in the light of the terrorist attacks in Paris and other parts of the world. Prayers offered by the religious leaders of the City of Quincy, Dr. Jean-Jacques Yarmoff, the Attaché for Science and Technology from the French Consulate in Boston, brought the greetings and thanks of the French government.

Drawing from the many faith traditions of the Unitarian Universalists, Rev. Rebecca Froom from the United First Parish Church in Quincy, asked the assembled congregation to join her in a song written by a chaplain who worked at Ground Zero after the 9/11 attacks. "When I breathe in, I breathe in peace. When I breathe out, I breathe out love."

Representatives of the varied faith groups from Quincy stood and, in their language and tradition, prayed for peace in our hearts and peace in the world. Imam Dr. Khalid Nasr of the Islamic Center of New England asked, during his brief remarks, that "we do not end here we need to continue the dialogue as people of faith." Imam Nasr then chanted a beautiful Islamic prayer for peace.

In his closing remarks, Rev. Harding reminded those assembled that, "Just as the light from these bring the light into the darkness we now have to be that light and drive away darkness out in the world."

The members of Bethany Congregational Church have reinstituted their prayer chain and ask all houses of worship to consider joining with theirs or creating their show we people of faith may shower our prayers on this hurting world and attempt to be healing.

Participating in the service were Rev. Rebecca Froom, United First Parish Church Unitarian Universalist, Kumu Gupta from the Hindu Community, Imam Dr. Khalid Nasar, Haider Alsarah, and Hawraa Alsaad of the Muslims Community, and Rev. William C. Harding and Rev. Peter Preble from Bethany.

Memorial Field

MAYOR THOMAS P. KOCH along with speakers Paul Franz and Dave Murphy paid tribute to Joe Koch during the dedication of the Joseph W. Koch Memorial Field in North Quincy Sunday. Franz, who referred to himself as Joe's "work wife" because of all the time they spent together working on city projects, dressed in overalls in honor of the late DPW worker.

Koch replied:

"He probably would not want any part of it. He was always behind-the-scenes and in many ways he lived in the shadows of my father (longtime Park Director Richard Koch, Sr.) for a long time and then he lived in the shadow of me for a long time. And I say that respectfully. The reality is through this dedication it really spells out his contributions to the city over the years. It was pretty remarkable."

Mayor Koch said his brother Joe was someone who loved to go to work every day and worked hard every day.

"He loved to get things done and he was mindful of the city's tax dollars. He saved the city a fortune over the years because we do a lot of things in house with his talent. No matter where you look around the city you see his mark on all the parks.

"The ironic part is no one would ever know that but now there is a monument for him for his contributions to the community. He'd be proud of that flag pole being an Army veteran."

Joe Koch started as a city laborer after taking a Civil Service test. He worked his way up to being a heavy equipment operator and he became a foreman as well as the city's first arborist.

"He was uniquely talented," Mayor Koch said. "He could do anything with a backhoe, bulldozer or excavator. Anything. He had a tremendous eye for grading. He could do asphalt, he could set curb. He could take a tree down. There wasn't anything he couldn't do."

Asked what he hopes the public will realize when they see his brother's monument, Tom Koch said.

"One – that he was a veteran of this country – Vietnam era. He volunteered to join the Army when he was 17 years old after graduating NQHS.

"Two - he chose a career in public service – even though he had job offer after job offer for many companies that worked in the city that wanted to grab a heavy equipment operator and could have made a lot more money in the private sector, he chose public duty and the city is better for it.

"The beauty of the monument is it gives you a description of his accomplishments rather than just have a name on it. The monument tells a story of who Joe was and that's nice."

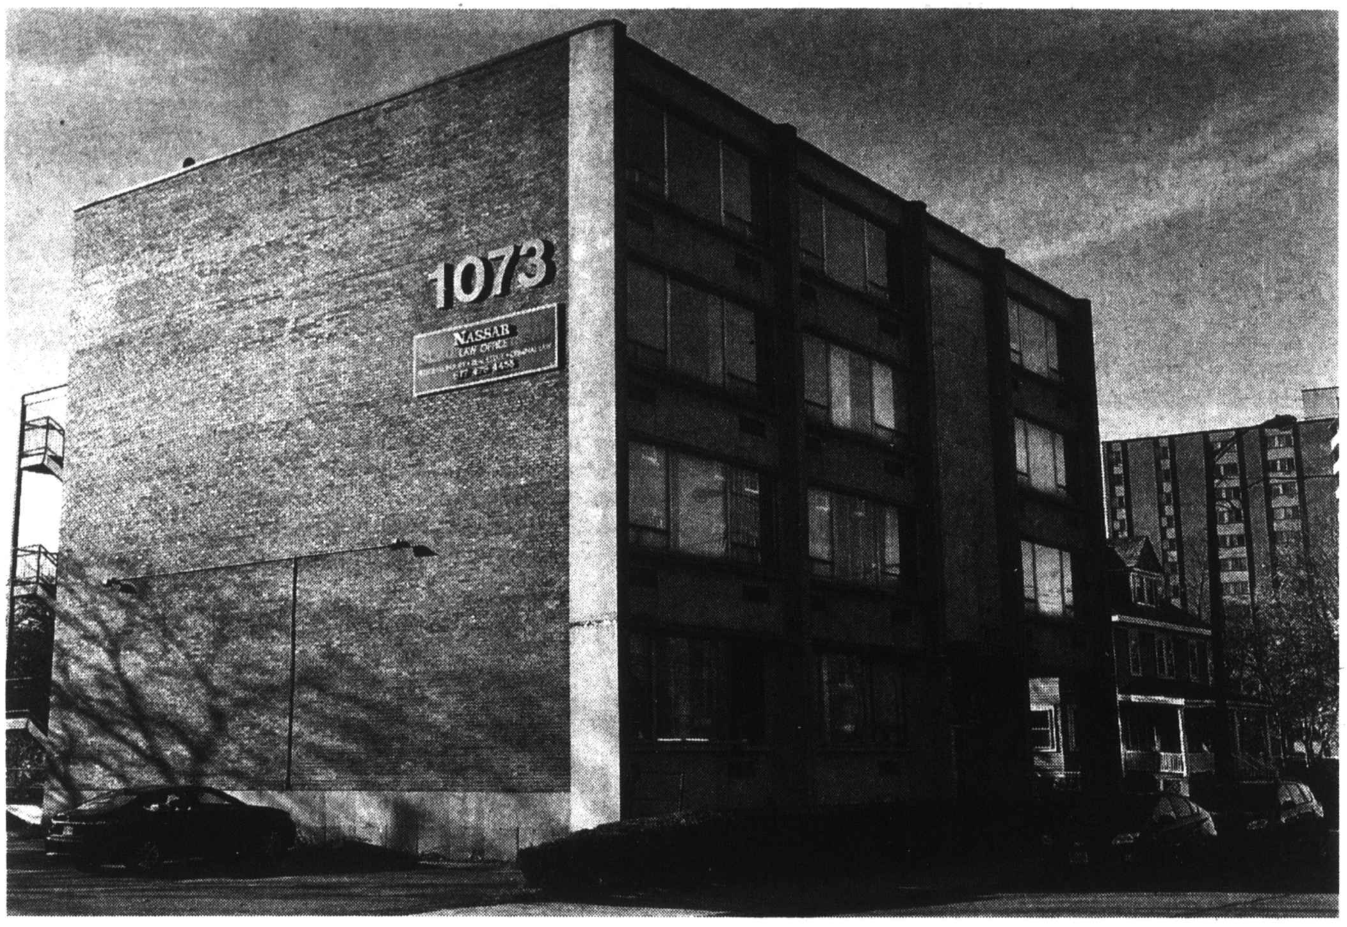
Skepticism Over Proposed Quincy Center Hotel



RENOVATIONS totaling more than $2 million have been proposed for the office building at 1073 Hancock St., which would be converted into the 36-room Kendon Hotel. Residents who spoke at the Nov. 19 Planning Board meeting expressed skepticism over the plan to open a hotel on site. By SCOTT JACKSON

Residents voiced their dissatisfaction with a proposed Hancock Street hotel in the northern part of Quincy Center, citing concerns that it may not be appropriate for the neighborhood.

Haocheng Trading USA has proposed converting the existing office building at 1073 Hancock St. into the 36-room Kendon Hotel; the renovation would take between nine months and a year and cost more than $2 million. The building is located in a Business C zoning district, which allows for a hotel on site, and has 21 parking spaces – three more than required by the zoning code.

Bill Zou and Johnny Ouang, representing Haocheng Trading USA, appeared before the Planning Board on Nov. 19 to pitch the hotel proposal; the board did not vote on the plan that night and the applicants will be before the board again on Jan. 13.

The company purchased 1073 Hancock St. in 2012 and had originally planned a residential use for the building featuring small-size units, but withdrew those plans because of neighborhood concerns. The company then opted for the hotel proposal; Haocheng operates a 120-room and a 60-room hotel in southern China.

"Bill and his principals saw a real opportunity to convert this building into something they have experience with – that's the hotel use," attorney Rob Fleming, who represented the applicant at the meeting, explained.

"The need is there for that. They felt it is a great proposal – something that will be suitable for the downtown."

The proposed hotel would have a fitness center and conference center in the basement level and lobby/reception area on the first floor. The rooms would resemble typical hotel rooms, Fleming said, with one or two beds and no kitchen area. There is no immediate plan to have a restaurant or kitchen of any type on site.

Rooms in the hotel would go for between $110 and $159 per night, depending on the season. Fleming said guests would be at the hotel for short-term stays; he suggested residents of China may stay in the hotel while visiting their children who are attending Boston area schools.

"We have some great colleges and universities in this area. A lot of parents are sending their kids here from China so there will be a lot of tourists from there visiting their children," Fleming said. "This is all short-term stay."

Members of the public had a chance to weigh in on the proposal during the Nov. 19 meeting and the public hearing was continued to the next meeting in January. More than a half-dozen residents chose to speak at the meeting, expressing skepticism about the proposal.

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest, who previously organized a community meeting for the plan, said she has heard from constituents living in the area that the hotel proposal is not suitable for the neighborhood. Additionally, she noted three residential projects are in the pipeline nearby, including the redevelopment of the former Central Middle School and Temple Beth El site.

"I really appreciate the $2 million investment, but what's most important to me and my constituents here in the audience is that whatever happens at 1073 Hancock is right for the neighborhood," Laforest said. "I've heard a lot of concern about this project and not feeling it is suitable for the neighborhood.

"Keep in mind, there is so much development happening right now with the Central Middle School, the temple project and 10 Merrymount Road. There has just been a lot happening."

Ed Flavin, who owns Flavin & Flavin next door at 1085 Hancock St., said he was not objecting to proposal but stated there are better uses of the property than converting the existing building into a hotel. Two nearby condo buildings on Adams Street both have waiting lists to move into, Flavin noted, in addition to the three projects Laforest referenced.

"You have a terrific location and I think you should adhere to it and develop it with what it should be," Flavin said. "It's perhaps the best location I think in the city of Quincy right now with the downtown development. You're near everything people want to be near and yet you have a terrific, quality neighborhood.

"You have people here that are invested in the neighborhood, they're committed to the neighborhood and they want to protect and preserve the neighborhood. You're not going to have that here. You're going to have people coming and going…I just think you're selling the property short."

Kathy Egan, a resident of 1067 Hancock St., said she was concerned with the state of the building as it stands today. Graffiti has been a persistent problem, she said, and if that continues it could affect the clientele who stay at the hotel and bring down property values nearby.

"If [the owners] fixed the outside of the building and even made the office space nicer, painted the insides and whatnot, you probably would have a market for people wanting to rent office space there," Egan said.

"But because of the outside not looking nice, the graffiti continuing to be there even after it's cleaned up, people don't want to go there…You're not going to want to stay at a place that's not nice so will you get a clientele that's looking for a cheaper hotel, but not a nice clientele. I'm not trying to judge anybody. I just don't want that to bring the property value down for everybody."

Bill Meyer, a resident at 1 Adams St, echoed Egan's concerns, saying the building's condition has gotten worse since the site was purchased in 2012.

"It's gotten worse looking and worse looking over the last three years," Meyer said. "If these improvements go through to the building over the next year, let's say in three years he neglects the hotel and it ends up being a sleaze hotel. We don't want that in the neighborhood."

In response to those concerns, Fleming said it would irresponsible to renovate the building at a cost of more than $2 million and let it fall into disrepair and apologized for the lack of upkeep since the property was purchased.

"It would be irresponsible and not very wise to put over $2 million into renovating this building just to see it go into disrepair. I don't think it's going to happen. Having known Bill and Johnny for quite some time, I don't see that happening after the initial investment in this property," Fleming said.

"I know there has been some neglect the neighbors have expressed concern [over] on the existing building. I apologize for my client with respect to that. A lot of repairs or upgrading of the interior hasn't been done because we've been going through this process for probably two-and-a-half years."

Others at the meeting raised concern over the traffic in the area, particularly with other developments in the pipeline already. Among those residents was Beverly McDonald of Merrymount Road.

"I just don't see how we can take on more traffic," she said.

Heather Georgallas, a traffic engineer hired by the applicants, said the hotel would have a "very minimal" impact on traffic with ten and nine vehicle trips added during the morning and evening peak hours, respectively.

the opportunity to give our all, to give our best to make this community better.

"Knowing we were all doing it for the same reasons turned it into a sense of we're all moving towards the same goal. It was never 'I'm fighting you for this. I'm running against you. You're my opponent.' There was never any of that. Between the five of us it was always a sense of we're all moving toward the same goal. We're all fighting for the same reason. As much as that sense of being an underdog might have been there, it falls back on the fact that there were five of us sort of all lined up moving toward the same goal and that's what I held onto. That's what kept me going."

Liang was one of two residents of Asian descent elected to the council this month, along with fellow Councillor At-Large Elect Noel DiBona, whose mother is from Thailand. Liang is happy she has the opportunity to provide families with same support her family received growing up.

"For me it ties back to my experiences growing up and the challenges we faced as an immigrant family – the language barriers, the culture shock, trying to make sure you're able to integrate yourself into the community and really create a life for yourself more so than just making ends meet," Liang said.

"As one of the first two, I see it as an opportunity where I can then provide the same help that people provided me growing up – those challenges my parents faced when it came to language barriers and those challenges my parents faced when they didn't know where to go to ask for help on how to fill out forms, look a legal paper work, look at medical documents.

"When they didn't know where to go, they had somebody to help them and they had somebody in the community to facilitate that, somebody they trusted, somebody they were able to build a very long relationship with.

"If I can be that person for even just one family, that what's important to me. That's what I want to work towards, to be able to be that for not just an Asian family, but really any family in Quincy. Regardless of your gender or your age or your ethnic background, if I can provide that source of help to anyone across our city, you're helping them live a better life.

Liang said she has no plans for the future right now and is focused on preparing for her new role on the council. She has attended both City Council meetings since being elected Nov. 3, for example.

"My goal right now is to learn as much as possible. I want to, in the first couple of months, take in everything I can and learn as much as possible, listen always and do a good job – do a phenomenal job and be the best city councillor possible for the residents of Quincy for the next two years," Liang said.

"That's my goal. That's my focus right now. That's all I'm thinking about – absorbing and learning as much as I can and being the best city councillor I can be."

Crown Colony Project, Two Others Approved

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Planning Board on Nov. 19 approved three projects, including a proposal to build nearly 500 new residential apartments in Crown Colony, 18 condominiums on Newbury Avenue in North Quincy, and an adult daycare facility on the Parkingway.

John J. Flatley, trustee for the Crown Colony Nominee Trust, had proposed the 492-unit project for the vacant 21-acre site at 600R Crown Colony Drive, which is accessible off of Marriott Drive. The 492 apartments will be located in six five- and six-story buildings; the project also includes a clubhouse, pool, tennis court, perimeter walking path and skating pond.

Eight hundred sixty-one parking spaces will be located in the new development, including 319 ground floor spaces within the six residential buildings and 542 surface spaces.

As part of the project, the developer has agreed to undertake numerous traffic mitigation measurers, which Rob Stevens of the Planning Department said would cost more than $300,000 total. Those include improvements to the intersections of Centre Street at Burgin Parkway, Centre Street at Crown Colony Drive and Crown Colony Drive at Congress Street. Improvements to all three of those intersections are contigent to state approval because of the proximity ramps leading to and from Interstate 93/Route 3.

If the state does not approve those measures, the developer will make an equivalent payment to the city for mitigation work elsewhere in the vicinity.

Additionally, the developer will hire a full-time, on-site transportation coordinator to oversee transportation issues such as car pooling and parking. Tenants moving into the apartments will receive a packet of information on transportation options, such as the Crown Colony shuttle service, which will be extended to the project site. New tenants will also be offered a complimentary one-month MBTA pass to encourage use of public transit.

The project was first presented to the Planning Board

How many pillows are too many for a sofa or bed? Joann

A standard sofa is seven to eight feet long. I would not recommend more than three or four pillows. Don't feel you need to use the two pillows that may have come with the sofa; move one of them to an easy chair. Vary the fabrics, textures, and sizes of pillows for a pleasing look. Coordinate the colors with furniture fabrics, window treatments, and rug.

In addition to the two pillows upon which you sleep, the same number applies for large beds. If you stand up your bed pillows in nice shams you could add two more. In catalogs, you'll see more pillows – that's only because they are trying to sell pillows!

One last tip that applies not only to pillows: although many prefer the symmetry of even numbers, decorating with odd numbers is more pleasing to the eye.

We're planning an addition to our home which will include a large entry hall. How can I make it both beautiful and functional? Marcie

Let's start with function: include a large closet (or two) in your architectural plans and allow enough space for a (built in) bench or other seating to change your shoes when the weather is inclement. Now comes the beautiful part: choose a pretty tile, then add a rug which can serve as both an anchor and focal point. If the space is large enough to accommodate a medium or large round table, add it to the middle of your foyer, placing an attractive vase of flowers and bowl to corral your keys. If not, add a small bureau up against one of the walls to store hats, scarves, gloves, etc. and add a lamp on top of the bureau. Finish with a mirror or artwork to reflect your tastes.

Clydesdales Making 40th Christmas Parade Appearance

By SCOTT JACKSON

An eight-horse hitch of Hallamore Clydesdales will take part in this year's Quincy Christmas Parade marking the 40th year in a row a team of the company's Clydesdales will march in the parade.

"I have a lot of memories of coming there," Hallamore Corporation President Dennis Barry recalled.

Hallamore first participated in the parade in 1973, when the company's wagon was towed in the parade. The Clydesdales made their first appearance the following year.

"It was known to be a great parade," Barry said. "We had been to it and we thought there was a great spirit there."

The Clydesdales – brown horses with white feet and handsome white feathers known as "stockings" – are stabled in Lakeville and owned by the Hallamore Corporation of Holbrook, which was founded in 1898. The horses tow a wagon built in 1899 by the Studebaker Corporation of Chicago, which has a carrying capacity of five tons. It is only one of three such wagons in the U.S. today.

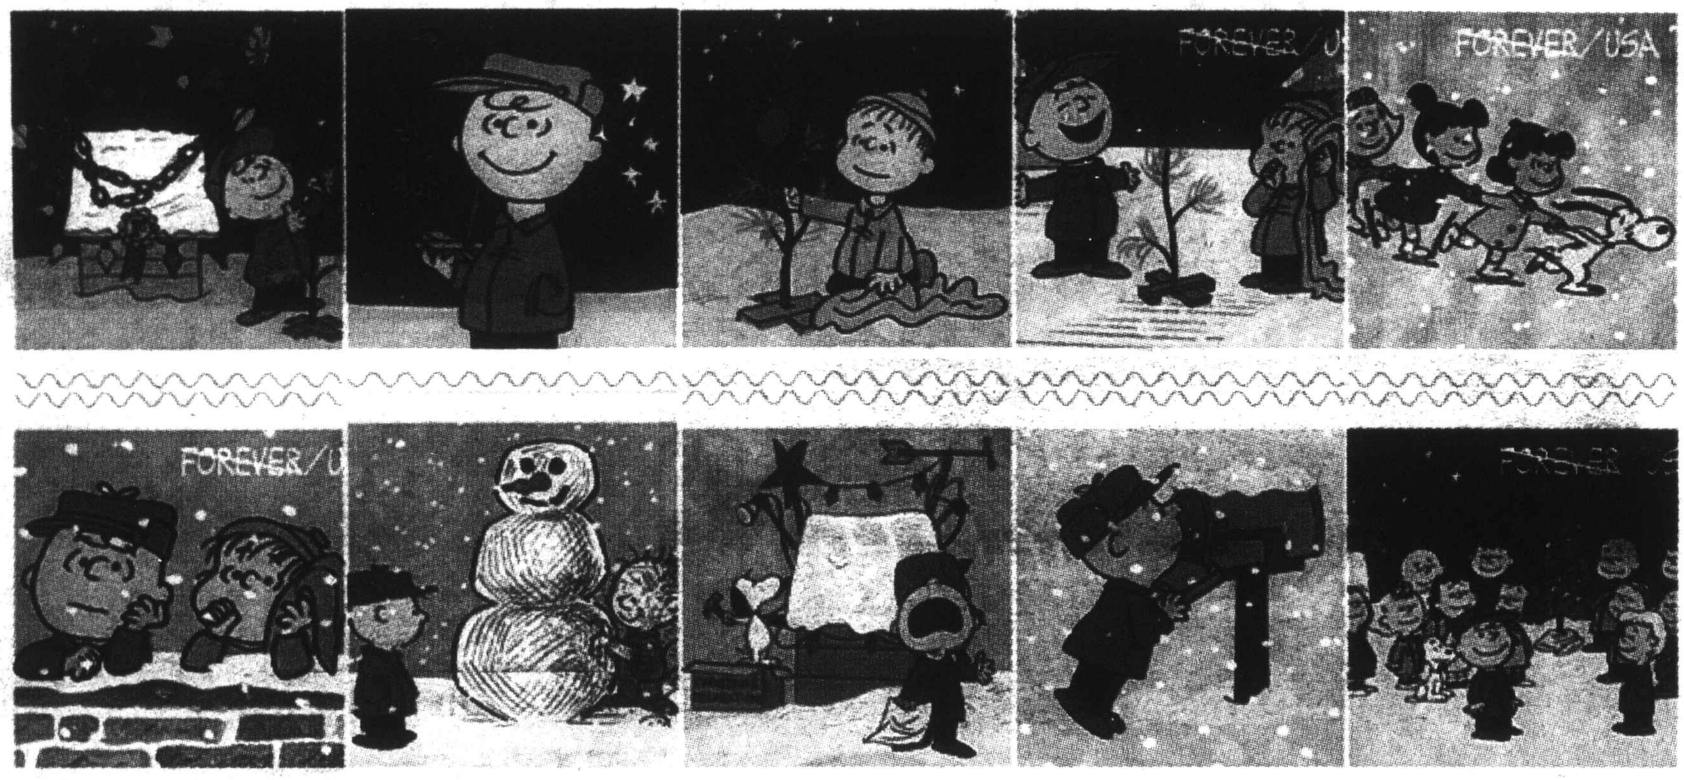
Free popcorn and hot chocolate will be available for those in attendance and everyone will have a chance to write a letter to Santa Claus and drop it in a mailbox to send it to the North Pole.

During the event, Mike Powers, the Greater Boston district manager for the U.S. Postal service, will be unveiling the Charlie Brown Christmas stamp series.



CHARLIE BROWN CHRISTMAS stamps will be unveiled by the U.S. Postal Service at Friday night's "Light Up the Holidays" celebration on the lawn of the Thomas Crane Public Library. Activities begin at 5 p.m. This year marks the 50th anniversary of "A Charlie Brown Christmas," the first animated special featuring characters from Charles Schulz' comic strip "Peanuts," which debuted on CBS Dec. 9, 1965. Image Courtesy U.S. Postal Service

On Dec. 9, 1965, millions of Americans tuned in for the premier of "A Charlie Brown Christmas," the first animated special featuring characters from Charles Schulz' comic strip "Peanuts," which debuted on CBS. "A Charlie Brown Christmas" has since become an annual tradition for countless families and is now broadcast each year on ABC.

The Charlie Brown Christmas stamps are available in books of 20 stamps, featuring 10 still frames from the movie (two of each design). They include: Charlie Brown holding the sapling that eventually becomes his Christmas tree, Charlie Brown and Pigpen with a snowman, Snoopy and children ice skating, the cast of the program gathering around the Christmas tree, Linus kneeling by the sparsely decorated Christmas tree, Charlie Brown checking his mailbox for a Christmas card, Charlie Brown and Linus leaning on a snowy brick wall, Charlie Brown and Linus standing by the tree, a frustrated Charlie Brown standing in front of Snoopy's doghouse, and Charlie Brown decorating the tree in front of the prize-winning lights display on Snoopy's doghouse.

The words "Forever USA" appear on each stamp – indicating the stamp will always be equal in value to the current first class one-ounce price – in the distinctive font used in the "Peanuts" comic strip.

Art director Antonio Alcala designed the stamps.

The post office will also be debuting its USPS augmented reality app, which allows users to take a picture at any mailbox and be surrounded by their favorite "Peanuts" characters. The free app can be downloaded by searching for USPS AR in the smartphone's app store.

Clydesdales 40th Parade Appearance

dales appear at about 20 parades a year, mostly in Massachusetts and Rhode Island. Barry said the Quincy Christmas Parade, Boston's St. Patrick's Day parade and the Eastern States Exposition (Big E) in Springfield are the marque events the horses go to annually.

Each Clydesdale weighs approximately 2,200 pounds and stands 18.5 hands (more than six feet) tall. Together they consume some 200 quarts of grain and 400 pounds of hay each day.

While known for their size, strength and free action, Clydesdales are fondly known as "gentle giants."

The average age of the Clydesdales in the hitch is 8. The Clydesdales were imported from England and Scotland; the Clydesdale breed originated in Scotland during the 18th century and was introduced to the U.S. around 1879. The breed is primarily used for transportation and communication.

83rd Thanksgiving Game Brings Emotion, Tradition

By BILL GRIFFIN

It is a game of emotion, but the emotion does not begin with the game.

The annual rite of Quincy vs. North Quincy is an event, actually a series of events, a 10-day run-up of tributes to players past and present which make not only the game, but the entire experience one that will always linger in the memory.

The challenge for Quincy coach Bill Reardon and North coach Mark Nutley is to control and manage the emotion so that it does not rise too quickly and is ready and primed at just the right moment when the rivals clash for the 83rd time at Veterans Stadium Thanksgiving morning at 10:00 a.m.

"The build-up to the game is great. It gives the players and coaches a chance to connect to the players and coaches from the past. Connecting with people is what Thanksgiving is all about," said Reardon.

There are requests for interviews from newspapers and cable TV. There is a luncheon at the Neighborhood Club which honors the seniors from each team. There is the Hall of Fame Banquet. There is an alumni flag game and Little Turkey Day for the freshman and JV teams. There is Homecoming Week and Spirit Week and the rallies in school the day before the game.

There is a pre-game dinner for both schools the night before the game. Players from the past talk of their games on Thanksgiving. They speak to young men of high emotion, young men who have been reminded for 10 days that they are connected to players from eight decades past by this game. The coaches need to be careful with all of this.

"We have a week off, so we try to stick to the routine of what we always do as much as possible," said Reardon. "You do have to be careful about peaking too soon. But we keep things as normal as possible for a week, and then let it build the last few days before the game."

"The emotions run high especially with the dinner the night before the game," said Nutley. "After listening to the players from the past, the kids are ready to play right at that moment. The game is 12 hours away and they need a night's sleep."

It is always a day for emotion and for seniors. It is more true this year than for most Thanksgivings. Quincy (3-7) has won three straight and 13 of the last 16 on Thanksgiving. That means that if the Red Raiders lose, it will be the second straight senior class from North (1-9) to walk away from Thanksgiving without beating Quincy.

There's more. Despite the disappointing season, North's seniors are good. Conor Pound, Seamus Broughton and Derek Huynh are three-years starters along the line. Jake Grady has started for two years at tight end and linebacker. Aidan Brown is a brilliant senior tailback. Joey Fallon is a senior quarterback who can throw darts.

"I think it definitely will be a huge factor for them. Their seniors have a lot riding on the game, and I'm sure they'll be sky-high for us," said Reardon.

"I don't have to worry much about the seniors. They know it's the last time most of them will ever put on a helmet," said Nutley. "We want to make sure the underclassmen understand how much it means to the seniors, and they back them up with a big game."

The strategy for both teams is simple. Find the tailback. North's offense runs through Brown who gained 1123 yards, caught 10 passes, and scored eight touchdowns in 10 games, a remarkable achievement for a player who played running back for the first time in his senior year. Quincy runs its offense through Jahvae Handsom-Fields who has over 3,000 career rushing yards. He gained 1167 this year while scoring eight touchdowns and three two-point conversions.

They both have sprinter's speed. They both have that innate will to never hit the ground. They each play defense, run back punts, and run back kickoffs. Brown breaks tackles, and is a brilliant cutback runner as he showed in his 51-yard beauty against Oliver Ames.

Handsom-Fields is strong and explosive. He runs over, around and through tacklers. If Quincy's offensive line can get him into the Quincy's 1970 team, coached by Hank Conroy, had a spotless 9-0 record.

The Presidents defeated North Quincy that year, 16-6, and won the Greater Boston League title.

North Quincy Perfect Seasons In 1966, 1992

North Quincy has twice entered the Thanksgiving Day game with a perfect season on the line: 1966 and 1992.

Ken McPhee had a role in both. On the 1966 squad, he was a starting guard. He was the head coach of the 1992 team.

The 1966 team, coached by Carl Leone, had a 9-0 record, won the Greater Boston League title, shared the Class A crown with Arlington and shut out Quincy, 8-0.

The 1992 team had an 11-0 record, won the Old Colony League title, beat Arlington in the Div. 1B Super Bowl and shut out Quincy, 20-0.

VOICE FOR HEALTH
by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

ON THE MOVE

There was once a time when people suffering from back pain were told that they would benefit from bed rest. Now we know that this prescription does more harm than good. Unlike a broken bone that must be rested until it heals, an aching back is not helped by atrophying muscles and weakening soft tissues due to lack of use. As the chiropractor addresses the underlying cause of most back pain by restoring proper function to misaligned vertebrae, patients are encouraged to get moving to the degree that they are able. Not only do active muscles repair themselves more readily, but spinal discs (which do not contain blood vessels) rely on the body's movement to direct healing nutrients their way.

We have created an atmosphere for healing, with a professional and caring staff that puts your health first. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we are qualified – with specialized equipment coupled with training, education, and experience – to determine your condition and what to do about it. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. If your problem is a chiropractic condition, we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. While exercise can help back pain sufferers, it is important that they avoid positions and activities that may increase or cause further back pain.

secondary, he is gone. In one three-game stretch this season against three playoff teams (Duxbury, Marshfield and Natick), Handsom-Fields rushed for 503 yards. He runs his best in the big games.

"Jahvae is one of the best backs on the South Shore. He has killed us the last two Thanksgivings," said Nutley. "We have to gang-tackle, get 11 helmets on the play and wrap him up."

"Aidan is a great tailback," said Reardon. "He can score from anywhere on the field. We have to be aware of where he is on offense, defense and special teams."

Both teams have quality senior quarterbacks. If Fallon has time to set his feet, he throws a beautiful ball. He is a strong, accurate and can get the ball down the field. He threw for 785 and five TDs. He ran for three touchdowns. Against Oliver Ames, he covered an entire 55-yard scoring drive with four completions. He was 13-16 for 187 yards against Medway. Tom Whooley, Chris Donaghey, and Tom Koch are quality receivers.

"We have to put pressure on Fallon. If he has time to get comfortable, he is very good," said Reardon.

Quincy's Cody Desmond has accounted for nearly 900 yards in total offense, 433 on the ground and 443 through the air. He ran for four touchdowns and threw for three. He is an athlete and he can run. He is dangerous when he scrambles free from the pocket, and he loves to run the quarterback sneak behind Mike Munroe and Declan Mayo.

Do not underestimate his arm. He hit Garrett Cronin on a 16-yard pass to win the Wellesley game. He ignited the win over Natick by dropping in a strike to Mike McNelly for a 33-yard gain on a third-and-35 from the Redhawks' 37. Cronin is a versatile threat at fullback who can get the tough yards up the middle and also swing out of the backfield and catch the ball. McNelly, Pat Bambrick, and Dyreke Johnson are good receivers.

"The one thing we have to careful of is to contain Cody when he drops back. If he breaks free, he has good speed. He is excellent on that quarterback sneak as well," said Nutley.

Handsom-Fields will be running behind an offensive line which has been the story of the season for Quincy. Munroe was the only returning starter. They have worked and developed into an excellent unit. Tackles Bernie VanTassell and Jhonta Sousa, guards Munroe and Isaiah Uzamere, Mayo at center, and McNelly at tight end have consistently opened holes over the second half of the year against big-time lines like Natick, Marshfield and Duxbury.

"We had some injuries early which set them back, but I'm proud of the way they've worked and developed," said Reardon.

The strategy on defense is as simple as its is on offense. Find the tackle. Munroe has been a destructive force at tackle in the center of the Quincy defense. He has 40 tackles, nine for losses, 11 sacks, four forced fumbles, two fumble recoveries and four pass deflections. Huynh, who missed North's last two games before Thanksgiving due to injury, is a rock in the middle of the Red Raiders' line.

"We have to block Derek or we're going to have trouble doing anything on the ground," said Reardon.

"Mike Munroe plays like A Man. We saw him against Wellesley and they just couldn't handle him," said Nutley.

John Griffin played well up front against OA for North. Koch and Grady are strong linebackers behind Huynh. McNelly, Uzamere and a rotation of juniors complement Munroe for Quincy. Cronin is a terrific linebacker. Jackson Vo returned at linebacker for the Natick and Wellesley games and played well.

Handosm-Fields, Johnson, and sophomore Shorne Hawthorne (who has made key plays late in the season) anchor the secondary for Quincy. Brown, Whooley and Donaghey are solid pass defenders for North.

"Turnovers, penalties, missed tackles. That's what it comes down to many times. Those are the things we'll work on," said Reardon.

Quincy has beaten Braintree, Wellesley and Natick. The Presidents have won two straight. North has beaten Pembroke. Quincy won, 33-6 last year. When the emotion kicks in Thursday morning, what does all this mean? Not a thing.

Thanksgiving Win Means Everything To Seniors

By BILL GRIFFIN

It has been a grand rivalry of streaks.

Beginning in 1999, Quincy won 10 straight games over North on Thanksgiving. Then North won three straight. Quincy has won the last three.

What does all this mean to the 83rd renewal Thursday at Veterans Stadium at 10 a.m. It means that since 2001, for 10 of the last 14 years, the senior class at North or Quincy has walked off the field knowing that they either never won or never lost on Thanksgiving.

These are high stakes. This is not a rivalry between cities. This is a rivalry within a city, one that crisscrosses family, friends, and neighborhoods. It is a rivalry played out between friends, between kids who have played with or against each other on the Manets, the Apaches, the Panthers or the Elks. It is a rivalry that will be talked about as long as there is a football and people who have played in the game.

Nobody wants to lose three games on Thanksgiving. Everybody wants to win three games on Thanksgiving. It is a nightmare for one, a dream for another. That is what North (1-9) and Quincy (3-7) will play out this year. Quincy's seniors want to finish a four-year sweep. North's seniors want to win just one.

"I don't care if I gain no yards, if I score no touchdowns, if I don't touch the ball as long as we win," said North senior tailback Aidan Brown who has gained over 1,100 yards this season.

"It would be like winning our own private Super Bowl. All the other games are glorified scrimmages compared to Quincy. If we beat Quincy, everything else is forgotten," said North's senior linebacker Jake Grady.

"Beating North three times on Thanksgiving is more than I could imagine," said Quincy senior tackle Mike Munroe. "This game, this day is something we will always remember."

"It means no matter where I go in Quincy or who I meet as I get older, I can talk about Thanksgiving," said Quincy's senior guard Isaiah Uzamere.

The seniors bring different experiences and different memories to the game. For some it was a family tradition that blossomed and grew through the years. For others it was brand new, shiny jewel they discovered when they moved to Quincy. Munroe's fondest memory is sophomore year when he played with his brother Robbie in a Quincy victory. For teammate Jahvae Handsom-Fields, it was like walking into Oz, like seeing something he never imagined.

"Where I grew up they had football, but not games on Thanksgiving," said Handsom-Fields. "The first time I saw a Thanksgiving game was my freshman year. I couldn't believe how big the crowd was and how much the game meant to everyone. My sophomore year, I saw the seniors crying because it was their last practice, their last game. I went out and tried to win, not for myself, but for them."

"My father and brother played for North, so it was always a big part of Thanksgiving," said North's senior lineman Conor Pound. "I remember the walk back to

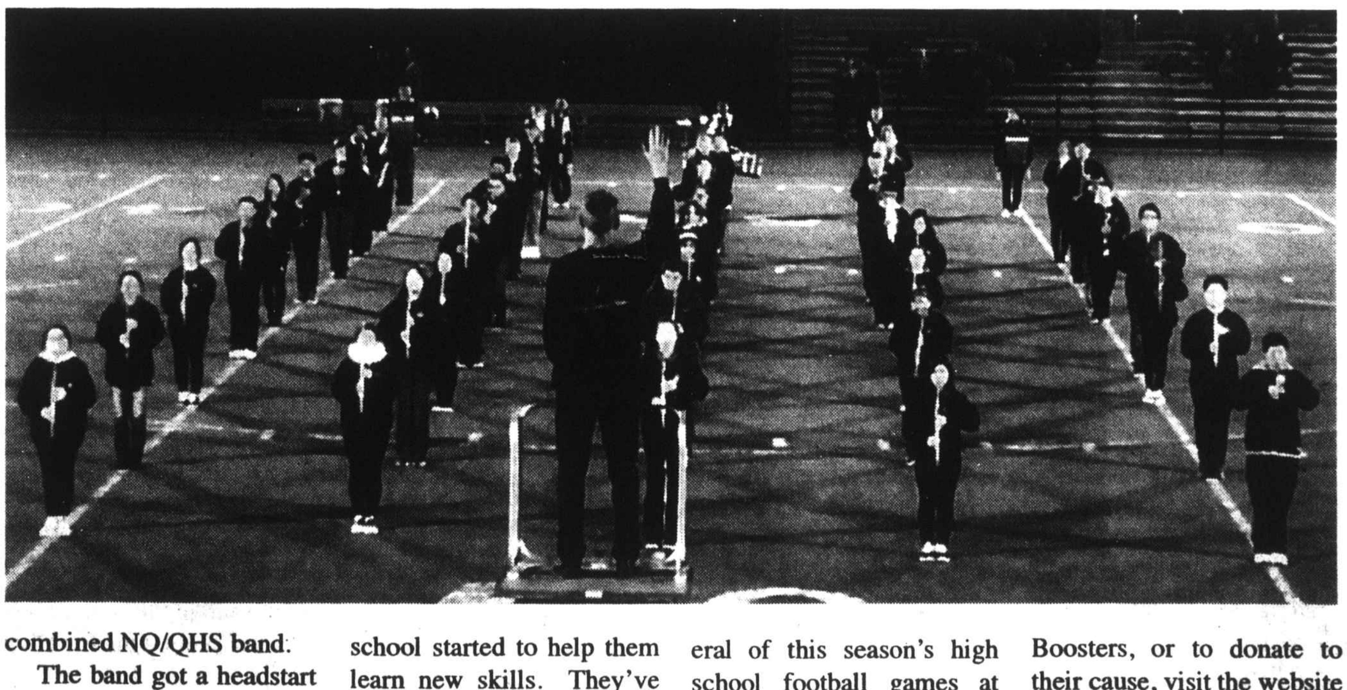
High School Band Half-Time Show At Thanksgiving Game

This year Quincy's traditional Thanksgiving match-up between the North Quincy and Quincy High varsity football teams at Veterans Memorial Stadium will have something that Quincy hasn't seen for at least 25 years.

The combined North Quincy / Quincy High band will be treating the fans to a prepared half-time show. Some fans may remember football games in the 1970s, when both high schools each had their own impressive and award-winning marching band. The student members of this year's band, and the school band directors, are enthusiastic about bringing back the old tradition.

The Quincy Band Boosters, a parent support group for the Quincy Public Schools instrumental music program, has been a big part of this rebirth, starting with their advocacy for essential band program staffing.

Now under the direction of Richard Kenneally, Michael DeMarco, and marching specialist Matthew Cavanaugh, the band has been able to focus on the skills that are required to perform a marching band half-time show.



The Quincy Band Boosters have also donated several specialized marching percussion instruments to the combined NQ/QHS band.

The band got a headstart this year with a marching camp the week before school started to help them learn new skills. They've performed this year's show, entitled "Amarillo", at several of this season's high school football games at Veterans Stadium. North along Hancock Street when North won. I remember players holding the trophy. I want to hold that trophy just once."

"We moved to Quincy in 2008. The first time I saw a game was when I was in the eighth grade," said Uzamere. "I was amazed at the crowd, at the whole atmosphere. I couldn't wait to be a part of it."

"I remember the last time North won," said Grady. "Everyone flooded the field. It was a great feeling. I didn't do the walk along Hancock Street. I got a ride home. If we win this year, I'm doing the walk."

For some, it meant a divided family on Thanksgiving.

"My cousins played for Quincy. We went and rooted against them," said Grady. "Then, we'd get together for dinner. There were some heated discussions."

Pound and Uzamere will always carry the memory of their sophomore year, their first steps on the field on Thanksgiving.

"When we first got on the field, there weren't that many people watching," said Pound. "We went back in the locker room. When we came through the tunnel, the crowd just exploded. It was crazy. I got to take the field with great players like Antoine Allen and Vinny Tran. I felt proud."

"I played mostly special teams. I got in for one snap on the defensive line," said Uzamere. "All week, all the coaches talked about was Vinny Tran. Vinny Tran, Vinny Tran,, Vinny Tran. That's all we heard all week. I get one chance to line up against him. I jumped offside. That's my Vinny Tran story."

It is game of friend against friend.

"It's a weird feeling in a way playing against friends you've known for a long time," said Pound. "We're friends before and after the game. Once the game starts, that all has to be cleared away."

"I remember lining up against Corey Hernandez who was a friend," said Uzamere. "We joked around a little before the play, but once the ball was snapped, I was just looking for red jerseys to tackle."

The players realize that the game is bigger than themselves. They remember when they were sophomores and juniors. They remember how much it meant to the seniors. They remember watching seniors cry or celebrate on Thanksgiving. They also remember the words of past players who spoke to them in the days before the game.

"This game isn't just for us. It's for the people who have graduated and the players who are following us," said Munroe. "We'll remember this day for the rest of our lives. And it's not just about us."

"I know that to people in Quincy, it doesn't matter if you're 0-10 or 10-0. What matters is: Did you beat North," said Handsom-Fields.

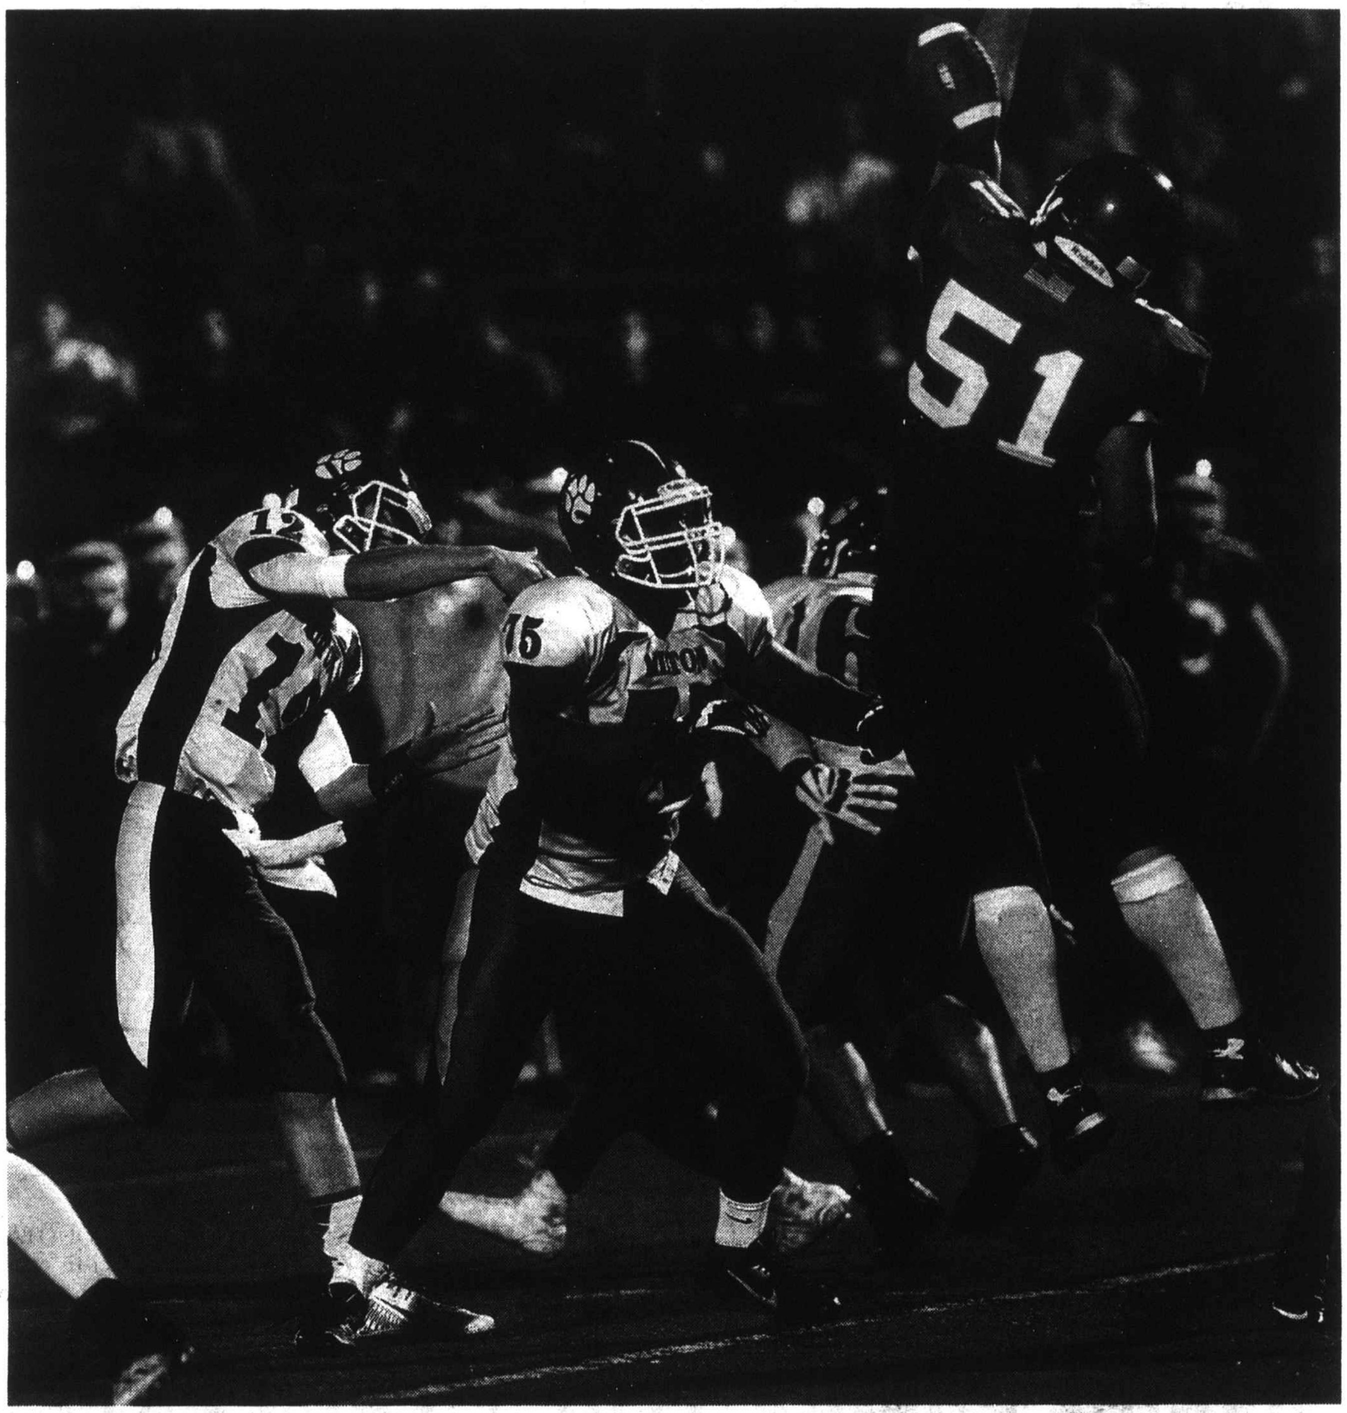
"I didn't realize how much it meant to people until I took the field when I was a sophomore. I realize it now," said Brown.

"It's always has been important in my family. I think I've been coming to the game since the fourth grade. I've seen what it means to my father and brother," said Pound.

There is a sense of finality to it all. This is the last football game for most of the seniors. There are no more chances on Thanksgiving. This is their day. Quincy sweeps or North wins one. It's that simple.

"I remember the first Thanksgiving I saw. All I could think about was big crowd, big stakes, big atmosphere," said Brown. "Now I want to win just one. If we won, the feeling would be more than I could imagine."

"It means everything. We leave high school with a sweep or a loss. It's that simple," said Uzamere.



FOOTBALL SENIORS including Quincy's Mike Munroe (No 51) shown here deflecting a Milton pass and North Quincy's Aidan Brown (No. 24) running for a score against Plymouth South earlier this season would like nothing more than to close out their high school careers with a win on Thanksgiving. Quincy Sun File Photos/Robert Bosworth

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Anticipating the holidays with family and friends fuels your must-do Gemini energies. But try to pace yourself so you'll be up for whatever comes along later.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) More background information might come through regarding a decision you expect to make. Be sure to check the source carefully before you move.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The strong, nurturing nature of the Lion comes through this week as you reach out to family and friends in need of your warm and loving support.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A relationship that has almost totally unraveled could be close to being restored with more effort on your part to be more patient and less judgmental.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You might not know all the facts behind an unwelcome development, so keep that Scorpion temper in check and resist lashing out at anyone.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) This is a good time to reinforce relationships -- family, friends, colleagues -- that might have been overlooked in recent years.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Family situations continue to thrive. Business associations also improve. Some holiday plans might have to be shifted a bit. Be flexible.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Avoid any influence of negative energy in this week's aspect by not allowing small problems to grow into large ones. Work them out immediately.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A friend might need advice on how to deal with a challenge to his or her moral values. And who better than you to give the honest answer? Good luck.

OBITUARIES

John J. Pitts

A funeral Mass for John J. Pitts of Hull, formerly of Mashpee, Brockton and Quincy was celebrated Monday in St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

Mr. Pitts died Nov. 18.

Beloved husband of the late Grace L (Madden) Pitts for 64 years. Loving father of Regina Amaral and her husband, the late Kenneth Amaral of Hull; Michelle Hallamore and her husband Scott of CT; John Pitts and his wife Kate of Mashpee; and Denise Mortenson and her husband John of NJ. Grandfather of Beth Urban, Scott Hallamore Jr., Leah Hallamore, Matthew Pitts, Philip Pitts, Philip Mortenson, Erin Mortenson, Robert Mortenson, Daniel Mortenson, and great-grandfather of Kira Urban, Timothy Urban, Anna Grace Urban, Tallulah Pitts, Cole Pitts, Rowan Pitts and Shealey Pitts . He is survived by his brother William and his sisters Joan, Evie, and Mary. He was predeceased by his parents Jeremiah and Mary of Quincy and his brother Albert and sisters Charlotte and Noreen.

Mr. Pitts grew up in the Adams Shore section of Quincy and started working at Quincy Shipyard before joining the U.S. Army in 1945 during WWII. He served with the 11th Airborne Division, deployed as an occupying force in southern Japan in 1945/46. After returning to the United States, he married Grace Madden of Squantum in 1948. He earned an engineering degree from Northeastern University and spent most of his career working in the electronics and semi-conductor manufacturing industries, retiring from Digital Equipment Corporation in 1990.

JOHN J. PITTS

Growing up playing pond hockey, he was an avid supporter of the Brockton Youth Hockey Association in the late 60s and early 70s, volunteering as a coach and referee. He was also the first coach for the Stonehill College Hockey Club in the early 70s. An inventor and environmentalist, he worked tirelessly on his invention for a residential waste treatment system during his retirement years.

Above all, Mr. Pitts was the quintessential family man and his greatest pleasure in life was spending time with Grace and his children and grandchildren – especially on summer vacations to Cape Cod or Sebago Lake, Maine. A man of great humility, he would often refer to himself as "just an old clam digger from Adams Shore," but he touched many lives with his positive outlook, humor and willingness to help anyone at any time.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Interment at Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

Memorial donations may be made to the Orphans of Father John Baptist Bashobora of Uganda. Checks should be made payable to the Marian Community, 154 Summer Street, Medway, MA 02053, with Father Bash Foundation in the memo line.

Crown Colony Project, Two Others Approved

on Sept. 9.

Brenco Construction had proposed building the 18-unit, four-story condominium building at 143 and 147 Newbury Ave. in North Quincy.

Two houses currently located on site will be torn down to make way for the new building; the first floor of the building would include parking and each of the three floors above would have a single one-bedroom unit and five two-bedroom units.

A total of 33 parking spaces will be provided on site – 31 in the first floor structure, including 26 spaces that will use parking lifts, and two outside the building.

The developer will sell 11,000 square feet on the back of the properties to the city. That land will be used as part of the project to renovate Teel Field and create a new parking lot to serve the field and nearby North Quincy High School. The city will pay $130,000 for the land, which will come out of the $12 million bond approved for the project.

As a condition of the project's approval, no construction or site work will be allowed until new FEMA flood maps are accepted by the City Council. A portion of the project site was added to the flood maps in 2014 but removed from the revised flood maps that came out earlier this year. The final revised maps have yet to be sent to the city for approval, however.

A public hearing on the proposal was held July 15.

Andrian Shapiro had proposed opening the new adult daycare for senior citizens at 100-134 Parkingway, which was formerly home to A.J. Wright store.

The facility will provide transportation to and from residences for all clients; walk-ins are not allowed. Four spaces in front of the building's main entrance will be designated as a loading zone to help accommodate clients.

Three projects on the agenda for the Nov. 19 meeting were continued without a hearing to future meetings.

A plan to build a four-unit multi-family home on what is now a vacant lot at 52 Grafton St. was continued to Dec. 3.

A proposal to replace the multi-family home at 151 Granite St. with 32-unit condo building was continued to Jan. 13. The Planning Board originally heard those plans, which would require the removal of rock on site by explosives or other means, on Aug. 12.

Also continued to Jan. 13 was a proposal to build a four-story, 15-unit residential building at 150 Hancock St. The site is the location of the one-story Basta Pasta building.

Residents Encouraged To Shop Local Saturday

The members of the Joint Committee on Community Development and Small Businesses put forward a resolution Monday to encourage residents to "Shop Local" the Saturday after Thanksgiving and support small businesses throughout the Commonwealth.

The vice-chairman of the committee, Tackey Chan (D-Quincy), helped move forward the resolution.

"Our small businesses are major employers and vital components of our economic engine in the state. By supporting them, we are employing more of our neighbors and improving our communities," said Chan.

Massachusetts is home to 615,755 small businesses, which employ 1.4 million workers, roughly half of the state's private workforce. The resolution recognizes the role these businesses play in the Massachusetts economy, and encourages consumers to shop at local small businesses on the Saturday after Thanksgiving.

"When we support local small businesses, that money and economic growth stays in the community and makes a notable difference in comparison to spending at the biggest national chains," Chan said.

The Joint Committee on Community Development and Small Business focuses on ways to help Small Businesses thrive in the Commonwealth.

McIntyre Government Center Re-Opens Saturday

More than four years after it closed to the public, the newly restored James R. McIntyre Government Center will re-open with a formal ribbon cutting ceremony at 11 a.m. Saturday.

The ceremony will include a speaking program and public tours of the 171-year-old building, located at 1305 Hancock St. in Quincy Center. Mayor Thomas Koch, Council President Joseph Finn, City Clerk Joseph Shea and lead architect James Edwards, the president of the Quincy Historical Society, are among the speakers for the event.

The McIntyre Government Center, also known as Old City Hall, closed in 2011 because of concerns over its condition. A $12 million project to restore the building began more than two years ago in the fall of 2013. A portion of the project's cost, approximately $500,000 a year, is being borne by the city's Community Preservation Account.

The McIntyre Government Center opened in 1844 and was constructed with Quincy granite. Solomon Willard, the architect of the Bunker Hill Monument, designed the building.

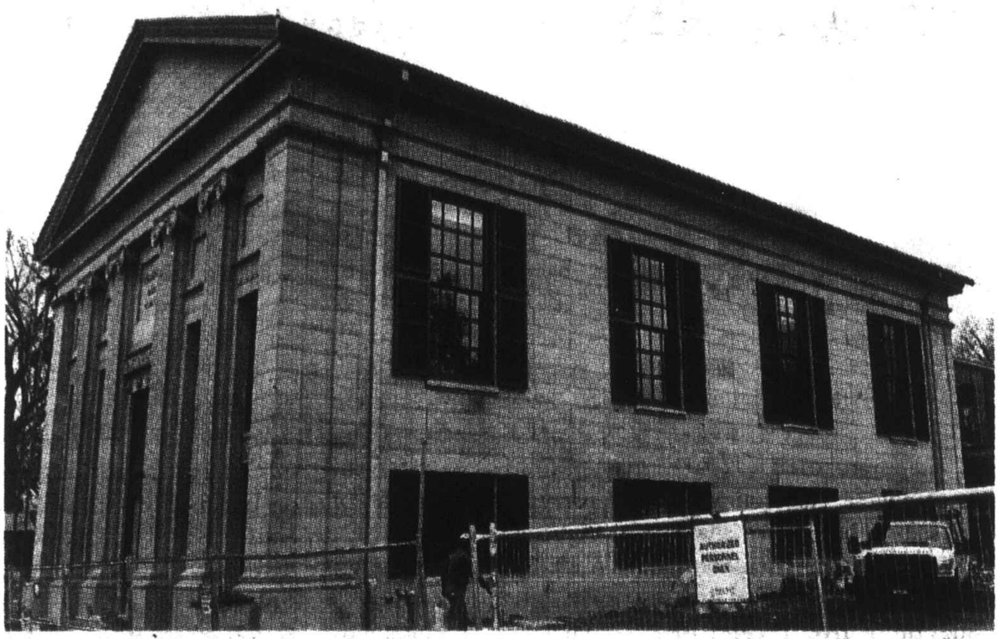
The restoration project included a long list of upgrades, such as bringing the building's electrical, plumbing, and HVAC systems up to code. The foundation has been strengthened and an elevator installed to provide handicap accessibility. Fire suppression and security systems, which the building lacked previously, have been installed.

The signature space of the restored government center is the Great Hall, a 181-seat meeting space that encompasses most of the second floor with additional seating available in a third floor balcony. The Great Hall will serve as the new chamber for the City Council and will be reserved for other large civic events, such as mayoral inaugurations.

The council will hold its first meeting in the Great Hall on Monday, Dec. 7.

Inauguration ceremonies for Koch and other city officials elected in last month's municipal election will be held Monday, Jan. 4, at 10 a.m. A social event will be held later that same day at Granite Links, beginning at 7 p.m.

The restoration work in the McIntyre Government Center was done in concert with a similar project at the Coddington Building, now home to the Planning and IT Departments, Quincy Public Schools administrative offices and the School Committee. That building opened in August 2014.



JAMES R. McINTYRE Government Center - Old City Hall - will be rededicated Saturday, Dec. 5 at 11 a.m. The historic building has undergone a $12 million restoration. Saturday's ceremony will include speakers and tours of the building. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth

City Intervenes In Fore River Compressor Station Proceedings

The City of Quincy has formally filed as an intervening party in the federal government's permitting process for a natural gas compressor station on the banks of the Fore River in Weymouth across from Quincy.

The proposed 7,700 horse-power gas compressor station has drawn sharp criticism from neighbors and elected officials on both sides of the river because of its potential environmental impact and a series of other factors. The move to intervene protects the City's legal position as the proposal moves through the regulatory process with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, officials said.

"Councillors Margaret Laforest, Councillor Brad Croall and I believe firmly that we have a responsibility to ensure that our resources are protected, our environment is protected and most importantly, that our neighborhoods are protected as this proposal moves through the permitting process," Mayor Thomas Koch said in a statement released Tuesday. "Filing as an intervening party ensures that all of our rights are protected."

Added Councillor Croall:

"There are hundreds of homes in Quincy Point which abut the proposed facility, and we have been active since the beginning in making sure our concerns have been communicated as a community. I appreciate the work of all those people who have really worked together on this issue, and this filing makes sure that those concerns are heard loud and clear as this process moves forward with the federal authorities responsible for permitting these facilities."

Added Councillor Laforest:

"Our coastal environment and our coastal economy are incredibly important priorities, and the impact this kind of facility can have on our fish habitat and our entire coastal infrastructure deserves the highest possible level of scrutiny. These factors absolutely must be considered as the process moves forward, and the City's intervention will ensure that there are plenty of eyes on it."

Spectra Energy wants to build the compressor station at the mouth of the Fore River near Route 3A – an area neighboring a densely populated neighborhood in Weymouth and just across the river from similar neighborhoods in Quincy Point, Germantown and Houghs Neck.

Steward: Medical Center's ER To Remain Open Through 2016

By SCOTT JACKSON

Steward Health Care will keep open the satellite emergency facility at the former Quincy Medical Center on Whitwell Street for at least another year.

Brooke Thurston, a vice president for the for-profit health care company, said Steward is committed to meeting Quincy's health care needs and would keep the facility open for at least another year.

"Steward will keep the emergency room open at the former Quincy Medical Center through 2016. We are committed to meeting the healthcare needs of the Quincy community," Thurston said in an email.

Steward closed Quincy Medical Center at the end of last year but agreed to keep the emergency department open as a satellite facility operating under the license of Carney Hospital in Dorchester.

Under terms reached with then-state Attorney General Martha Coakley in January of this year, Steward agreed to maintain emergency services in the city of Quincy for up to two years

HEAVEN ON EARTH

Because the best blue turquoise, one of the birthstones for December, is so evocative of a radiant blue sky, the gemstone is often referred to as Heaven on Earth. Of course, this characteristic was perhaps most fully embraced by Native Americans, who incorporated the beautiful turquoise mined in the American Southwest into their jewelry and beadwork. Among the turquoise most renowned for its solid light-blue color (with no matrix) comes from the Sleeping Beauty mine located near Globe, Arizona. In addition, the Kingman mine in Northwest Arizona is famous for its deep blue hue and rich black matrix. Turquoise from this mine, one of the largest in North America, has become a color standard in the industry.

Turquoise usually needs some kind of treatment to enhance its color and make it suitable for jewelry. Compared to diamonds, turquoise is porous because it has some amount of water content. STERLING MIDDLE SCHOOL recently held its annual Veterans Day ceremony, a tradition at the school for more than two decades. Among those who spoke at the ceremony were (from left): Principal Dr. John Franceschini; Mayor Thomas Koch; Christine Prendiville, the teacher who has organized the last seven observances; Massachusetts National Guard Lt. Col. Jason Oberton, the keynote speaker at the assembly; Michael Draicchio, the school system's director of transportation, safety and security and a previous organizer of the annual event; and Louis Venturelli, a teacher and veteran.

Christine Prendiville Honored At Sterling Veterans Day Observance

Educator, Event Coordinator Retiring At End Of School Year

By SCOTT JACKSON

Christine Prendiville, a longtime Sterling Middle School educator, was honored for organizing the school's annual Veterans Day assembly the last seven years at this year's observance.

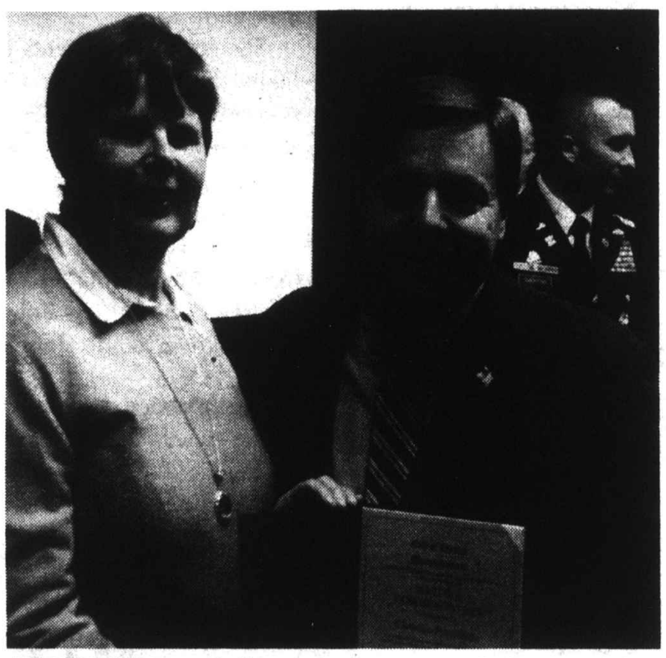
A teacher at Sterling since 1988, Prendiville has organized the Veterans Day assembly since 2008 when she assumed the role previously fulfilled by Michael Draicchio, who left the school to become the school system's director of transportation, safety and security. Prendiville is retiring at the end of the school year.

Mayor Thomas Koch presented Prendiville with a citation at the year's assembly, held Nov. 9 in the school's auditorium, which was full of students, teachers, veterans from the community and elected and school department officials.

"For many years you've devoted countless hours and effort to ensure that the Sterling Middle School community rightfully honors our veterans," Koch said. "Your longstanding commitment to our veterans is truly admirable and your hard work sets an example for others to follow.

"The Veterans Day celebration is a reminder that it is our duty to honor and respect those who have sacrificed so much for us and our nation. I commend you for your efforts. You're an asset to the Quincy Public Schools and our community and I congratulate you on your much-deserved retirement. All the best."

Prendiville thanked her colleagues who have assisted in organizing the annual event and the school's students, who prepare readings and presentations, draw pictures, decorate the auditorium and make cards given out to veterans in attendance. She credited her father and other members of her family who served for making her aware of the sacrifices veterans have made.



CHRISTINE Prendiville received a commendation from Mayor Thomas Koch at Sterling Middle School's recent Veterans Day ceremony. Prendiville, who began teaching at Sterling in 1988, has organized the last seven annual ceremonies and is retiring at the end of the school year. Her father served in the Marine Corps during World War II and other families served during the Vietnam War. Quincy Sun Photos/Scott Jackson

"My father was a Marine in World War II as were my uncles and my cousins, who served in Vietnam. I think I learned to salute before I learned how to read a globe," Prendiville said.

"These great men made me aware of the sacrifices made by the men and women in our armed forces and made me realize that movie and TV stars as well as pro sports players may be great at their jobs but the real heroes are those who made it possible for all of them and us to do our jobs.

"Veterans tend to be very humble. They don't get parades – they are the parade. They march in all kinds of weather to make kids and other people smile as they walk by."

Prendiville also recalled the service of the late George DePaulo, a World War II veteran and longtime Sterling custodian for whom the auditorium is dedicated.

"A man that has had a big impact on my adult life, and I had the honor to know and work with, is George DePaulo. This man was the definition of humble. A scared young man on Omaha Beach on D-Day survived to march through France into Germany and liberated two concentration camps," Prendiville said.

"He didn't look for a parade on his return. He looked to continue to serve and became a custodian here for over 60 years – quiet, unassuming, always looking to make this school clean and warm for his teachers and his kids. He didn't just go the extra mile, he went hundreds. I'm sure God himself said 'well done, good and faithful servant' when he arrived. He is one of my role models as a human being."

The men and women in the armed forces, she continued, serve as role models for the students at Sterling as well as people around the world.

"For those here who have served or are serving our country, I can't begin to thank you for your service. Because of you we are free to come to school, teach, learn and go about our daily lives," Prendiville said.

"The courage you have shown fighting for this country and for defending people in countries we have a hard time identifying on a map, shows these selfless people [are] role models for a brighter future for not only these students here but also people all over the world. You leave your families, jobs and safety to make this world a better place."

Sterling Principal Dr. John Franceschini said the annual assemblies, a tradition more than two decades long, would continue.

"This is a tradition I hope never ends in this school and we'll carry it on in the new building for years and years to come," he said.

Massachusetts National Guard Lt. Col. Jason Oberton, a Boston native and Quincy resident, was the keynote speaker at the assembly.

"As you look into the American flag, I ask that you look not at it, but into it. Behind each stitch is a veteran that has served this nation since the beginning of the armed forces in 1636," Oberton said.

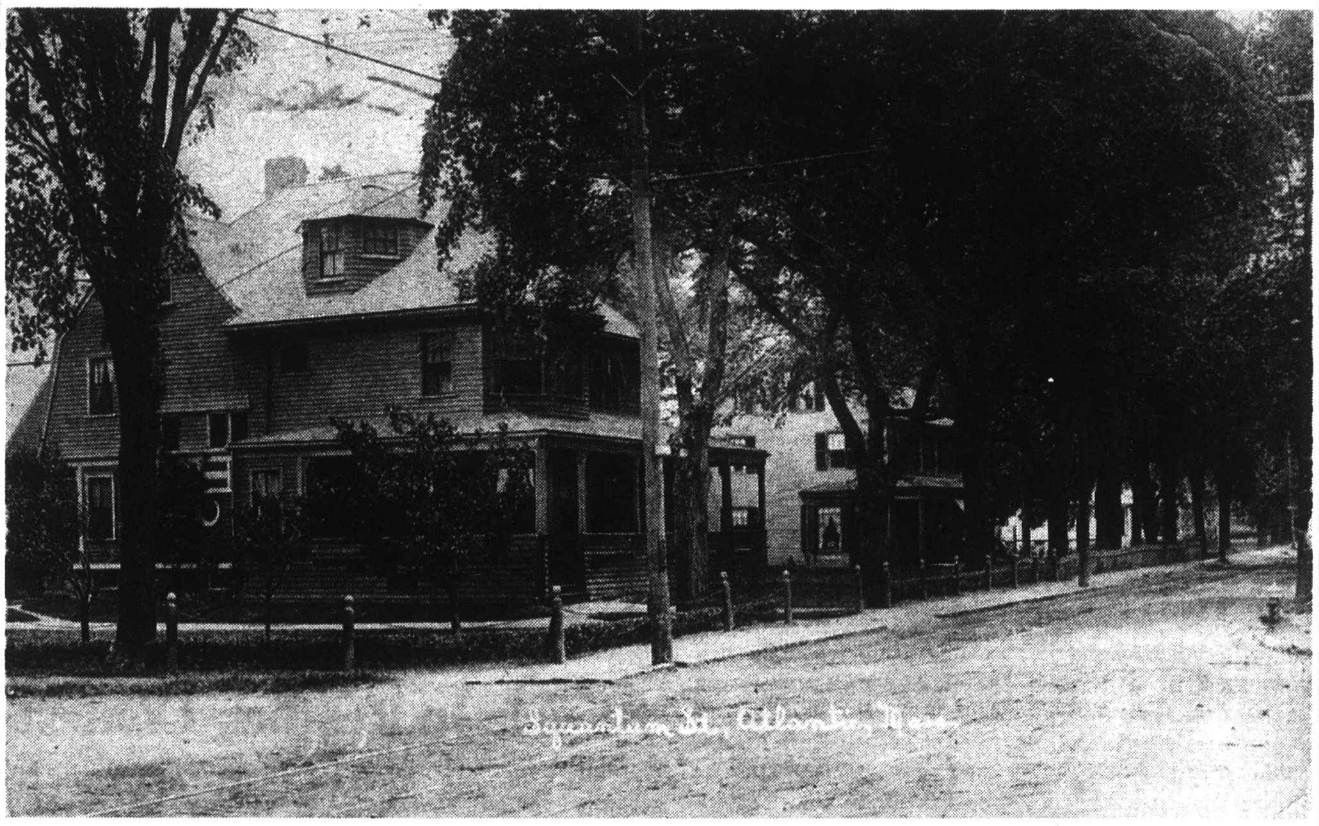
"Look into the flag and see the freedoms that we have today due to our veterans. When I look into the flag, I see my family, my friends. I see your school. I see my soccer team playing at Veterans Stadium and I see free citizens walking in the streets of Quincy."

"I think sometimes we have to look at the word hero and think about what it really means," Franceschini said after Oberton spoke.

"I know if I were to ask some of you, you might say Tom Brady. You might say [Cristiano] Ronaldo. You might say someone like that, that you see all the time. But let me tell you, [Oberton] is a hero."

Several students made readings at the hour-long assembly, focusing on topics such as friendship, freedom, learning from difficult experiences, integrity, loyalty, family, courage and doing the right thing. Students also gave a presentation on the Wounded Warrior Project and sold items after the assembly to raise funds for the charity.

Scenes From Yesterday



THIS IS A 1917 real photo postcard view looking south from the intersection of Atlantic and East Squantum Streets in Atlantic. The Atlantic Market and Liquor store is now on the corner just out of sight on the right and Kip Orlando's Men's Hairstyling shop is where the tree is on the corner on the left. The large Victorian style house on the left was built in the late 1890s for Henry W. Read, a well-to-do Boston merchant. He lived there with his family until he died and his widow continued to live there until 1950. Still extant the house has been altered and divided into apartments. Another house has been built beyond it just before the next house in this view. The trolley tracks in the foreground turned right at the next intersection with Billings Street and went down to the old Atlantic railroad station. Flagging Profanity On Football Broadcasts

How exciting a recent weekend was for us football watchers. Boston College was taking on Notre Dame at the one and only Fenway Park. The New England Patriots were taking on their arch rival Buffalo Bills in a Monday Night Football classic.

However, after watching both match- ups I was bothered enough to write this letter.

I really enjoy watching sporting events at all levels but something has gone drastically wrong. Television networks seem to enjoy letting their viewers watch athletes and coaches express themselves with vulgarity. Cameras stayed on BC Coach Steve Addazio as he continued to express his displeasure using profanity. Prefixing his swears with "Mother" only added insult to injury coming from a representative of an elite Christian university.

Buffalo Bills Coach Rex Ryan expressed his displeasure with players and referees using profanity which seemed to excite the network as cameras kept rolling so we could lip read his offensive comments. When our hero Tom Brady yelled at his linemen for not blocking properly, cameras rolled as a litany of four lettered words streamed from his mouth. The network even got pleasure to capture Tom blowing his nose onto the ground.

Something is wrong. I spent 42 years in public education as a teacher and administrator. I, along with every other teacher and administrator, spend every day partnering with parents and teaching children right from wrong.

Profanity is wrong and we as teachers and parents discipline our children when they do it. There is a mixed message out there when it is okay for leaders of teams and our athletic heroes to use such language. The few seconds on television undo everything we try to instill in our youth every day.

At some point someone needs to apologize to every youngster who sees these adults as heroes and role models. Athletes, coaches, team owners and networks need to come forward and take a leadership role to show our youth that it is improper to act in such a way. They need to partner with schools, parents and religious organizations in helping to mold our youth properly.

When a director of a football game broadcast has to make a decision as to which camera should keep rolling, they should keep in mind that there is a young fan out there watching and has been taught that this is inappropriate behavior. If you are a player or coach please try and express your anger in other ways. Who knows, maybe your child or grandchild is watching.

QUINCY SCOUT SUPERVISES PLANTING OF 500 PINE SEEDLINGS

G. Fredrick Shepard, a Life Scout from Troop 42, sponsored by St. John's Church, Quincy, has taken a big step towards reaching the status of Eagle Scout.

"Fred," a 13-year old freshman at Boston College High School, organized, researched and supervised the planting of 500 eight-inch pine seedlings in the Houghton's Pond area as a service project for the Quincy community. Each boy wishing to become an Eagle Scout must perform a service project.

Fred, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick V. Shepard of 93 Centre Street, West Quincy, has been planning his project for over a year. In less than 15 years the seedlings will grow to maturity forming a natural barrier between traffic-heavy Route 128 and the Houghton's Pond baseball field and tennis courts.

Fred was ably assisted by Robert Harnais, 69 Common St., West Quincy.

CONGRATULATIONS, QUINN – State Rep. Bruce Ayers presents a State House citation and new bicycle to reading contest winner and Squantum Elementary School first grade student Quinn Walsh.

Quinn Walsh Wins Bicycle In Reading Contest

State Rep. Bruce Ayers recently visited Squantum Elementary School to deliver a new bike to 1st grade student Quinn Walsh as part of our annual summer reading contest at the school.

Quinn was one of many students who participated in the Race to Read Summer Reading Contest this past summer. Squantum students were asked to track the number of books they read over the summer months as part of the school's summer reading program. The books were then tallied at the start of the school year and Rep. Ayers generously donated a bike as the top prize and incentive for students to read over the summer.

"We are very thankful to Representative Ayers for his continuous support of our summer literacy program," said Principal Stephen Sylvia. "This continues to be a very popular program at the school and I am always impressed by the number of students participating over the summer months."

Meditation, Pot Luck Supper Saturday At United Methodist

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, will host an expanded 11th step meeting: an evening of meditation followed by a pot luck supper.

"The Recover Programs' 11th step encourages people to develop a deeper relationship with their Higher Power, and the half-hour meditation is designed to do just that," said Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, church pastor.

The meditation portion of the evening will be led by the church's Lay Leader, Yvonne Duncanson.

Following the meditation time, a pot luck supper will be held.

The event is held on the first Saturday of every month.

Although based on Recovery Program's 11th step, the evening is open to everyone, whether involved in Recovery Programs or not. The church sponsors at least one Recovery Program every day.

Quincy Community United Methodist Church is handicapped accessible by the front door nearest the flagpole.

Parking is available behind the church, in the Credit Union parking lot, also behind the church, and in the MBTA parking lot behind CVS. Do not park in the CVS lot.

Discover Quincy Holiday Pop Up Shop Opens Tonight

Store At 1400 Hancock St. Features Over 50 Local Artists, Photographers

Over 50 artists are participating in the Discover Quincy Holiday Pop Up Shop at 1400 Hancock St. this holiday season.

The store will be open Thursday, Friday and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Sundays from noon to 5 p.m. starting today (Thursday) through Dec. 20.

"Modeled after other local art co-ops, this gives an opportunity for local artists to sell their work in a retail setting with hours convenient for the shopping season," said Discover Qiuincy Executive Director Margaret Laforest.

Discover Quincy is partnering with the Quincy Art Association and other local artists and photographers whose work is all for sale.

"Many complimented Quincy for the Arts Mural completed this summer voluntarily by Brand Rockwell and Brian Life, who both have smaller pieces available," Laforest said.

"Lindsay Tia, a Quincy entrepreneurial success story whose line of handbags have partnered with the USO in hosting this past Summer's Bravery Bash, will have some of her most popular items for sale. Just a few weeks ago, Lindsay opened a bricks and mortar store in South Boston and is dedicated to her brand full time."

Laforest also said some of the vendors participate in craft fairs throughout New England and this gives them a stable location.

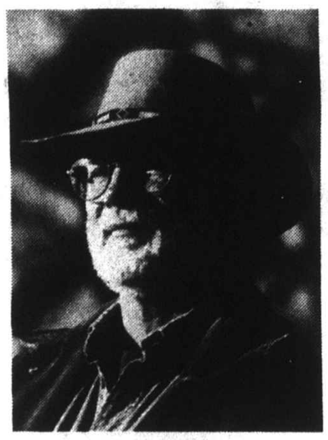
"We have many popular items including American Girl Doll Clothes, Coastal themed pallet signs, ceramics from the classic lit up Christmas Tree to mugs, platters and sculptures, jewelry, metal sculpture, glass work and more. Want to get a Quincy gift? We are partnering with local non-profit organizations to sell their items as well; Quincy and North Quincy High School store merchandise, Cat's Meow village collectibles from Houghs Neck and Wollaston, t-shirts featuring city neighborhoods and more.

"Each independent artist is their own business. With many having started their holiday shopping, the Quincy Chamber of Commerce wants to remind you to please Shop Local and support the independent businesses in our community," Laforest added.

The public is welcome to attend the Opening Reception tonight (Thursday) from 5 to 7 p.m. to meet some of the participating artists. Discover Quincy is also looking for volunteers to help in the store.

For more information, contact Margaret Laforest 617-639-1117 or mlaforest@thequincychamber.com

Bill Staines Performs Dec. 11



BILL STAINES

Legendary troubadour Bill Staines will offer an evening of his own songs, classics of the folk tradition, and story-telling in a benefit concert for Quincy Historical Society, Friday, Dec. 11 at 8 p.m. at the Adams Academy, 8 Adams St., in Quincy Center.

Staines' career encapsulates an entire era of music. A Massachusetts native, as a teenager, he participated in the great folk music revival of the 1960s and performed at the fabled Club 47 in Harvard Square.

Since the 1970s, he has perennially been one of the most in-demand artists on the folk circuit. He continues to travel thousands of miles and perform more than 200 concerts annually.

Staines' songs have been recorded by scores of other singers, including Peter, Paul and Mary, Nanci Griffith, Liam Clancy and Tommy Makem, and Jerry Jeff Walker. The songs "River," "Roseville Fair," and "All God's Critters," in particular, have become folk standards.

Tickets are $20 and benefit the Historical Society. They can be purchased at the Historical Society, in the Adams Academy, 8 Adams St. For more information, call 617 773-1144.

WHAT'S COOKING
with
Marie & Suzie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

Meat Loaf Pie

By MARIE

If you like meatloaf, you will enjoy making today's recipe for meatloaf pie. It is topped with fluffy mashed potatoes and looks almost too good to eat.

I used ground beef, but turkey or any combination of meats will do.

1 pound ground beef
2 slices soft bread, torn into pieces
2/3 cup milk
1 egg slightly beaten
1/4 cup chopped onion
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
Salt and pepper
3-4 potatoes (cooked and whipped)
1/2 cups shredded sharp cheddar cheese

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Mix the ground beef, bread, milk, egg and onion, Worcestershire sauce and salt and pepper. Spread mixture evenly in a 9-inch pie plate. Bake for 35-40 minutes.

Pile the whipped potatoes over the meat loaf as for a meringue on a pie. Sprinkle the cheese over the potatoes. Bake 3-4 minutes or until cheese melts.

Brown Rice Pumpkin Risotto

By SUZIE

Pumpkin is a very versatile and delicious vegetable loaded with vitamins, minerals, and fiber. It keeps you full and adds lovely flavor to many foods, like muffins, cookies, breads, casseroles, and even risotto.

Risotto is traditionally made with a rice called "Arborio" which gives the dish its "bite" and creaminess. But using brown rice instead is a healthier choice, since it is a whole grain. You can substitute white grape juice with a splash of lemon if you do not have wine handy, or do not normally cook with wines.

You can roast the pumpkin yourself, or just buy canned pumpkin. This will also make an easy dish to make for company as a side dish. Enjoy!

BROWN RICE PUMPKIN RISOTTO

1 tablespoon extra-virgin olive oil
1 tablespoon pasture butter
4 cloves garlic, minced
2 shallots, minced
1 1/2 cups short grain brown rice (I use Lundbergs)
1/2 cup dry white wine (or white grape juice with a splash of lemon)
2 1/2 cups chicken broth
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon
1 3/4 cups pureed cooked pumpkin, or
1 15-ounce can canned pumpkin
Sea salt and pepper to taste

1 tablespoon chopped fresh sage leaves, plus whole leaves for garnish
½ cup Pecorino Romano cheese

1. Heat oil and butter in a large saucepan over medium heat. Add garlic and shallot and cook, stirring often until softened, 1 to 3 minutes. Stir in rice and cook, stirring until the rice grains start to get translucent in spots, about 2 minutes.

2. Stir in wine (or juice and lemon) and cook, stirring often until the wine has mostly evaporated, 2 to 3 minutes. Stir in broth, salt and pepper, increase heat to high and bring to a boil, stirring occasionally. Cover, reduce heat to low and simmer undisturbed until most of the liquid has been absorbed, 30 to 35 minutes.

3. Stir in pumpkin, sage, nutmeg and cinnamon, return to a simmer, and cook, stirring often until the mixture is thickened and the rice is tender, 10 to 15 minutes. Remove from heat, stir Romano cheese, cover and let sit 5 minutes off the heat to thicken further. Serve sprinkled with more cheese, if desired and garnish with sage leaves. (Adding some chopped bacon on the top as a garnish makes it extra yummy or you can toast some seasoned pumpkin seeds and throw those on for crunch as well.)

HO-HO-HUM! Beating The Holiday Blues

A Message From The Quincy Health Department

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

As we leave behind another Thanksgiving, we embark on a five-week period typically referred to as "the holidays."

'Tis the season to be jolly! Holiday cheer abounds. Everyone is happy at holiday time — right?

We're supposed to look forward to the holidays and hope that they will be a time of happiness, friendliness, fellowship, and harmony. Yet often our anticipation and enthusiasm turns into feelings of sadness, commonly called holiday blues.

Sadness is a truly personal feeling. What makes one person feel sad may not affect another person. Part of what happens in the holiday season, in terms of mood changes and anxiety, may occur because of the stressfulness of holiday events.

Typical sources of holiday sadness include stress, fatigue, unrealistic expectations, financial stress, overcommercialization of the holiday and the inability to be with one's family and friends.

The environment can also have a profound effect on wintertime sadness. Studies show even nonhuman animals react to the changing season with changes in mood and behavior. People change behaviors, as well, when there is less sunlight.

Most people find they eat and sleep marginally more in wintertime and dislike the dark mornings and shorter days. For some, however, other symptoms are severe enough to disrupt their lives and cause substantial distress. Sadness or depression at holiday time can be a reaction to the stresses and demands of the season.

RUTH JONES

In other cases, people may feel depressed around the winter holidays due to a condition known as seasonal affective disorder (SAD), sometimes referred to as seasonal depression. This is a type of depression that tends to occur (and recur) as the days grow shorter in the fall and winter. It is believed that affected people react to the decreasing amounts of sunlight and the colder temperatures as the fall and winter progress, resulting in feelings of depression.

Although this disorder usually occurs in the fall and winter, there are those who suffer from this condition during the summer instead of, or in addition to, during the fall or winter.

Symptoms of the holiday blues can vary, but may include: headaches, excessive drinking, overeating and insomnia. A simple history and physical exam may be all that is needed to diagnose a case of the holiday blues. Your health-care professional may perform lab tests or other tests to rule out any medical conditions that may be causing your symptoms. Likewise, a full history of your symptoms is likely to provide clues that can help distinguish a mild case of the holiday blues from SAD or a more serious and chronic depressive disorder.

For uncomplicated holiday blues, improvement may be found by finding ways to reduce the stresses associated with the holiday, either by limiting commitments and outside activities, making arrangements to share family responsibilities such as gift shopping and meal preparation, agreeing upon financial limits for purchases, or taking extra time to rest and rejuvenate. Counseling or support groups are another way to relieve some of the burdens of holiday stress or sadness.

In addition, regular exposure to light that is bright, particularly fluorescent lights, significantly improves depression in people with SAD during the fall and winter. If you find yourself feeling blue, be sure to get at least 20 minutes of sunlight each day. This isn't always easy to do when winter weather hits, but do your best. And don't forget to exercise for that natural release of mood elevating endorphins. Both sunlight and exercise help to fight any chemical causes for your holiday blues.

Visiting other areas of the world that are characterized by more bright light (such as the Caribbean) can also improve the symptoms of SAD. Antidepressant medications, particularly serotonin selective reuptake inhibitor (SSRI) medications, can also be an effective treatment for seasonal affective disorder.

To help prevent the onset of holiday blues make realistic expectations for the holiday season. Pace yourself and do not take on more responsibilities than you can handle, or let others share the responsibilities of holiday tasks.

Make a list and prioritize the important activities, this can help make holiday tasks more manageable. Be realistic about what you can and cannot do. Do not put all your energy into just one day (for example, Christmas Day, New Year's Eve). The holiday cheer can be spread from one holiday event to the next.

Live "in the moment" and enjoy the present. Don't set yourself up for disappointment and sadness by comparing today with the "good old days" of the past.

If you are lonely, try volunteering some of your time to help others, It's hard to feel down while you are busy helping someone else. Find holiday activities that are free, such as looking at holiday decorations, going window shopping without buying, and watching the winter weather.

Limit your consumption of alcohol, since excessive drinking will only increase your feelings of depression. Try something new or celebrate the holidays in a new way. Spend time with supportive and caring people.

Reach out and make new friends. Make time to contact a long lost friend or relative and spread some holiday cheer.

Keep track of your holiday spending; overspending can lead to depression when the bills arrive after the holidays are over. Extra bills with little budget to pay them can lead to further stress and anxiety. Make time for yourself!

Now here's the most important thing you can do to beat those blues: No matter what is happening in your life, think of the blessings you do have. Taking stock of all of the positives in your life — right here and now — can go a long way toward ending your "bah humbug" mood.

If you think about what's really important like love, sharing, and togetherness, you begin to realize that the holiday is only one day out 365 that you have to spread peace, love and good will.

'The Same Heart' At Broad Meadows School

Film Screening Highlights Human Rights Day Dec. 10

Filmmaker Len Morris will screen his latest human rights documentary at Broad Meadows Middle School Thursday, Dec. 10 at 6:30 p.m.

This film features experts from Nobel Laureates to the grassroots' young activists of Quincy High and Broad Meadows Middle Schools.

The film, entitled "The Same Heart," documents the impacts of inequality on children around the world, while proposing a practical solution for raising the funds to meet their needs. It is narrated by journalist/activist, Charlayne Hunter-Gault.

Filmed in 11 countries including the U.S., "The Same Heart" features a global cast that includes Nobel Peace Laureates Archbishop Desmond Tutu, Kailash Satyarthi, Shirin Ebadi, Wangari Maathai, Mairead Maguire and Nobel economists Joseph Stiglitz and Paul Krugman along with ethicist Peter Singer and economist Dean Baker. Also featured in the film is the role local youth are playing to their campaign to end poverty and child labor.

Students from Quincy's Broad Meadows Middle School and Vermont's Thetford Acdemy are highlighted as is their ongoing global service learning project "Operation Day's Work-USA."

They join their voices with community activists and children from Kenya to Baltimore - part of a growing movement that puts the needs of children at the center of the world economy. By endorsing a global financial transactions tax, funds could be generated every year to save the lives of the over six million children who die each year from preventable causes, restoring their lives, educations and futures.

Partnering with Media Voices is the Harlem, New York-based record label, Motema Music, whose talented artists have provided a pro bono global soundtrack from Mali to Morocco to New Orleans, New York and beyond, enriching the emotional power of the film.

The Same Heart is the third film in a trilogy on children's human rights produced by Martha's Vineyard-based Galen Films, the production team behind Stolen Childhoods (2005), the first global survey of child labor, and Rescuing Emmanuel (2009), a deeply felt examination of the life and struggles of a Kenyan street boy.

The N.Y. Times described Stolen Childhoods as "harrowing but hopeful", CNN called it "a testament to the determination of the filmmakers" and The Asian reporter said it was "a film with the power to save millions of lives."

In 2012, Len Morris received the Iqbal Masih Award from The U.S. Department of Labor for his work to end child labor. He is the recipient of the Walter Cronkite Award and Images and Voices of Hope Award. Len and Georgia's films have aired on HBO, TNT, AMC, PBS, ABC and NBC and have been released theatrically, translated into multiple languages, broadcast around the world and honored with numerous industry awards and an Independent Filmmaker Award from the American Film Institute.

NQ Restaurant's License Application On Hold

By SCOTT JACKSON

The restaurateur hoping to open an 81-seat hot pot restaurant in the former home of Fashion Quality Cleaners at 67 Billings Rd. in North Quincy will need to go before the zoning board before the license board considers granting an all alcohol license.

The Board of License Commissioners on Nov. 24 continued the hearing on the application by Chung Shing Wong for the liquor license for his proposed establishment, Top Pot Asian Cuisine Restaurant, until Jan. 19. He could appear before the Zoning Board of Appeals prior to that, on Jan. 12, so that board can review the parking situation.

Fashion Quality Cleaners had 13 parking spaces available, seven less than would be required for an 81-seat restaurant. Because of concerns about the parking situation raised by residents, including at a community meeting in September, the applicant commissioned a traffic study to determine how much parking would be available.

Jack Gillon, the former city traffic engineer who undertook the study on behalf of Wong, said the study area, which included both Billings Road and an adjacent lot on Vane Street, could accommodate all 20 spaces the restaurant would require under the zoning code.

"While parking in the area does have a high demand midday and again in the evening, there are more than sufficient spaces within an acceptable walking distance throughout the day," Gillon said. "Not only can seven spaces be found, enough open parking spaces are available in the study area to accommodate the entire demand of the restaurant and not just the incremental difference as determined by the proposed change in use."

After hearing the presentation from the applicant, including Gillon's traffic study, Jay Duca, the city's director of inspectional service and a member of license board, said the ZBA would need to issue a finding to approve the change of use before the license board could take a vote.

Jack Milgram, Wong's attorney, said he had spoken to Duca before applying for the liquor license. After that meeting, Milgram explained, he was under the impression he did not have to go before the ZBA because Duca would issue a finding on behalf of the zoning board. Duca has granted such findings for other area businesses in the past, Milgram stated.

"I'm not sure why my client's proposal should be treated differently than anything that's happened in the past over there," Milgram said. "It's my understanding that historically off street parking has been waived and a finding has been issued due to the fact that the Vane Street lot is there and that's been for other properties where the Vane Street lot is further away than my client's address, which immediately abuts the lot."

Duca said he told Milgram at the meeting he would base his decision on issuing a finding on behalf of the zoning board on feedback from the neighborhood.

"I think there is a controversy in respect to parking and whether the Vane Street parking lot can support all the different businesses and restaurants in the area," Duca said. "I'm not making a decision for the zoning board. I do think it's up to the zoning board to determine this proposal is more of a detriment or less of a detriment to the neighborhood. They're going to have to make that decision."

Milgram would later ask Duca if he would be comfortable approving a 52-seat restaurant – which would require same amount of parking spaces as the dry cleaners did – but Duca said he would not be comfortable doing so.

Duca said Milgram has enough time to make the agenda for the ZBA meeting scheduled for Jan. 12. Milgram said he planned to begin the ZBA application process as soon as Nov. 25, the day following the license board meeting.

City Clerk Joseph Shea, the chairman of the license board, said the liquor license Wong is seeking would not be granted to another establishment in the interim.

The license board on Nov. 24 approved a transfer of the all alcohol license held by the Granite Rail, which closed earlier this fall, to Kerry Delaney, who plans to open a new restaurant called 16C inside the same space at 16 Cottage Ave. in Quincy Center.

Delaney said she hopes to open the new, 78-seat restaurant by January. She said it would feature "really cool pizzas, salads, American cuisine," and be more of a restaurant than a bar.

The restaurant will initially only be open for dinner service – Delaney said lunch hours could be added in the future – with the kitchen closing at 10 p.m. Sunday through Thursday and 11 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays. Bar service would end around the same time, though 16C's license allows it to stay open until 1 a.m.

"This is exciting. Anything that happens in the square is exciting," Shea said. "We support it."

Jerry Mulvey, a retired Quincy schoolteacher, had owned the Granite Rail for more than 30 years.

"He was a great operator," Shea said. "He and his wife did a great job there."

Delaney previously owned Babycakes, a bakery at 163 Beale St. The bakery will remain open with Elyse O'Connell as the new owner after she was granted a common victualler license at the Nov. 24 meeting. O'Connell said she could change the name of the venue as soon as January.

Also approved at the Nov. 24 meeting was a transfer of the retail all alcohol license held by Brewers Corner Liquors to Vimal Patel. Patel will close Brewers Corner Liquors, located at 372 Granite St., and open Discount Liquors at 380 Granite St.

Additionally, a common victualler license was granted for a new Marylou's Coffee location at 22 Independence Ave., which was previously home to a CVS.

and was required to provide those services at the Whitwell Street facility through at least Dec. 31, 2015. The company could have closed the emergency department at the end of this year had it provided state regulators with sufficient evidence its services weren't used enough to justify it remaining open.

Coakley's settlement with Steward additionally required the company to provide several services in the city through Oct. 1, 2018. Among those requirements, Steward has to maintain primary care and specialty physician services; a patient transportation network linking the emergency department, doctors offices, Manet locations, and two Boston hospitals operated by Steward, Carney and St. Elizabeth's; continued community benefit programs and charity care; services to Medicare and Medicaid patients; services to emergency patients regardless of their ability to pay; and transition for employees of the hospital worth $16 million through re-employment, early retirement, severances, or other means.

Steward acquired Quincy Medical Center, which opened in 1890, in October 2011. Under terms of an agreement reached with Coakley at the time, Steward was required to keep the hospital open for 10 years, though the company could have closed the facility in as few as six-and-a-half years if it lost money for two consecutive years and provided notice to state regulators at least 18 months in advance.

Steward is a subsidiary of Cerberus Capital Management, a private investment firm that manages more than $25 billion in assets and whose other holdings include Albertsons and formerly Chrysler. Steward was founded in 2010 after its parent company bought out the Caritas hospital system. The company operates nine hospitals in Massachusetts.

Fore River Field Improvements

By SCOTT JACKSON

The first phase of improvements to Fore River Field in Quincy Point are set to begin next spring with the construction of a standalone bathroom facility and new baseball diamond.

The 7.2-acre field, located between Beechwood and Harrison Streets and Nevada Road, is home to baseball diamond, a softball diamond, a playground, a tennis court, a basketball court and street hockey court. The city has developed plans to make improvements to the facility and the adjacent park on Mound Street, Park Department Executive Director Chris Cassani said Tuesday.

The first phase of those improvements, set to begin next spring, includes the building of a standalone bathroom facility between Fore River Field and the Mound Street field. The bathroom facility will be large enough to accommodate users of both parks.

The first phase also includes the construction of a new baseball diamond on the Harrison Street side of Fore River Field, which will replace the baseball diamond currently located at the corner of the park near where Beechwood Street and Nevada Road meet. The relocation of the baseball diamond is being done to accommodate residents living near that diamond who have complained about foul balls, Cassani said; the new diamond on Harrison Street will have a backstop and fencing to prevent the problem from reoccurring on that side of the field.

Cassani said the first phase of work would be paid for using $243,000 in community preservation funds. Rep. Ron Mariano, a Quincy Point Democrat and the majority leader in the Mass. House of Representatives, has pledged additional funding for the project.

The master plan for the park also calls for the elimination of the softball diamond, which is located at the corner of the park where Beechwood Street meets Follett Street. New playground equipment will also be installed to replace the aging equipment in the park and the fenced-in area that is home to the basketball, tennis and street hockey courts will be rebuilt, potentially closer to Beechwood Street.

Recreational space for activities popular among senior citizens, such as bocce or pickleball, will also be added near the Fore River Clubhouse.

"There no dedicated space for senior programing in any park," Cassaini said. We thought this is a great opportunity with the clubhouse being there."

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Saturday, November 21, 2015, at approximately 11:53 a.m., Officer Michael Eddy was dispatched to the Lincoln Hancock School parking lot for a suspicious incident.

Upon arrival, the Officer met with the male victim and his friend, who was a witness. The victim said he was delivering food at the Lincoln Hancock School and left his car trunk open with the doors closed. When he returned to his car with the witness, he observed that his trunk was now closed and someone was sitting in his vehicle. The victim opened the car door and grabbed the male suspect by the collar, asking him sarcastically if he needed help. The suspect was then assisted out of the vehicle. The witness immediately recognized the suspect because he used to work in loss prevention at TJ Maxx and said he had numerous encounters with the suspect. The suspect extended his hand, gave the victim 50 cents and said, "This is all I took." The suspect then walked around to the front of the car and proceeded to leave the area pushing a stroller with a child in it!

As Officer Kristen Bowes checked the area, QPD Communications located a nearby address for the suspect, which led the Officers to Nightingale Avenue. Officers Bowes and Eddy responded there with Officer John O'Donnell. Officer Eddy knocked on the door and a female answered. When asked if the suspect was there, the female said, "I just kicked him out a few minutes ago." She confirmed that he did have his son with him but left him here at the apartment and left. Another woman in the apartment came forward and said that she was the child's mother and has full custody. She added that they were visiting when the suspect said he wanted to take the child for a walk. A brief examination of the child showed that he appeared well cared for as he smiled and waved at the Officer.

Moments later, Officer O'Donnell located the suspect outside the apartment building. Officer Eddy walked outside and gave the suspect his Miranda Warnings. The suspect waived his rights and said that he was walking by Lincoln Hancock when he noticed a car with all of its doors open in the lot. He thought it was abandoned. Unbelievably, the suspect said he lost his phone recently and wanted to check if his phone might somehow be inside the vehicle. When asked how this could possibly happen, the suspect did not answer. He said he entered the vehicle and stole two quarters from the console. He added that the owner came over and grabbed him by the collar. The suspect said he apologized and returned the fifty cents. The suspect said he recognized the other male from loss prevention and thought the ordeal was over so he left.

LT. DAN MINTON

Officer Eddy placed the suspect in handcuffs. The suspect asked Officer Eddy if the handcuffs were double locked and the Officer told him they were. The suspect responded, "Good, because I was taught you should always do that!" Officer O'Donnell transported the suspect, a 27 year old Quincy resident, to the station and charged him with, "Breaking & Entering a Motor Vehicle with Intent to Commit a Felony." Nice Work!

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE. . . . On Saturday, November 21, 2015, at approximately 10:20 p.m., Officer Colleen Paccioretti was dispatched to a disorder call on Des Moines Road.

Upon arrival, the Officer spotted a naked male running around in the road and sidewalk. As the Officer got closer to the apartment building, she witnessed the naked male punching and kicking another male, who was clothed. Officer Paccioretti emerged from her cruiser and grabbed the naked man by the arm as he was about to strike the victim again. The suspect, reeking of alcohol and unsteady on his feet, remained verbally agitated but stopped his assault.

After separating the combatants, the Officer learned from the victim that they were celebrating the naked man's birthday when he became intoxicated and started to fight him. The victim said he was punched a few times and then kicked in the face with the suspect's bare foot. The victim added that he tried to keep the naked suspect from going outside the house by blocking the door, so the suspect went out the window of their first floor apartment. When the victim went outside to bring the suspect in, the assault began. Officer William O'Neil arrived on scene and assisted in the arrest of the suspect, a 24 year old Quincy resident, charging him with "Domestic Assault and Battery and Open and Gross Lewdness." Officer W. O'Neil transported the suspect to the station to be booked. He was given clothes and got dressed at the station. Nice Work!

INTERNET SHOPPING TIPS: With the upcoming holiday shopping and tempting deals that promise unbelievable savings, there are some safeguards that you should take to protect your personal information and money. If you find a deal that looks enticing, Know the seller and the item. Put the company or product name in a search engine, along with "review," "complaint," or "scam" following the product name. Read the reviews. Be sure you can contact the seller if you have a dispute.

Avoid clicking links in emails. Scammers know it's a hectic season of shopping and people can get caught up in the excitement. Their phishing scams are after your money or personal information. If an unexpected email promises incredible online deals, don't click on those embedded links. Check out the company first by confirming the web address by typing it in yourself.

Pay by credit card. Credit cards give you extra protections – like the right to dispute charges and temporarily withhold payment during an investigation. Whatever the deal might be, never mail cash or wire money to online sellers. If a company insists you only pay with a gift card, it's probably a scam.

Ensure happy returns. What are the site's return or exchange policies? Is there a re-stocking fee? Is there a time limit? If it is a large item, how much will it cost to return it? Inquire directly if there are any hidden or additional fees. It is always a good idea to get the name of the employee who you communicate with.

Have a safe checkout. Look for a URL that starts with https. (The 's' stands for secure). If there's no 's,' if you have doubts, or if you're asked to email payment info, leave the site.

Keep records. Print or save records of online transactions until you get the goods. Keep the product description and price, receipt, return policy, and any emails related to your purchase on file.

Ask Barbara Graceffa: 'Secretary Of The Interior'

Recently divorced, I'd like to make my extra-large bedroom more romantic in style - a look my husband never favored. Where do I start? Marlene

Begin with a pastel paint color or floral or damask patterned wallpaper (or even just wallpaper behind the head of the bed as a focal wall as long as it is the wall opposite the entrance to the room). To enhance the romantic mood, purchase a four-poster bed (maybe with a canopy) and add skirted bedside tables with small- to medium-sized chandeliers hanging over each table. Then add loads of pillows of needlepoint and other luxurious fabrics (many guys hate excessive pillows, am I right?) Add simple lace curtains or lavish multilayered window treatments with nice details like cording or fringe.

If your room is truly extra-large, add an electric or gas fireplace and an easy chair, ottoman, and floor lamp. Add art and accessories throughout the room to complement your romantic style.

Have you ever had a client who reglazed a bathtub? I'm skeptical but trust your opinion. Christine

Yes, in fact, my favorite "pro bono" clients – my parents – have reglazed their tub! They had their 1960s pink tub refinished years ago and the bright white shiny finish looks as good today as the day it was installed.

If you decide to reglaze, go ahead and add some grab bars, too, because the only drawback is that you cannot put down a rubber tub mat or other such anti-slip products. (My parents put a towel on the tub floor for extra "traction.")

BARBARA GRACEFFA

I see a lot of dining sets these days which include a bench instead of more chairs. What is your view on this trend? Michelle

If you have a casual or country style and kids or teens would be using the bench, I see no problem, especially since you can seat an extra person or two on a bench. Otherwise, in my opinion, an adult would prefer a comfortable chair with a back on it.

Do you have a decorating problem needing a professional solution? Send your questions to Secretary of the Interior at barbara@sec-interior.com.

Registry Of Deeds Social Media Available

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reminds consumers about the various social media applications made available to them through the Registry.

"Our mission here at the Registry of Deeds is to make important information readily available on a 24/7 basis to all consumers. After all, just because our doors close at the end of the business day doesn't mean the Registry has to stop working," O'Donnell said.

"Our website www.norfolkdeeds.org is a valuable resource to review scanned images of up to 5 million land documents dating back to 1793, as well as to learn about the latest consumer protection programs."

Other forms of social media utilized by the Registry of Deeds include Facebook, facebook.com/NorfolkDeeds, and Twitter, twitter.com/NorfolkDeeds.

The Registry has also filmed multiple public service announcements (PSA's) which are available on the Registry's website and Youtube. The PSA's have touched on a variety of issues such as deed scams - where a consumer pays an outrageous cost to a direct mail solicitor for a copy of their deed as compared to purchasing it at the Registry for a few dollars - and also a video on foreclosure assistance for residents who have received a Notice of Foreclose Mortgage from a lender. Videos highlighting the Registry's various philanthropic initiatives, such as its Annual Holiday Food Drive or its Suits for Success program, which helps people who are attempting to re-enter the workforce, can also be viewed.

Pack 42 Cub Scouts Spread Pre-Holiday Cheer

The Cub Scouts of Quincy Pack 42 have been busy with pre-holiday community service, learning about how they can assist both furry friends and local families in need.

Scouts recently spent a fun-filled Saturday at the Quincy Animal Shelter, where they learned about how the volunteer staff assists local animals, and provided some help to the shelter themselves. The scouts received a tour of the kennels from shelter Canine Trainer Jean Ellard, who also answered questions about how dogs and cats come to be at the shelter, and the ways that local families can adopt them. Cub Scout Tigers, Wolves, Bears, and Webelos, along with their leaders and families, then presented much needed supplies to be donated to the shelter, including two doghouses the scouts had recently built. The scouts built the doghouses at the home of scout dad David Francoeur, who also provided his expertise, tools, and materials.

Pack 42 Cub Scouts also participated in the Boy Scouts of America "Scouting for Food" campaign in early November. Following the animal shelter tour, scouts consolidated the food donations they had gathered in their neighborhoods. Cubmaster Kevin Gillespie delivered nearly 500 pounds of food to the Quincy Crisis Center in advance of the holiday season.

For more information on how to help local families and animals in need, e contact the Quincy Crisis Center, www.sangercenter.org, and the Quincy Animal Shelter, www.quincyanimalshelter.org.

'Heart To Heart' Tree At United Methodist

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, invites the public to participate in its annual "Heart to Heart" tree.

The tree features a spun glass heart ornament that can be purchased with a small donation.

"Originally the heart ornaments were meant to be given to people who are experiencing a difficult holiday season as a way of letting them know someone cares," said Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, church pastor, who invented the concept of the Heart to Heart tree.

The idea, however, grew from her original concept.

"Although most of the hearts are still given to people who are hurting, some individuals have given them to people who have made a difference in their lives, such as mentors, friends, family members, and neighbors," Rev. Dr. Jarek-Glidden said. "It's a way of expressing feelings, a way of saying 'thank you' as well as 'I care.'"

The public is welcome to participate in the Heart to Heart Tree. The tree can be found on the second floor of the church outside the Sanctuary through Dec. 24. A donation of $2 per heart ornament is requested.

For more information on the Heart to Heart Tree or Quincy Community United Methodist Church, call 617-773-3319.

The church is handicapped accessible at the front doors nearest the flagpole.

'Share The Warmth' Drive Benefits Salvation Army

Colonial Federal Collecting Hats, Gloves, Socks

Colonial Federal Savings Bank is sponsoring a "Share The Warmth" drive to collect new hats, gloves and socks for pre-holiday donation to the Salvation Army.

"As a neighborhood bank, we're always looking for ways to help people in the community," said Susan Shea, Colonial Federal Treasurer and Chief Operating Officer. "This seemed like a fun, easy way for people to help others - something that would make both the givers and the recipients happy."

Donation boxes are available now in the Colonial Federal offices in Quincy, Weymouth and Holbrook. Practical and/or fashionable warm, new hats, gloves and socks are needed for men, women and children. Cash donations are also welcome.

For more information or to arrange to make a donation, call Jaime or Kerry at Colonial Federal Savings Bank, 617-471-0750.

Quincy Wins 4th Straight City Football Crown

Presidents 33 - Red Raiders 20

By BILL GRIFFIN

Let us build the ideal running back.

We begin with speed. We want sprinter's speed. We want him to turn missed tackles not into eight-yard gains, but into touchdowns.

Next, we will add power. If there is no hole on third-and-two, we want him to make one. If tacklers stand ready at the goal line, we want him to run over them.

Then we add endurance. We want to give him the ball 35 times a game. If opponents put eight or nine men in the box, we want him shrug and ask for 10 more carries. He must never get hurt. He must show up each game and want the ball. We want him to know his of-renewal of the Quincy vs. North Quincy city rivalry, Handsom-Fields was not being compared to players on the field, but to history. Handsom-Fields set the Thanksgiving Day record for rushing with 296 yards on 33 carries and scored four touchdowns to boost Quincy to its fourth straight win over North with a 33-20 decision before an overflow crowd at Veterans Stadium.

He started at the very beginning. It would be his day. On the second play from scrimmage, he cut off wipeout blocks from Bernie VanTassell and Mike Munroe and bolted 44 yards for a touchdown. Before the first quarter was finished, he scored on a 34-yard shot and Quincy (4-7) was on its way to its 14th win in the last 17 years on Thanksgiving.

"I knew from the blocking and the way I felt after those first two plays that it would be a Day," smiled Handsom-Fields. "I was nervous. I didn't sleep the night before the game. It was emotional in the locker room before the game. We're seniors. We hadn't lost on Thanksgiving and we wanted to finish with a win."

In the second half when North (1-10) fought back and made it a game, he scored on runs of 28 and three yards. With North within, 26-13, he flew through the middle on a perfect draw play on third-and-18 for 25 yards. North lined up 11 men within five yards of the line of scrimmage for most of the game. North knew where the ball was going. Quincy knew where it was going. Everyone who spilled over the fences surrounding the field knew. It made no difference. It was his day.

"That draw play killed us," said North coach Mark Nutley. "We missed tackles. When you miss tackles against Jahvae, the ball usually ends up in the end zone."

He finished strong with 87 yards in the fourth period. He rushed for 510 yards in three Thanksgiving Day games. If that isn't a record, it should be. He ran for 1,w463 yards and 12 touchdowns this season and for well over 3,000 yards in his career. Billy Reardon has coached great backs at Quincy, great backs like Reggie Cesar, Jalen Green, and now, Handsom-Fields. He won't rank them, but if Handsom-Fields is not at the top of the list, he certainly belongs in the conversation.

"They all had different styles," said Reardon. "What they had in common is you could build everything around them. It didn't matter how many men the defense had in the box. They could all still run the ball, the offense could always go through them."

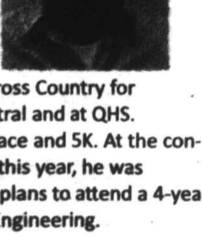
STUDENT ATHLETES OF THE MONTH

Peter Saccoach

Cross Country - Quincy H.S.

"Peter really dedicated himself this offseason and during the regular season to cross country. As a result, he showed tremendous improvement, setting some personal records (PRs) and earning a spot on the Patriot League All-Star team."

-Geoff Hennessy



Peter's selection is not only a testament to his athletic abilities and his hard work in the classroom, but it also stems from his reputation as a model citizen at Quincy High School. Peter currently has a 3.2 GPA while participating in Cross Country, Basketball, Track and Baseball during his 4 years at Quincy HS. He has participated in Cross Country for the past 7 years as a student at Central and at QHS. He set 2 PRs this year in a 2.5 mile race and 5K. At the conclusion of his Cross Country season this year, he was named a Patriot League All-Star. He plans to attend a 4-year college with intentions to major in Engineering.

Molly Donahue

"Molly is a poster child for what a high school student athlete should be. She combines outstanding athletic achievements with athletic prowess. To coin a baseball phrase, "she is a home run" when it comes to student athletes I have had the pleasure of coaching."

-Paul Bregoli

Molly is a four year starter on the varsity girls' soccer team at North. This season she scored 8 goals with 3 assists. Her career totals include 16 goals and 14 assists. quarterback sneak put Quincy up 20-0 at intermission, North played a second half of toughness, pride, and effort. They outscored Quincy, 20-13 and out-gained the Presidents, 206-105. Senior tailback Aidan Brown (126 yards, 21 carries) was a fitting symbol for his team. He played hard until the final second of his varsity career, leaping over two defenders for an acrobatic touchdown catch with 18 seconds left in the game.

"Give North all the credit. They never quit," Reardon said. "They kept coming at us. Aidan Brown ran well all day and that was a great touchdown catch."

Joey Fallon (six completions, 69 yards) hit Tom Whooley for a nine-yard TD. Liam O'Connor scored on a 15-yard run around right end. Conor Pound, Derek Huynh, and Jack Ryder cleared out holes. North was within 20-7 and 26-13, but whenever the Red Raiders drew close, there was Handsom-Fields and his offensive line. They were simply too good.

"I was proud of the way we played in the second half. You just can't spot a good team like Quincy 20 points," said Nutley.

The offensive line of tight end Mike McNelly, tackles Jhonata Sousa and Van Tassell, guards Isaiah Uzamere and Munroe, and center Decalan Mayo dominated the game and allowed Handsom-Fields to have his day in the sun. Only Munroe returned to start the sea-

RUNNING NECK AND NECK

If you suffer from neck pain, you might want to read a report from The Annals of Internal Medicine before you reach for the pain pills. According to the study, when 272 patients suffering from acute and subacute neck pain were provided with either medication, exercise with the advice of a health practitioner, or chiropractic care, those who received chiropractic treatment fared best. After 12 weeks of treatment, those in the exercise and chiropractic groups experienced the most pain reduction. Compared to the medication group, both exercise and chiropractic treatment more than doubled the likelihood that participants experienced complete relief of their pain. Chiropractic patients realized benefits that lasted for at least a year, providing proof of chiropractic's long-term benefit.

As today's column suggests, chiropractic is the safest approach available for relief from neck pain, back pain, headaches, and other health complaints. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we have many years of experience to ensure that each adjustment is precisely delivered. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment and let us help you. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort.

P.S. The effectiveness of exercise and chiropractic in treating neck pain demonstrates the wisdom in addressing the cause(s) of pain instead of just masking the symptoms with drugs.

son, but this group worked and grew into a dominating unit. If the season began tomorrow and Handsom-Fields could run behind the line as it played in the last five games, watch out.

"The reason I could cut back and accelerate from side to side was there were holes all along the line. We didn't just run right or left. We ran to both sides and whichever way I cut, there was a hole. They were just great," said Handsom-Fields.

When it was over, when Reardon held the gold trophy for the fourth straight year, he reflected on the season. It had not always been a smooth road. There were three losses which were decided in the final minute. There were big losses to Hingham and Marshfield. There were key injuries on defense. He thought back to what he said after the first game against Braintree. He said he had a team which would always compete. He was correct.

"That definitely makes it sweeter," he said. "The kids always bounced back, they always played hard. We came back from three close losses. We lost to Marshfield by 40 and came back to win our last three games. I couldn't be prouder of the effort the kids gave. They earned this."

Game Notes: Brown finished the season with 1,249 yards and eight touchdowns...Quincy's defense led by McNelly, Munroe and linebacker Garrett Cronin was terrific in the first half. They shut off the run and put constant pressure on the passer... Desmond, Handsom-Fields, Shorne Hawthorne, and Tyriq Simmons covered well in the secondary...Quincy hurt itself with 121 yards in penalties. Two were costly. One negated a Handsom-Fields' run to the North six. One wiped out a 32-yard interception return for a TD by Brian Nguyen. The interception stood, but the return was called back...It was a day for trick plays. Martin ran 25 yards off a fake punt to get North started in the second half... Desmond, as in quarterback Desmond, caught a 12-yard pass from Cronin who took a Handsom-Fields' hand-off on a reverse pass...On a kick-off return, Hawthorne faked a hand-off to Handsom-Fields and ran 38 yards to the North 43..."If you can't run that stuff on Thanksgiving, when can you run it?" asked Reardon...Dyreke Johnson had a 12-yard reception and played well on defense for Quincy...Cronin kicked three extra points for Quincy. Dara Griffin kicked a pair for North.

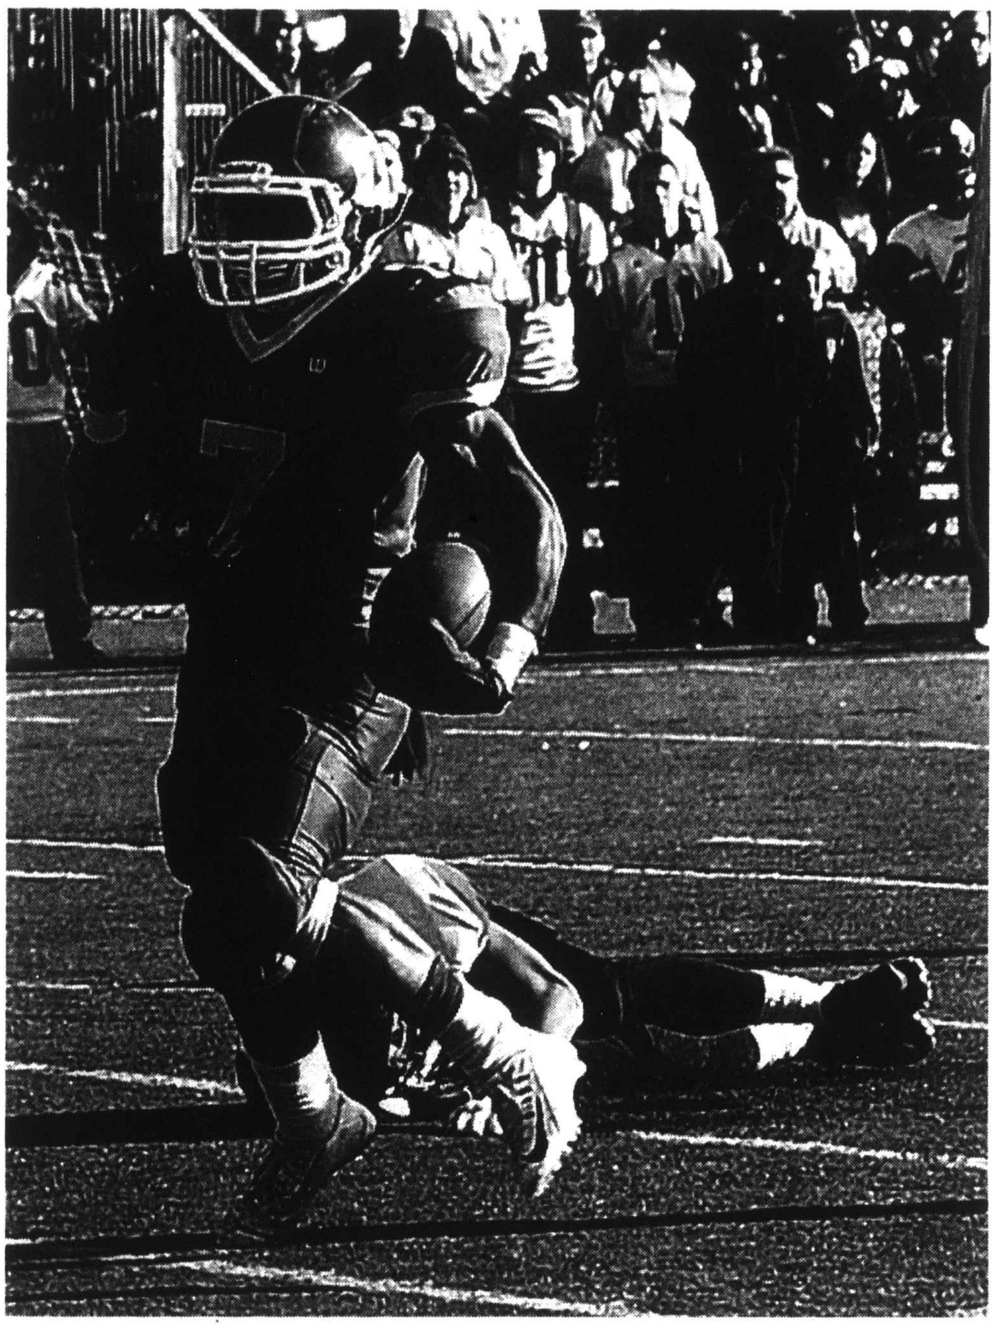
Quincy-North Quincy Thanksgiving Players Of The Game



Quincy Offense: JAHVAE HANDSOM-FIELDS – His signature game of 296 yards which broke the record for rushing on Thanksgiving and four touchdowns was more than a one-day statement. It surely ranks him as one of the best running backs in the history of the school. Five hundred and 10 yards in three Thanksgiving games and well over 3,000 yards rushing for his career makes a pretty strong argument. Who was better? More than numbers, there was the pleasure of watching a great running back work his craft for three years. There was the speed and power, but there was more. Handsom-Fields knew how to run, how to set up his blocks, how to turn a three-yard gain into a touchdown by accelerating at just the right instant. Great stuff.

North Quincy Offense
AIDAN BROWN:

He was a receiver and a running back in his time at North. He showed both skills on Thanksgiving, rushing for 126 yards and making a sensational catch for a 20-yard touchdown in the final minute of the game. That tells part of the story. The most important part is that he never stopped. There were no regrets, nothing left out on the field. Most players wouldn't have bothered to make the effort on that final catch. Brown did. North can always look back on the second half with pride. Brown was a big reason for that. He gained 101 of his yards in that second half. He did not go away quietly when things were tough. He should always remember that.

AIDAN BROWN

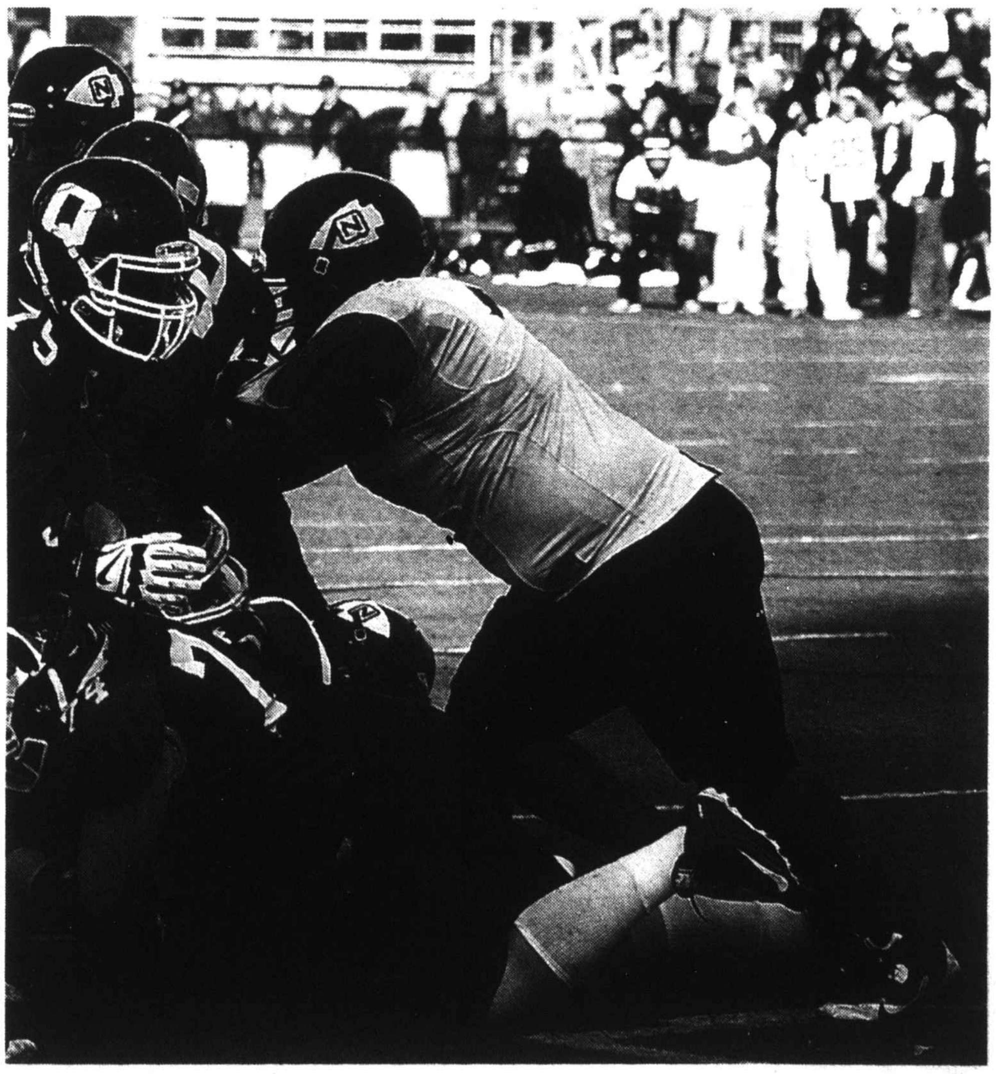
Quincy Defense: GARRETT CRONIN – This was a tough pick. Cronin, Mike Munroe and Mike McNelly spent the entire first half in the North Quincy backfield when the Presidents took control of the game with a 20-0 lead. Cronin was the most dominant, the quickest to the ball, the smartest with his reads, the most decisive with his hits. Toss in three extra points, a pass reception, a pass completion and Quincy's most versatile player richly deserves the selection. "He sees the play quickly. He is a big hitter. I can also play him in four different positions," said coach Billy Reardon.

Photo Courtesy J. Alexander Dolan



North Quincy Defense: DEREK HUYNH – The senior noseguard was North's best player up front. Despite contending with double-team blocking from Munroe and Declan Mayo, he clogged the middle well, especially in the second half when he was a tower in North's defense which limited Quincy's attack to just over 100 yards total offense. He forced numerous plays to the outside and like Brown, he gave his team a chance because he played hard until the final second of his varsity career. "Derek turned a lot plays outside. We just had trouble making the tackle when Jahvae bounced outside," said North coach Mark Nutley.

Best Friends Turn Rivals But Just For One Game

By BILL GRIFFIN

They do the things that best friends do.

They toss around a football, they eat, they play pickup two-handed touch at the park, they eat, they talk about their games, they eat, they offers words of advice, they eat, they tease each other in an easy, comfortable way, they eat, they are teammates and competitors, they eat, they go on vacation together. They, as the kids say, hang out and have fun. And they eat.

The best friends will also share a treasured memory. On Thanksgiving, Quincy's Cody Desmond and North Quincy's Joey Fallon, the best of friends, were the opposing quarterbacks for the 83rd renewal of the grand rivalry before a packed Veterans Stadium.

Desmond saved the game of his life for the biggest stage in Quincy's 33-20 victory. Fallon threw the ball well, tossing a pair of touchdown passes for North. It was the first start in their senior year for each of them on Thanksgiving, and the two friends did just fine.

"It was weird looking across the line of scrimmage and seeing him in a different uniform," said Desmond.

If it weren't for Jahvae Handsom-Fields' record-breaking performance, Desmond would have been the player of the game. He ran for a touchdown. He threw a pair of spot-on 12-yard lasers for first downs at the North 10 and the North 28. He caught a pass off a reverse for 12-yards and a third-down conversion to the North 22. His ball-handling was flawless and he carried out every fake on every running play.

He punted once for 31 yards. He lobbed six perfect pooch kickoffs high in the air to keep the ball away from Aidan Brown. He had a strip and fumble recovery inside the Quincy 25 less than a minute before halftime. He had three solo tackles in the open field at free safety. Not a bad final act at all.

"It feels wonderful. I've never started before on Turkey Day. This is my senior year and it was a great feeling going both ways," he said.

Fallon had six completions for 69 yards. He had 854 passing yards for the season. He ran for 30 yards and had TD throws of nine and 20 yards.

"Joey played well," said Desmond. "He picked up some big yards. That first TD he threw was to my man. I'm sure he'll remind me of that."

The friendship began with, and still, surely, includes food. They were both playing for the Manets as sixth-graders. They had not yet spoken to each other. Fallon approached Desmond and started the conversation and the friendship with a somewhat unusual opening line.

"The first thing he ever said to me was: Do you like tacos?" smiled Desmond. "I was a little surprised. But I like tacos. He does too, so we went for tacos. I think Conor Pound (North's two-way lineman) was there, and he might have gone too. We still like tacos. We still go for them all the time."

For the Manets, Desmond was the quarterback and Fallon was the receiver. They connected on and off the field.

"He threw me a few touchdown passes. It helps a receiver when the quarterback is his best friend," smiled Fallon.
